1983: A look at the news year in review

By Mike Berger

Cohasset historians will not forget 1983. It was not a dull year.

Month after month, new events and controversies flooded the media outlets.

Cohasset changed in spirit and leadership. What worked for years was questioned in 1983.

It was not a good year for good news. Residents will be asked Jan. 17 to spend more money for legal fees and unpaid bills, expenses not anticipated when voters went to the April town meeting.

Cohasset was hit by tragedy and strife. The year began with the investigation of a murder and tragically progressed to a body found on a beach, a Memorial Day shooting of a mother and a summer fire killing several small children.

Residents questioned the integrity of the Cohasset Historic District Commission; firefighters revolted against a new fire chief, the Planning Board went to court against the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Board of Health was overturned in its decision to fire popular Landfill Superviser Joe "Skinny" Laugelle and school administrators tried to give a quick but unsuccessfull heave-ho to the high school basketball coach.

Still, the town accomplished much during the year. A new five-member selectmen's board was established as was a new building inspector, police chief and town executive secretary.

Two town meetings re-established a mandate to fight the state and seek new alternative sewer plans. Cushing Plaza grew and more new stores were added, cable television inched its way to reality and a new Cohasset Chamber of Commerce was established.

Here is a month by month summary of page one headlines.

January

A vandalism spree continued as vandals cut bus wires. Later four youths were arrested for earlier smashing schools windows. Two young men were appointed key government personnel, Mark Lanza, executive secretary and Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

The School Committee began its fight for more money with the Advisory Committee.

Five joined the race for the new five-member selectmen board while the three-member board conducted police chief interviews.

February

Sgt. Richard Barrow and others wanted a "Strong Police Chief" and felt a town police chief search committee was still in effect.

Fleming Hardware was sold and while Cushing Plaza added a meat shop, selectmen rejected a video game license request for the plaza. The planning board deb-

Tasha has been missing since Thanksgiving

Coming back from the holidays, this letter from a Cohasset 14-year old girl and her family touched the heart.

"Dear Mariner: It would be deeply appreciated if you could put the description of "Tasha" in your newspaper. This last resort (hopefully a successful one) is hopefully going to be successful so it would be excellent if you could put it somewhere in the paper where everyone could see it.

"My family and I are anxious and will be very excited if this article is a success and Tasha is found. Again I will thank you. Sincerely yours, Karin Anglin, 7 Hill Street.

Tasha has been missing since Nov. 25. She is a three-year old German Shepard, husky, with a black body and white markings.

She was let out on a rainy storm day but was expected back since she always had returned and knew Cohasset very well, Karin said.

Karin called the dog officer and other area dog officers and also put in an ad in The Patriot Ledger.

Someone thought the dog was spotted Saturday morning Nov. 26 in Cohasset. Karin believes the severity of the rainstorm could have caused Tasha to

Who should be 'Person of the Year'?

Now that 1983 is history, who in town should be Cohasset's man or woman of the year?

Who has done or accomplished the most for the public good without fanfare or without much public recognition?

There are no requirements except the person should either be a resident or own a business in Cohasset.

Please send nominations and a brief reason for selection to the Mariner through Box 71, Cohasset, or the drop spots at Hennessey's News or Colonial Pharmacy.

The top three winners will be interviewed and photographed.

VoTech appointment

The South Shore Vo-Tech School Committee voted to appoint John Lucich part time microcomputer coordinator with a salary of $1,081. Lucich is a teacher at Vo-Tech. The position has been vacant for almost one year.

Joe Downey, Jr., Hanson representative to the committee, voted against the position being reinstated. "With an 11 percent increase in the budget (over last year), we can't keep looking at these things and saying it's only $1,081. It's a luxury," Downey said, referring to the position.

"We're robbing Peter to pay Paul," he said.

Enrollment drop

Ed Sheehan, Social Studies Dept. Chairman, told the School Committee recently there is anticipated an enrollment drop of 74 students next year and four sections of classes.

This will result in the loss of one teacher. No changes in curriculum are planned.

Godspell proceeds

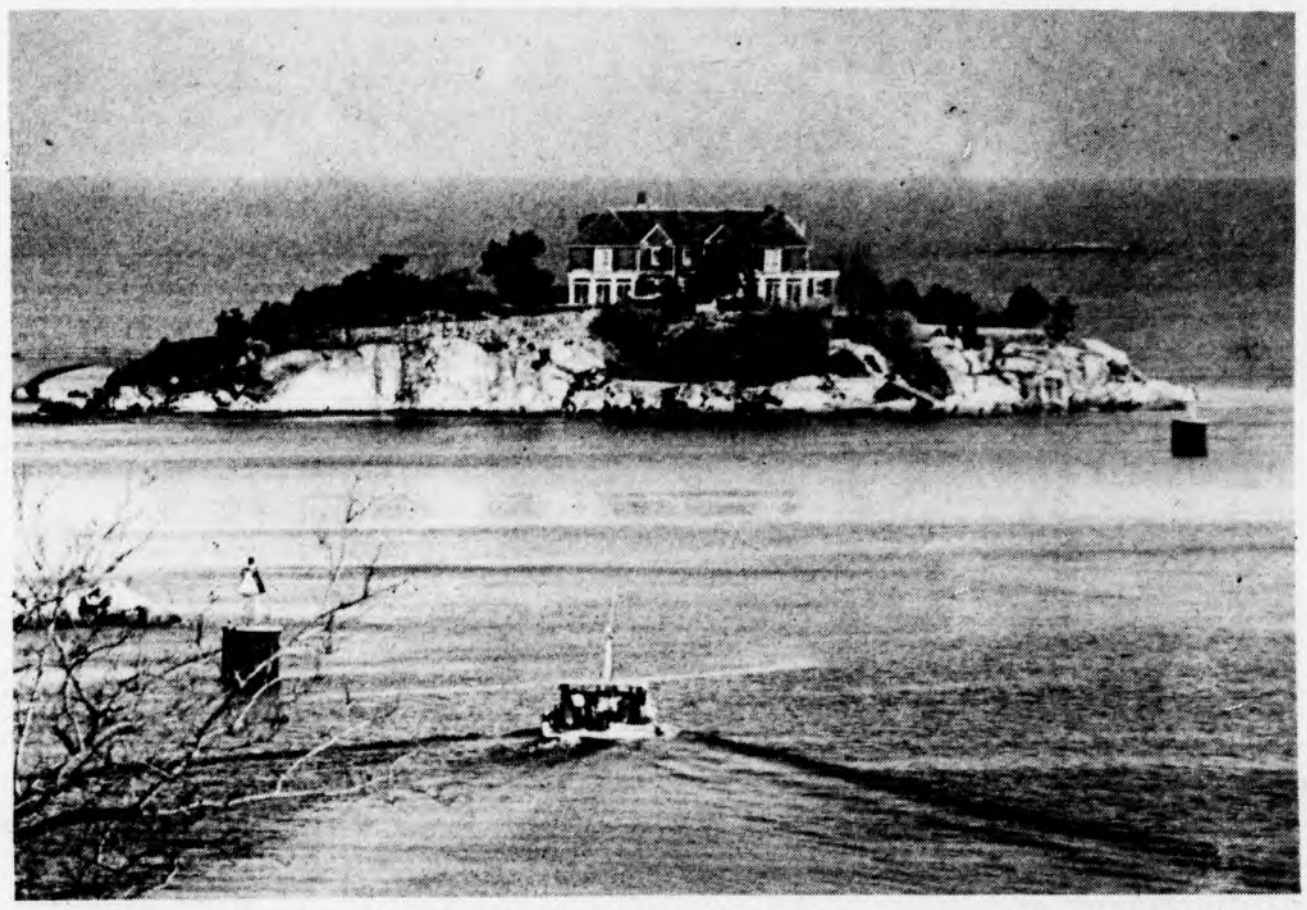
School Supt. Eugene Crowell told the School Committee recently the net proceeds of the recent CHS production of "Godspell" were $4,300. This means, he said, next year's production is guaranteed.

Regarding expenses, Crowell said $598 went to spots, $200 for lights and $800 for a class gift.

Personnel Board actions

The Personnel Committee recently approved a step raise for Building Inspector Bob Dennis.

In other actions the board acknowledged hiring a full time secretary to be used jointly by the Board of Health and the Sewer Commission, and approved a request by both boards that the starting rate of compensation be increased from S-3 min. to S-3 maximum. It was felt that this reflects the level of skill being brought to the department by the new employee.



The board also acknowledged the notice of Building Inspector-Zoning Officers re-appointment until June 30.

The board also acknowledged a letter dated Aug. 19 from Richard P. Barrows, Chairman of Cohasset Recreation Commission, requesting a re-classification for the Recreation Director effective July 1, 1984.

An updated job description questionnaire was included. The committee will evaluate and make recommendation for future action.

The board also acknowledged a letter sent to Board of Selectmen dated Oct. 5, from Dog Officer Richard Yocum, requesting a meeting with selectmen for the purpose of drafting a complete job description for this position.

Officer Yocum currently feels his duties are more of an Animal Control Officer than those of a Dog Officer, and would like his job title and responsibilities changed to reflect this expertise. He included proposals to be discussed by both Selectmen and Personnel Board.

School attendance policy

School Committee members reviewed the new junior-senior high school absence and tardiness policy recently and two board members feel the policies may unfairly punish some students.

School Committee Chairman Richard Conley said students have told him the system isn't fair across the board.

He added he felt it was enough for a parent to call or to write a note but doing both actions wasn't necessary.

Board member Joe Nedrow who originally didn't support the policy said motivating people through "deprivation and fear" isn't the right way to go.

Jr.-Senior High School Principal Dick Streeter said he has seen a decline of about a third in class cutting and absences but saw an increase in tardiness, especially for homeroom.

He added because of the number of calls coming in every day it was difficult to determine if a parent was calling in and preferred to retain the written note.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell suggested the committee give the system a few more weeks before making definite changes.

In support of the system, Vice-Chairman Jack Langmaid said it was important to "create responsible people who will be on time for work in later life."

Fire Dept. overtime

The Advisory Board voted recently to support an article on the special town meeting warrant to cover the projected cost of overtime in the Fire Dept. for the remainder of Fiscal Year 1983-84.

This recommendation is on the condition the amount is limited to not more than $40,000. Town Accountant Bill Signorelli projects $40,000 to be sufficient to cover overtime expenses for that time period.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley submitted a request to the advisory board which requested $50,000 to cover overtime expenses until March. When told Signorelli's estimate, Dooley said his past experience with Signorelli tells him to go along with his figure.

Dooley said the department over-spent its overtime budget because of vacations, injury leave, and suspensions. The contract requires a minimum of five firefighters working each shift, he said.

Overtime was necessary when a shift would have one man out on sick leave and another out on vacation, Dooley said. He pointed out the law requires two Emergency Medical Technicians to be on duty for each shift.

Boat price increase

The South Shore's solution to gracious commuting, The Gracious Lady, has increased ticket prices for the trip to Boston.

A one-way ticket is now $3.25, up from the original $3 tariff. And a week's book of tickets (10 rides) is now $30, up from $27.

Mass. Bay Commuter Lines, the Gracious Lady's owner, also recently marked the occasion of their 100,000th passenger since service began. Kathy Essex of Hull, a regular commuter, won a book of tickets and a bottle of champagne to mark the occasion.

Tasha has a dog license and collar and is cautious around other people. "She wouldn't go near strangers," Karin said.

Karin and her sister Kerri, 11 and her mother and father area very attached to the dog. Karin and her family have owned Tasha since she was six weeks old.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

The party's over and once the tree is down and the gifts tucked away, we can all settle down for a long winter's nap. But, speaking of parties, our Mariner crew gathered yet again for its annual holiday "do," hosted by David Cutler, our publisher and held this year at the home of Pat and Bill Raynor where candles glowed in each and every window of their home and logs blazed in fireplaces, while antique pine floors and beamed ceilings basked in their glow. As always, we gorged ourselves on the buffet where one of the most popular dishes is usually Nancy Wilson's casserole. By now, it's known as "Mariner Tetra," but to Nancy it will always be Carole Virtue's recipe, so to her it's

TETRA A LA VIRTUE

1. In a 13x9" pan, layer the bottom with just enough drained and buttered spaghetti to cover the bottom.
2. Liberally add a layer of cut up chicken or turkey.
3. Mix together:

2 cans cream of mushroom soup
3/4 c. milk
1/2 c. mayonnaise
4 T mustard (Dijon is best)
4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 c. grated cheddar cheese

Step #3 is your third layer and for layer 4, 1½ lb. sliced, fresh mushrooms.

5. Sprinkle about 1 c. parmesan cheese over above.
6. Sprinkle 3/4 c. grated cheddar cheese over top.

Bake in 350 degree oven for 1/2 to 3/4 hour. Let stand about 1/2 hour so cheese sets.

Thinking ahead to winter Sundays when friend husband is happily ensconced in his favorite chair watching sports on television, why not pick up the phone and invite a few friends over? Settle the men in a room apart (with TV, of course) and then they'll have no qualms about enjoying the game, knowing their wives are happily chatting and swapping recipes. These little goodies which caused a small sensation at last Fall's Cranberry Festival held by the Scituate Garden Club and sent to us by Claire O'Hara are called simply

SPINACH BALLS

2 boxes frozen chopped spinach
3 c. Pepperidge Farm Stuffing
1 or 2 large onions, chopped
6 eggs, well beaten
3/4 c. melted butter
1/2 c. parmesan cheese
1 tsp. pepper
1½ tsp. garlic salt
1/2 tsp. Thyme

Cook spinach. Drain and squeeze almost dry. Mix all ingredients into bite-size balls. Bake at 325 degrees for 15 min. on lightly greased sheet, or freeze unbaked and then bake for 20 min. when desired. Makes 75-100 balls.

For over a decade, this column has featured recipes from kitchens all over the South Shore — from men for whom cooking is a hobby, women who are into good old Yankee cooking, fishermen, dieters, natural food believers, chefs, caterers, nouvelle cuisine devotees and on and on. Like so many of us, Milly Carr can't read a paper or magazine without leaving a gaping hole where a good recipe has been featured and, luckily for us, when she has tried out her latest triumph on lucky husband or company, she sends it along to me. The latest batch of clippings she is sharing with us includes this one for

LEMON ANGEL BARS

1 box angel food cake mix
1 c. angel flake coconut
1 can (21 oz.) lemon pie filling
3 oz. cream cheese
2 T milk
2 c. powdered sugar
1 tsp. lemon extract

Mix cake mix with coconut. Add pie filling and stir together. Pour in greased 13x15" jelly roll pan. Bake 20 min. at 350 degrees. Cool. Beat together remaining ingredients and frost bars. Sprinkle with coconut

I guess it's only natural that after all the hustle and bustle of the holidays, we're only normal if we're feeling a little let-down. But now comes that time of year for catching up and filling up any free time with all those things we've been putting off until "after Christmas." All of which leads up to my reminder that this might be a good time to send along your favorite recipe to share with our readers.

ated the merits or demerits of establishing an adult entertainment zone while the Stoughton Book Store controversy swirled.

March

In March as per usual the CHS hockey team was noted for a big win in the state hockey tournament.

The health board debated sending the landfill operations to a private contractor while the state enticed the town with a $1.1 million state grant for a central sewer system.

A Jamaica Plain woman's body was found on the beach.

The Recreation Commission and selectmen debated the merits of beach guest permit fees and two women felt it was unfair for two women living in the same household to pay two separate beach sticker fees.

Residents had to remember license plate numbers for a new inspection and began lugging bottles to supermarkets for deposit returns.

Florence Stanford won the Lottery, Bingo and Megabucks in a week and a ramp was planned for the handicapped at Town Hall.

April

April was a busy month as Charlie DeSantis won big at Town Meeting for a mandate to fight the state on the central sewer plan. Later fellow Sewer Commission member Joseph Gwinn accepted the state grant without approval from two other commissioners. Town Counsel Henderson ruled the action illegal.

Selectman John DeBassio was the largest vote-getter and Mary Jane McArthur and Richard Conley were elected to lead selectmen and school committee respectively.

May

The selectmen's first major tussle was to appoint six full-time members to a maligned Cohasset Historic District Commission and then tackled the health board's decision to fire Skinny Laugelle .

Health Education Director Mike Gill planned a teen drinking forum; the Community Center weighed expansion and the Cohasset-Hull Sewer Commissions consider a sewer tie-in.

May ended with a heroic search for a missing nine-year old Cohasset boy found in Glastonbury Abbey but unhappily in the Beechwood Street shooting of Judith Stover who managed to stay alive.

June

The old Beechwood Fire Station was moved to Scituate. Channel 5 decided to picnic on Cohasset Common and condo construction noise on Holly Lane prompted a citizens committee to study a bylaw control.

The Cox Estate was sold to Yankee Oil and Gas and the state threatened to withhold water and sewer improvement grants without a low income housing policy.

New England Telephone cables were cut on two separate occasions by a Rte 3A contractor and residents and town departments were without service for several hours.

July

The School Committee reversed an administrative decision to terminate Ed Minelli, CHS basketball coach.

Trouble brewed in the Fire Dept. as Chief Martin Dooley criticized his men's work attitudes and the union did likewise to him with grievance after grievance for the next six months.

Resident Congressman Gerry Studds was headlines everywhere for acknowledging he was a homosexual who had a relationship with a Congressional page.

August

The School Committee accepted a new attendance-tardiness policy and projected revaluation figures meant no house value was to be under $50,000.

The town mourned for the Nardo family and the appeals board finally rejected an alcohol license for the South Shore Music Circus.

Residents began talking about the study of a private ambulance service.

The Last Quarter

The state got tough, upping the daily sewer fines to $2,000. An adult health care center was proposed for Rte. 3A and Cohasset merchants actively discussed the need for a Chamber of Commerce.

The Yankee-Oil Cox Estate variance issue began in September and ended in October and the end result was a town option to lease portion of the Cox Estate for a municipal parking lot.

A citizens advisory committee was formed to discuss sewer alternatives and the school committee began talking implementation of cable equipment.

The Water Commission is concerned about the impact of a private landfill to Lily Pond and the Fire Dept. grievances continue on with Chief Dooley suspending John Boswell for working a second job while being paid injury leave.

St. Stephens Church, recognizing the need for elderly housing, proposes the beginning of a study and First Parish Church members dedicated a new wheelchair ramp.

There was no rest for the weary as far as the news went in 1983 for Cohasset.

Hingham Water Co. rate hearing set

The state Department of Public Utilities (DPU) will hold a public hearing in Hingham to give the public and local officials an opportunity to comment on the $373,333 proposed rate increase of the Hingham Water Company.

The public hearing will be held Jan. 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the Large Barnes Auditorium, Town Office Building, 7 East Street, Hingham.

This hearing is part of the investigation by the DPU into the proposed 16.45 percent rate increase requested by the Hingham Water Company July 15.

The rates are scheduled to go into effect Aug. 1, but the DPU, in accordance with its standard practice, suspended the effective date of the rate increase until June 1, 1984.

During the suspension period, the DPU will hold hearings to evaluate the reasons for the company's rate request and will determine what amount of increase may be warranted.

Hingham Water Company serves approximately 11,000 customers in the towns of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Norwell. The company's last rate case was decided by the DPU April 15, at which time it received a $387,153 rate increase, reduced from the $551,052 increase requested in that case.

At that time the company was directed by the DPU to take steps to improve the quality of its water within six months of that decision.

JAMAICA

Unlike most miniature Caribbean isles, Jamaica is an island of dazzling dimension. It resembles a small continent in variety and size. Woodsy mountains rumble the island's spine, separating the busy captital city of Kingston on the undeveloped, rugged southern coast from the resort areas on the 200 mile long opposite shore. To the west, mountains give way to dry southern plains. To the east, sparkling rivers carve green valleys as they rush to the sea. The best travel strategy is to stay at one of Jamaica's four resort areas that line up like soft footprints in the north coast's coral sands. Then, make day trips and sightseeing excursions around the island.

If you would like to experience a truly grand vacation at a lower price than you would expect, consider joining a tour. There are tours available to points all over the world. Your biggest dilemma will be choosing one. See COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER for tours to destinations just about anywhere. Call or visit us soon to discuss your plans. Appeals Board denies request for garage

The appeals board recently denied a variance request to build a garage on Jerusalem Road and Aaron River Road.

Barry Getto of 36 Jerusalem Rd. was the applicant.

The premises are located in a Residence R-B District and the bylaw requires a 20 foot side yard.

The board determined no evidence was presented, nor determined there are any unique conditions or circumstances relating to this lot or structure.

There exists a single family residence constructed upon a residential lot without any particularly distinguishing soil conditions, shape or topography.

In addition, the board determined Getto is not deprived of the opportunity of constructing a complying garage elsewhere on his property. The height of the garage could be reduced to 15 feet, enabling a location at least six feet from the side line as a permitted accessory building, or the garage could be located in compliance with the 20 foot yard requirement.

Robert Coletti of Aaron River Road requested a variance from the dimensional provisions of the bylaw to permit him to maintain a garage recently constructed in violation of the bylaw.

The premises are situated in a Residence R-A District and the applicable provisions of the bylaw require a 15 foot side yard.

In connection with the proposed construction of his new garage, Coletti retained a surveyor to locate the applicant's side lot line.

Apparently the surveyor indicated the location of what he believed the side lot line to be, and the Building Inspector, apparently in reliance upon the side lot line location, portrayed by the applicant upon a small-scale plan, approved the location of the proposed garage and issued a building permit.

The garage was constructed without further regard to the applicable provisions of the bylaw. A subsequent survey initiated by an abutter disclosed the correct location of the lot line resulted in the completed garage some eight feet from the lot line. Coletti sought a variance from the appeals board respecting the offending garage.

No evidence was presented, nor could the board determine there are any unique conditions or circumstances relating to this lot or structure. There exists a single family residence constructed upon a residential lot without any particularly distinguishing soil conditons, shape or topography.

In addition, had the variance been applied for and denied prior to construction of the garage, Coletti would not have been deprived of the opportunity of constructing a complying garage elsewhere on his property.

The garage was constructed in such a way Coletti would be required to back vehicles onto a street, in violation of the bylaw and cross land of an abutter, requiring an easement.

The board was not persuaded sufficient attention was paid to the lot line location, notwithstanding the apparent involvement of a surveyor, or that construction in violation of the bylaw should necessarily dictate automatic relief.

The board does not "find it inappropriate to charge a landowner with the primary responsibility of compliance with the provisions of the bylaw which apply to his property."

Approving both decisions were: Myrna Putziger, chairman; John Rousseau, Jr., and Barbara Power, board members.

Secretarial help discussed by some town boards

Members of the planning board, the zoning board of appeals, the conservation commission and the sewer commission met recently to discuss possible solutions to their secretarial problems.

All these boards are in need of secretarial help in keeping files, taking meeting minutes and sending letters and notices.

Currently some committee members are relying on the secretaries at their office jobs. One board member said, "A great deal of the work is assumed by secretaries other than the town of Cohasset."

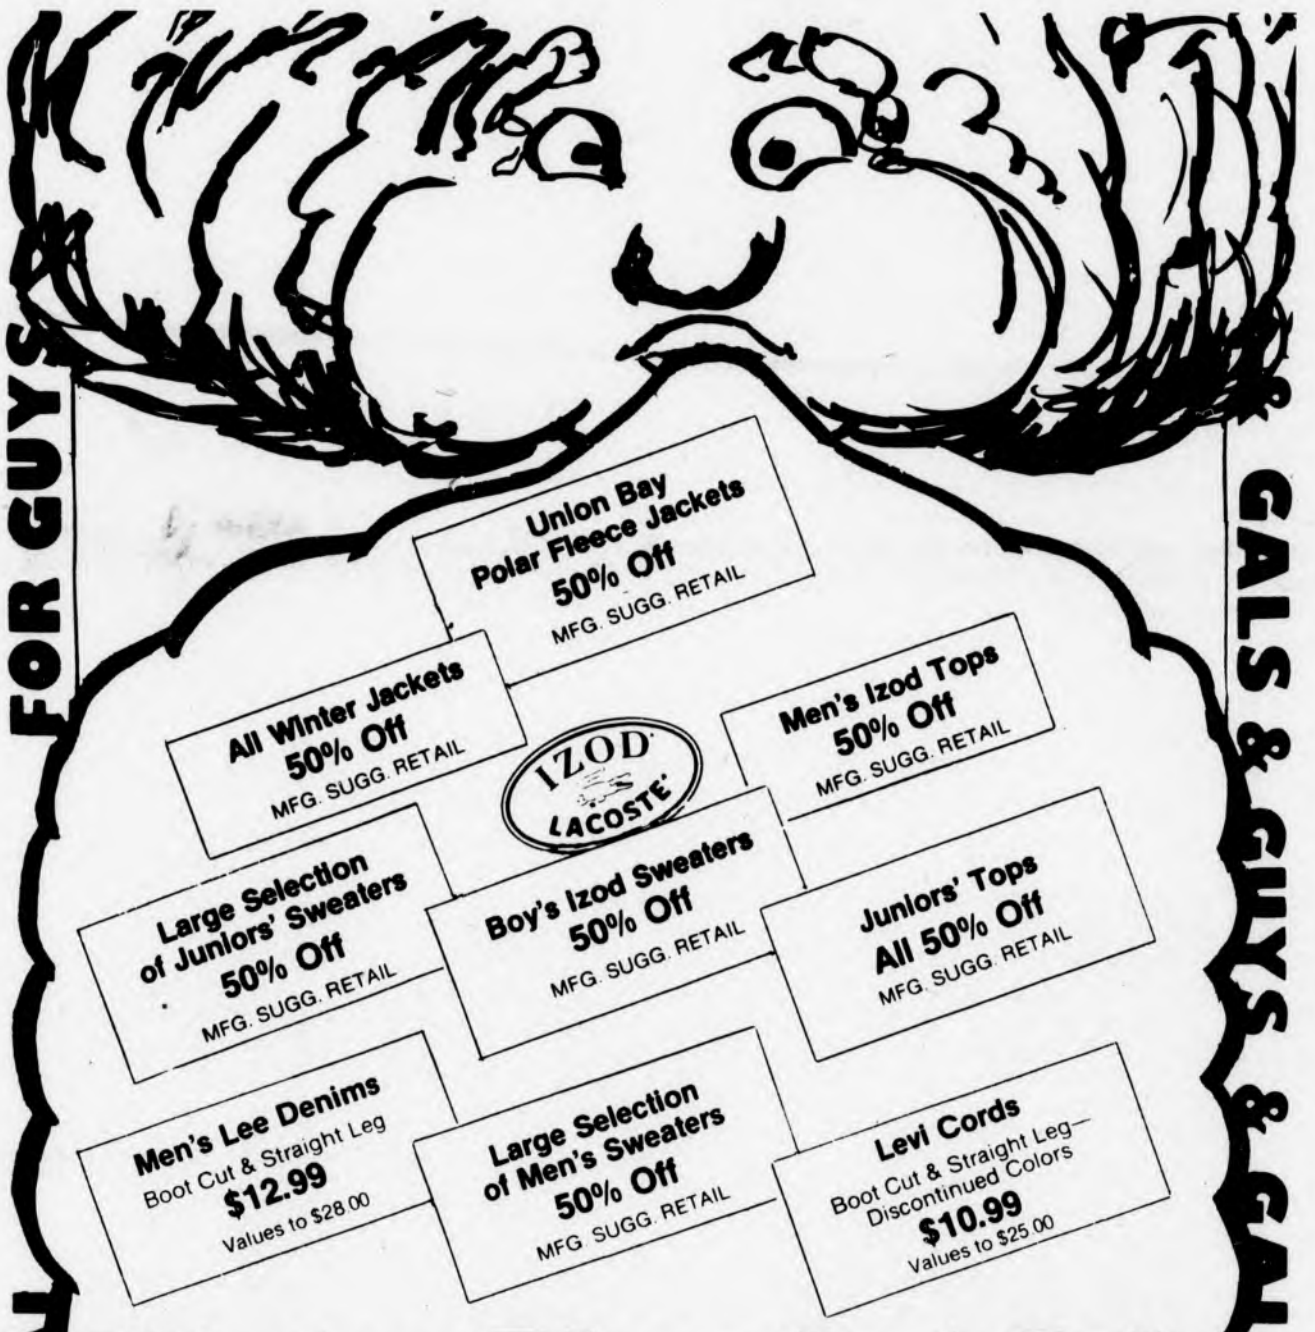
Lack of secretarial help can be detrimental to a board's performance. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said, "One deadline missed, one notice not sent out, and you end up in court."

Altogether, the four boards need about 35 hours of secretarial help per week.

The possibility of hiring one full-time secretary to be shared by the four committees was discussed. The person hired would need a very flexible schedule, since there would be a lot of night meetings to attend.

This option is particularly attractive because a shared secretary could enhance communication between boards.

As an example, Lanza said, "Things come up at the conservation commission that the planning board should know about."



Planning board member Dan Cotton said, "It just might be an opening for bringing the boards together."

If the hiring of a secretary is approved by the advisory board, then a part-time secretary currently working for one of the boards will be offered the position first.

VoTech board approves harassment policy

By Theresa Sullivan

The South Shore Vocational Technical High School Committee approved a policy recently to handle any form of harassment, including sexual, racial and religious harassment.

The policy was presented to the committee by a group of students who worked to write the policy for the past month.

This action follows a complaint by the parents and students to the committee concerning the punishment given to a male student for touching a female student after they had been arguing.

At the school committee meeting last month, parents said there was a need for a policy which deals with harassment.

The eight-student task force defined harassment as "the act of intentionally abusing the dignity of another person, through insulting or degrading personal remarks or conduct."

Scituate committee member Joan DeGeorge-Schirmer questioned the examples of harassment stipulated in the students' recommendations. They cited sexual, racial, religious and the presence of apparent or hidden handicaps as forms of harassment.

DeGeorge-Schirmer said there is a form of harassment where one student doesn't like another student and he or she picks on him or her. Cheri Jokinen, president of the student council, said the four were examples and she agreed the type of harassment DeGeorge-Schirmer was referring to happens.

The regulations say forms of harassment include, but are not limited to, touching, gesturing, staring, intimidating and making remarks.

The policy outlines an informal grievance procedure a person may go through where nothing will be recorded in writing. Under this process, a student may seek out one of four complaint managers, two female and two male.

Complaint managers may be teachers or guidance counselors. A complaint will be investigated and a resolution must be reached within five days.

Resolutions are in the form of education, counselling, confrontation reconciliation, disciplinary action or recommendation for formal grievance proceedings, the policy says.

If the grievance reaches the formal stage, punishment can be from three to nine days suspension.

The only opposing vote on the policy came from Rockland committeeman John Doyle. "In no way can I vote on this tonight," he said. "I cannot weigh all these things and vote on them in good conscience."

He said because it was handed to him that night when he arrived at the meeting, he "wouldn't even be prepared to vote tonight."

While complimenting the students' work on the policy, he told Supt. Dr. Cliff Easton, "I think it's been very shabbily put before us." Other committee members also praised the students' policy.

Doyle also questioned whether staring is harassment. Jokinen said, "Staring in general wouldn't be called harassment. Staring at certain parts of the body or constant staring would be."

Following the vote, Jokinen said the students were going to present and explain the policy to the student population in an assembly "to make them aware of the channels."

Alternative writing course offered

Two Cohasset parents have been asked by the Cohasset Community Center to teach writing to children Sunday afternoons for eight weeks.

Tanna Kasperowicz and Joanne Nawn will begin teaching a "Writing Seminar" to ten to 14-year old students beginning Sunday.

Kasperowicz and Nawn feel the schools don't have the time to teach writing and as a result many children aren't motivated to write out of the classroom.

"We didn't want want parents to think it was going to be a creative writing course, although all writing is creative," said Kasperowicz.

"We wanted and are advertising for average students, underachievers, students who resist writing because they either weren't paying attention when the teacher explained how to do it; or the teacher never explained how; or the student who may have been reading for only two to three years simply isn't ready to attack expression in written form," she said.

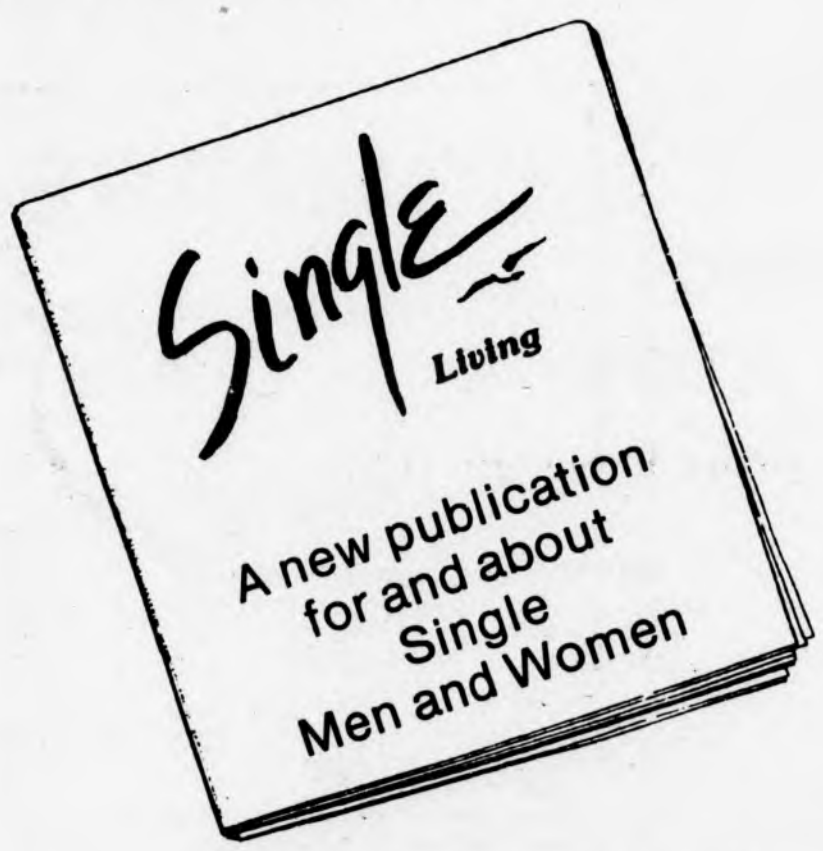
Nawn added the course will "try to get through the kinks of writing blockage."

The two writers agreed they must motivate students to do a good job and "not be lazy about writing." They will discuss summarizing scanning, note-taking and writing by sampling.

If we do character sketches, we're going to provide two and three and four samples of professional character sketches for the student to ready, plagarize. Budding artists copy the masters; budding writers do the same," said Kasperowicz.

Students will be taking notes when guest speakers are talking and also question the speaker about what he said during an interview session.

Students will hand in their articles at the end of each class and the teachers will type what they have written for them and then edit the piece and make suggestions for improvements.



Students will continue to revise articles and reports with the emphasis on raising questions and improving writing skill and deduction.

For example, when writing about book reports, students will be asked to comment on the characters, if the book is worth recommending to others and how the author could have improved upon certain chapters, the beginning or the ending.

In a ceremony attended by his family, Michael received his Navy "Wings of Gold" as a qualified helicopter pilot.

After temporary duty with the Navy recruiting office in Boston, Michael will be based in Norfolk, Va., performing shipboard duty in the Carribean area.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rattenbury had great news to report last week! They have a new member of their family for the holidays. Their son, Paul Henry, got married Dec. 18 in Williamsburg, Virginia. Paul's wife, Sherri Lee Eason, hails from White March, Virginia, and will be able to see Cohasset soon as this is where they plan to spend their honeymoon. After their trip here, Paul and Sherri will live in Worcester, Virginia.

☐Dec. 20 marked a big day for Ben Curley. On that date Ben turned 55 years young, and all off Ben's friends and co-workers at the water department want to be sure to extend warm best wishes.

Jane Kryrkos, Sally Rutherford and Sally's son Johnny went for a walk in the snow through Cohasset Village. They were on their way back from the Bread Board when they bought buns to take home and eat with hot chocolate. (Rose Cundari photo)

Heather Carroll

☐Heather G. Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lindsay Carroll, North Main Street, graduated from the University of New Hampshire Dec. 18 with a Bachelor of Science in mechanical engineering with energy specialization.

Heather was vice president of Phi Mu Sorority; past board manager, songstress and social chairman and a member and treasurer of Senior Key Honor Society at the university.

She is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and is pursuing a career in research and design.

☐Out of Boston, Mass., comes news of an award given by the Regional Administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. It was a bronze medal, given to Douglas A. Thompson, son of Robert and Jean Thompson of Reservoir Road. Doug is living in Holbrook, Mass., now with his wife Nancy Gustafson (of Boulder, Colorado) and their six week old son, Ethan Douglas. Doug has been with the EPA for three years and currently holds the position of Environmental Protection Specialist.

The EPA Bronze Medal is the highest award given by the Regional Administrator of the Agency, and was presented by Michael R. Deland with the following citation: "Doug has made a substantial contribution to the attainment of national program goals, improved relationships with and assisted state and local governments and individual permit applicants through his professional efforts in administering the Agency's responsibilities under section 404 of the Clean Water Act (The Dredge and Fill Program).

"He has accomplished this under particularly trying circumstances, including regulatory reform efforts. Doug has been the focal point for leadership and comments on several activities of national and regional significance, and his contributions have been recognized and commended by Headquarters. Doug's efforts with the states have resulted in the probable delegation of the 404 program to one state, and evoked the interest of another in assuming delegation."

☐Anyone driving by Margin Street has undoubtedly seen the red ribbons on the tree in Mary Jeanette Murray's front yard. Mary Jeanette reports that the ribbons are not for Christmas decorations, but for MIA/POWS. Hull said a Mass for them, then placed the ribbons all over town, which prompted Mary Jeanette to do the same to her yard.

☐Had a rather sad phone call last week, something that we should be made aware of. It seems that some Cohasset families were without telephone service for six days over the Christmas holidays and were unable to make or receive some important phone calls. When service was finally restored, they were told that some vandals had cut the telephone cable, cutting the service. The lady that called me was upset to think that anyone could do a thing like that, and wanted all townspeople to be on the alert for anyone tampering with the lines in town. She doesn't want anyone else to have to go through the awful experiences that her family had to do over the holidays, just "because of vandals."

☐Congratulations to Nicky Terry, Kate Barrett, Peter Sheppard, Jay Gaston, Kerri Anglin, Colin Knox, Nicole Peterson, Megan Rhodes and Ned Thompson, all students in the elementary schools who won prizes from the fire department after entering the poster/essay contest during Fire Prevention Week.

☐"Our Town" looked very much like any busy town in Florida during college week during the holidays, what with all of the college students home for the holidays. Always great for everyone to see, and it's nice to hear that all the students seem to appreciate their home town so much when they return to it!

☐Bruce Williams and family made it to Cohasset for the holidays, to spend time seeing family and friends. They drove from Pittsburg, a real undertaking considering the awful weather they could have encountered! Bruce was especially happy to be able to see Walt and Nanci Sweeney, who finally arrived "home" after an awful trip across country. The weather was certainly against them. If you remember seeing the ice storm in Texas that broke all records, try to picture yourself in the middle of it—they were! Couldn't move for five days, in fact. Anyway, they are here, safe and sound.

☐Pat Conlan was taken ill while visiting a friend in the hospital last week. Here's hoping that as he reads this he is well on the road to recovery.

☐While making a list of resolutions for the New Year, why not put "Around Town" on the top of it. Call or write with your news, and share it with everyone.

☐Much health, happiness and success in the New Year to all.

Wompatuck State Park report . . .

By Cyndee Moore

Future events at the 3,000 acre Wompatuck State Park will be more evident because of new park publicity measures.

Advisory Council Chairman Robert Garvin reported at the Dec. 14 meeting the park now has a logo to be used on its newsletter, stationery, and around the park.

The logo is the design of Jeffrey Field of Hingham who entered the competition along with 30 other Hingham and Cohasset high school students.

Reservoir Canoes

Garvin also reported the receipt of a letter from the Cohasset Water Department which agrees with the council's request to allow canoes in the reservoir.

The Cohasset water commissioners previously allowed fishermen to use only rowboats since the reservoir supplies the town's drinking water.

Members of the advisory council feel there is an additional need for a direct access road to the reservoir. "If you come in the park (from the only entrance on Hingham's Free Street) to fish, you get locked in," Scituate representative Al Bonney said. "We need access to the reservoir."

John Richardson of Hingham who has been contracted by the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) to study the park's resources, suggested establishing a parking area and opening a gate to the reservoir.

The council must "come up with a simple drawing and plan" to present to the Cohasset water commissioners, Garvin said. This plan would allow for a parking area for six to 10 cars and a footpath for carrying a non-motorized boat to the reservoir. Garvin delegated the task of designing an access plan and its implementation to Park Supervisor John Hart.

Mt. Blue Spring

A letter from John Langmaid of Beechwood Street in Cohasset, proposed various ways to collect money to allow continued use of spring water from Mt. Blue Spring.

Council members opposed any charges for the spring water. "Here you have something that comes out of the ground free," Richardson said.

Park Supervisor John Hart said there will be a problem collecting fees for the spring water. He added a new shelter is almost completed for Mt. Blue Spring and the previous shelter was burned by vandals.

Ski Clinic

A letter from Wilderness House on Commonwealth Avenue in Boston requested the use of the park and visitor center to run a ski clinic (with instructors and equipment) Sunday, Jan. 29, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at "no charge to the public."

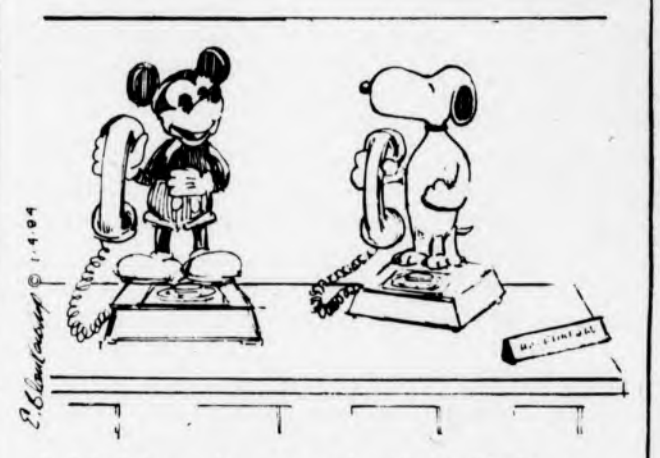
Hart said that Wilderness House ran a program at the park some six to eight years ago where ski equipment was rented.

While most council members agreed this was the kind of publicity the park needs to make use of its resources, Garvin is concerned "for big business influencing the park."

Although he saw nothing inherently wrong with the proposed ski clinic, he raised the question, "Does this set a precedent for other companies to come in?" He is concerned about the presence of salesmen at the clinic.

As Hingham's representative to the advisory council, Garvin is concerned the Hingham selectmen may have to approve the ski clinic before the council gives Wilderness the okay.

The advisory council agreed to support the ski clinic with the stipulation that Garvin finds no opposition from the Hingham selectmen.



In old business from the council's Nov. meeting, Lendrum Lee, assistant regional supervisor of the DEM, reported the federal General Services Administration (GSA) has not yet decided how to release (discount or fair market value) the U.S. Army property on the edge of the park. The property will be appraised.

'Movers and Shakers'

It was an historic year in 1983 for Cohasset and 1984 should be no different.

With a crystal ball outlook there are many people in Cohasset who will shape the town's history through their words or their actions.

In some circles they are called the "movers and the shakers" or the people who can move mountains.

So we have compiled a list of interesting people to watch for in 1984.

They are: Mary Jane McArthur, John DeBassio, Dick Conley, Fred Johansen, Martin Dooley, Mark Lanza, Peter Pratt, Billy Protulis and Mark Trask, Dr. Michael Bliss, Jim Lagrotteria and the advisory board, Karin Bartow, Sue McNamara, Charlie DeSantis, Diane Suillivan Dan Leahy, Joe Quinn and Martha and Arne Gjesteby and state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and state Sen. Allan McKinnon.

In contrast those people you may not read or hear too much about but whose actions are dependable are Joe Kealey, Peter Laugelle, Jack Worley, Harold Litchfield and Bill Signorelli.

The year 1984 will be very interesting.

Advisory Board recommendations

The Advisory Board will recommend the town appropriate by taxation $13,911 to pay for legal services.

The town owes $3,075 in legal fees to Goodwin, Procter and Hoar for the case of the Planning Board versus Yankee Oil and Gas, Inc. and the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The town owes $10,836 to Roche, Carens and DeGiacomo for the case of Harbormaster Harry Ritter versus William Figueiredo.

The board also approved an article on the special town meeting warrant asking for $25,000 for general legal services to supplement funds appropriated at the 1983 town meeting.

Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said, "If Rich Henderson (town counsel) billed us for all the time he's spent, this bill would be five times more."

Henderson is paid at a rate of $65 an hour.

The Advisory Board will recommend its decision from the floor at the special meeting whether or not it supports spending between $10,000 and $20,000 for a fire services consultant to evaluate the Fire Dept.

The selectmen requested the consultant, saying they need someone with firefighting expertise to evaluate the problems within the department.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley said he would welcome anybody's examination of the department, according to Jim Lagrotteria, board chairman.

The firefighters said they would not object to such an investigation, advisory board members said, recalling past conversations.

A resolution to sleep on

By Claire McDonough

"Are you making any New Year's resolutions?" I asked the Dragon.

He gave me a pitying look. "Why would I want to monkey around with perfection? I assume, however, that you have your usual three-page list and that your first-of-the-year fervor should carry you right through to Jan. 3."

"This year," I told him, "I'm just making one. I'm going to get serious about aerobics."

"Aerobic what?" he asked, motioning for silence from the children who had broken out in hysterical laughter.

"Aerobic (mumble)," I replied and attempted a rapid exit from the room.

"We can't hear you," Breida and Skipper chorused.

"For someone who's always telling other people to enunciate," Larry said, "you're not talking very clearly."

I turned and faced them. "If you must know, I'm into aerobic sleeping."

When the general hilarity had subsided, Patrick consulted his biology book.

"I don't seem to find aerobic sleeping in here," he said innocently.

"No, really," I told them. "If you really think about it it makes sense. People go in for self-improvement in their sleep all the time. Flora slept with 'Learn to Speak Spanish' tapes under her pillow for three months.

"Fauna took a sleep course in computer programming. There are whole catalogues of sleep tapes you can send away for to make you better while you sleep — including tapes to get rid of headaches and other physical problems. I'm just taking it one step further."

"May I point out," the Dragon said with careful courtesy, "that the only Spanish Flora learned are the words for 'yes,' 'no,' and 'charge it?'

"I would also observe that so far Fauna's expertise as a computer programmer hasn't whisked her away from her career at Angelo's check-out."

"Probably the tapes they used weren't right for them," I admitted. "But I have my own method. I'm going to make tapes using my own voice. While I'm in a deep sleep my voice will instruct my muscles to tense and relax appropriately. It will tell my heart and lungs to increase their activity. My pulse will become more rapid, my lungs will expand, and the muscles of my body will become firm, strong and flexible.

"I may waken less rested than I do now, but," I added virtuously, "this is a sacrifice I am willing to make."

I looked at the children. Patrick had buried his face in his biology book in a clear attempt to absorb information through his forehead in some new osmotic method.

Kevin, who had just entered the room, developed a sudden interest in the backyard and was staring out the window, his shoulders shaking.

Breida and Skipper had abandoned all attempt at subterfuge and were leaning against each other, tears of helpless laughter coursing down their cheeks.

The Dragon made an all-inclusive gesture. "Do you think," he asked politely, "you could come up with a different resolution?"

"Yes," I told him. "I resolve that next year I won't tell anyone what I resolve."

Drainage Advisory Committee report

Here is a report to Selectmen from the Drainage Advisory Committee about specific drainage problems in town.

Committee members are Walter Ross, chairman, and Diane Sullivan and Thomas Cook.

88 Forest Avenue

Has anything yet been done by the Norfolk County Commissioners as indicated in their letter of June 6? We are not aware of any. We feel that no action need be taken by the Town as the flooding which occurs is naturally occurring.

This problem does vividly indicate what can happen when drainage is not considered before development.

Lothrop Lane

This is an old problem of drainage addressed by the previously constituted Drainage Committee. Correction would require an appropriation of funds to address drainage on Atlantic Avenue.

726 Jerusalem Road

Driveway erosion is occurring from natural runoff. Homeowner should consider paving to reduce erosion. No action need be taken by the Town.

351 Forest Avenue

Homeowner experienciong flooding of lot due to recent construction on an abutting lot. Parties have a good relationship and may be able to resolve this matter between them. No action need be taken by the Town.

This Committee will report separately on the Cedar Street Landfill. We also will report on the conditions we found during an on site inspection of the Bird Sanctuary along with our recommendations.

Target Industries

At the conclusion of our meeting of Nov. 10, we toured this site during a very heavy downpour. We concluded that drainage in this area was not adversely affected.

However, west of the paved area puddling was observed which would be resolved by clearing dumped material and minor grading to provide access to drainage ditch which runs parallel to Target Industries on the Southerly side.

We recommend this be done and that Target Industries be advised.

The Committee felt that any future paving of the railroad right of way could significantly increase the drainage problems with the James Brook watershed.

After our on site inspection of Nov. 10, we wanted to observe the parking lot and its drainage. We observed large puddling west of the paved area still standing. Our recommendation is that the dumped material be cleared so that access to the drainage ditch running parallel to Target might be obtained relieving the puddling we observed.

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

The 1983 session of the Massachusetts House of Representatives will likely be remembered as the year in which a serious challenge to the Speaker was mounted and defeated, and for the subsequent discussion and adoption of some significant reforms of the procedural rules of the House.

But before these events took place in the waning weeks of the 1983 session, much of the activity could be summed up as "business as usual."

Of the 6653 bills filed in the House and 2116 filed in the Senate, 544 have been signed into law by the governor with 163 awaiting his consideration.

Over the course of the year, the House followed a rather tepid schedule, meeting in formal and informal session for the equivalent of only forty-nine 8-hour work days, a total of 391 hours and 38 minutes. In that time, positive steps like the passage of the Lemon Law and Right-to-Know Legislation clashed with some exceptionally poor special interest legislation like the bill calling for state subsidy for the racing industry and an attempt to override Proposition 2½.

In many ways, this legislative session is as noteworthy for what is left undone as for what was accomplished.

The final state budget was $7.2 billion, five percent over last year's spending, and was achieved only after the adoption of the governor's Revenue Enforcement and Protection Plan (REAP), a $100 million broad based nickel-and-dime tax increase which counts among its victims motorists, businesses and cigarette smokers.

Add to this another $100 million in increases in fees paid for motor vehicle licenses and registrations, professional licenses and other services for which fees are charged, and one finds most residents of the Commonwealth paying more to the state today than they were a year ago. With tax revenues running at 11.6 percent above fiscal year '83 and inflation at three percent, we must question whether all these increased taxes and fees are really necessary.

At the end of the session a Dukakis bill to give a 3-year extension to the Governor's authority to set fees and to allow him to raise them by 150 percent above the current rate was squashed by a House amendment offered by the Republican Leader to return such authority to the Legislature. Coupled with further amendments passed by the Senate, the whole fee structure is now in question.

Unfortunately, it was the homeless and the mentally ill who became the political football of 1983. Dubbed the top priority by the Governor in his inaugural speech last January, few more are being housed and fed as this new winter begins.

A bill passed by the legislature and signed by the Governor at a much ballyhooed champagne reception earlier in the year, was, in fact, a rewrite of an old proposal.

It did provide for greater access to welfare programs but did not address the core problem that 90 percent of the homeless have proven to be mentally ill, mostly deinstitutionalized, and in need of mental health and medical programs.

And once again this year, the concept of long-term planning was eschewed by the legislature when, for the third consecutive year it failed to pass a capital outlay budget.

The legislature did increase the state's bonded indebtedness substantially, however, with the passage of a $625 million transportation bond, a $196.6 million housing bond and a $25 million energy bond. Proposed, but not acted on this year, was a $511 million bond to create MassBank to fund repairs and maintenance for the infrastructure.

It now appears that the Legislature may have to return before Jan. 4 to act on a capital outlay budget abandoned in the Christmas marathon.

The urgency is caused by Judge Tauro's decision to enforce court ordered safety improvements to the state mental health facilities. The cost is estimated between $20 and $100 million in lost federal funds. The state has been aware of this problem for six years and has failed to comply with federal requirements.

Ironically, in the late hours of the closing session, the Senate did find $100 million to add to the Transportation Bond for renovation of the Hynes Auditorium (total $200 million). Republicans were initially successful in convincing the House to reject the Senate amendment but ultimately the House backed down and approved the legislation in spite of evidence that the $200 million price tag was unnecessarily high.

The Massachusetts Convention Center Authority, in another piece of legislation was instructed to study the possibility of an arena for Boston. No price was attached though information on the Indiana "Hoosier Dome" gathered by the Republicans shows an $80 million construction cost for this midwest project.

With the start of this new year, our thoughts turn to the future—to what we, as individuals and organizations, hope to accomplish in the coming 366 days.

In the Legislature, we look for a continuing discussion of rules reform. In 1983 we achieved some significant changes in the House rules and the Senate has established a special committee on rules reform which, we hope, will conduct a serious effort. We will continue to push for early discussions between the House and Senate Leadership on the rules that affect both chambers.

We will be watching carefully as the Governor unveils the Fiscal 1985 state budget. We will be watching to see if campaign promises of 40 percent of new revenues for local aid are kept and also working to see that proposed bureaucratic spending does not rise out of proportion and that new taxes or fees are not part of the plan.

In 1984 we hope to see the Administration take some significant steps to care for those who cannot care for themselves, especially deinstitutionalized mental health patients and the homeless. As we face another New England winter, we must be assured that these people are being sheltered from the elements.

We look forward to continuing economic recovery and more jobs for the unemployed in Massachusetts. We welcome the current reviews of our public education systems and expect legislation to improve and update public education in Massachusetts.

1984—We're going to do our best to make it "good government year" in Massachusetts.

Best wishes for a happy and health New Year. And, please remember, I am always interested in hearing from you.

Drainage report...

24 Stevens Lane

There is a 12 inch culvert running under the driveway which runs into a ditch which connects to a culvert running under Stevens Lane which appears to travel under the elderly housing to the rear of the fire station and down to Elm Street and the storm drain system.

The ditch leading to the 12 inch culvert was clogged with at least one foot of leaves. The grate in front of the culvert was also clogged with at least six inches of leaves reaching to above the culvert.

The water in the ditch rises to within six inches of Stevens Lane. The fire department responded last spring and pumped the ditch out.

Lothrop Lane

This problem area was addressed by the previously constituted Drainage Committee in a letter in the spring. The only thing that could be done to help correct this drainage problem area is an appropriation by town meeting to address drainage on Atlantic Avenue.

We also toured Heather Drive, Hobart Lane, and Windly Hill. Since Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos indicated drainage problems in these areas but without specific addresses we were not able to address any specific problems. We voted to write to Elaine and ask that she provide addresses and we will make on site visits.

Cohasset Craftsmen—Route 3A

(Drainage of former Cohasset Motors Property)—A good deal of runoff was observed travelling from the parking lot at the rear of the former Cohasset Motors parking lot to the fence separating the Cohasset Craftsmen property and into Cohasset Craftmen's property and its catch basin.

The other two inlets on this property were catching substantial flows as well. The outlet for this storm drain system which is locted on the Southeast side of the Cohasset Craftsmen driveway had a high level of water. But in addition to the foregoing which is usual, there was a significant flow from the rear which was not usual. It appears that the filling which has occurred to the rear of the former Cohasset Motors property in the natural retention area for runoff has caused the runoff to instead exit to the rear of Mr. Abromowich's property, increasing the flow to his already busy drainage system.

Clarification

In the Dec. 22 issue, a Letter to the Editor, signed by Catherine L. Morgan of Cohasset and with the headline "Support for Ross Rosano" was published. The letter also was sent to Katherine Palimeri.

The author and the letter's contents should not be in any way related to the thoughts of Kathryn E. Morgan of Bow Street.

In addition, the town clerk's records do not have an official name listing or address for Catherine L. Morgan.

'Lamplight' needs some discretion

To the Editor:

Recently your editorial staff made a decision to include the Cohasset Lamplight in your newspaper. This is the newspaper of the high school. On behalf of two concerned students, we are outraged at the lack of respect shown to our faculty. The article was entitled "Christmas Gifts From All Of Us To You" and its purpose was to present Christmas gifts to our teachers.

Although your (Lamplight) intentions might have been admirable, in actuality, it was a mockery. You made an attempt to down grade the teachers, but only showed your true immaturity, ignorance and lack of responsibility and respect. In the future, please use a little more discretion on your choice of words.

As a staff of a high school newspaper, that represents the whole student body of Cohasset High School, please use a little more common sense.

Yours most delicately,
Joseph Hoffman
Troy Chatterton

Some thoughts about political ads

To the Editor:

On pages three and five of your issue this date (Dec. 22) there appear two editorials critical of Inspector General Barresi of Cohasset. Or, one must at least assume they are editorials representing the opinions of the Cohasset Mariner in that they give no indication of who else's opinions they might represent.

Presuming the Cohasset Mariner feels that strongly about Mr. Barresi, it seems odd he is not mentioned on the editorial page. And, possibly, even odder that the statements made in the editorials on pages three and five hardly seem to be consistent with ethical journalism.

Fortunately, my advertisement appears on another page. It is small but it is there every week. But it will never be there again if the Mariner chooses to run what are basically political advertisements without identifying the advertiser.

Let me assure you I have never met Mr. Barresi. I have no opinion whether he is doing a good job or not. I don't even know where he lives. But I find it difficult to swallow that a newspaper would accept an ad such as those without identifying the sponsor.

Can we now believe anything in the Mariner or is your opinion for sale to whomever will buy two half pages?

Max S. Maire
85 Elm Street

(The political advertisements mentioned above were paid for by Cosmo P. Capobianco of Somerville Engineering, Inc. That statement was inadvertently omitted from the Dec. 22 issue. The political ads do not reflect the editorial philosophies of the Mariner. A news release issued by I.G. Barresi was also published last Dec. 22. Ed.)

Community Center winter course schedules now available

Winter course schedules for the Cohasset Community Center will be found in all the mailboxes of Cohasset and Scituate residents this week.

All courses must be preregistered, and most courses have a limited number of participants. Classes begin the week of Jan. 23 and continue for 12 weeks or less.

Two classes begin prior to the rest of the program. Register this week for both of these courses by calling 383-0088 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays.

The first class to begin will be a "Writing Seminar." Tanna Kasperowicz and Joanne Nawn will teach a special eight week seminar to problem writers, 10 to 14 years old.

Concentration is in functional writing; scanning, note-taking and compiling skills necessary to easily communicate in school both now and in the future. The children will work with school assignments and/or special projects. There will be individual attention for each student's needs. The class is limited to 10 participants. The sessions begin Jan. 8, Sundays, 1 to 3:30 p.m., and runs for eight weeks. The fee is $50.

Pat Boylan begins a Puppetry course Tuesday, Jan. 17 from 3:30 to 4:30. This workshop will run for four weeks and the fee is $20.

Children, seven to 11 years old, will create their own puppets, both rod and hand. Performance is emphasized.

Students will learn speaking roles, and the last class will offer a performance for parents and friends.

South Shore Art Center's winter class offerings

T.G.I. Friday, Life Drawing, Sculpture in a Landscape, Art for Reproduction, Beginning Illustration — all sound like good titles for current best sellers.

However these names belong to new course offerings on the South Shore Art Center's winter schedule. Enrollments are now being accepted for the winter term which begins Jan. 16 at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. The Center's winter open house, Sunday, Jan. 8, from 4 to 6 p.m. will give guests a chance to meet instructors, learn about the classes and enroll in courses. Advanced registration is required for all classes.

The winter schedule of courses covers the full gamut of interests and abilities; classes are scheduled in drawing, painting, photography, design for living, art history, children's art, figure drawing and courses for the absolute beginner.

T.G.I. Friday — a five-hour, eight week "art attack" — mixes the mediums and as described by instructor Jim Ann Howard is for the experienced artist ready to break the rules and let the imaginations go wild. The course begins Jan. 18 and meets Friday, 12:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The five-hour sessions will feature two hours of drawing, painting and monoprinting, one hour of discussion and two hours of exploration and work. The wide variety of mediums will be used to expand the expressive limits of the participants. Enrollment is limited to five students.

Howard's extensive art background will prove vital to working with the individuals in the class. She is affiliated with Helen Shlien Gallery, Boston; Cove Gallery, Wellfleet; South Shore Art Center; Artists for Survival, Boston; and the Boston Visual Artists Union. She has participated in numerous one-person and group shows and recently was awarded the Marion Huse Award at the South Shore Art Center All New England competition.

Walter Hawk's Life Drawing course, beginning Jan. 18, offers an opportunity to sharpen life drawing skills. Students will work from a model and both short and long poses will be used. An award winning exhibitor on both the east and west coast, Hawk has been an instructor at the N.E. School, Sterling College and Wichita State University. He has an MFA from Wichita State and a BFA from Oklahoma University.

His course will meet Wednesdays from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

A new course taught by landscape architect Mary Smith will zero in on the overlapping of sculpture, environmental art and landscape architecture. Beginning Saturday, Jan. 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Sculpture in the Landscape will address two problems — setting a specific sculpture into a landscape and designing a landscape as a sculpture.

Smith will also teach Home Landscape Design on Saturdays from 1-4 p.m. beginning Jan. 21. This course is designed to help students deal with landscape design on a residential scale. She brings to her courses an extensive background in landscape architecture.

Smith, an award-winning landscape design contractor, currently teaches residential design at Harvard's evening school. She has authored the "Chelsea Waterfront Study" and "Color Systems in the Landscape."

She has her masters in landscape design from Harvard.

Art for Reproduction is a new offering intended to introduce the student to procedures and techniques designers use to create artwork for reproduction. Instructor Joe Ciccolo will emphasize design as a means of communication and class projects will be based on professional assignments. He will cover layout techniques, typography, use of materials and methods.

The class begins Jan. 23 and meets on Mondays from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Currently a freelance graphic designer, Ciccolo has 16 years teaching experience in commercial art at Framingham. He holds an MAE from SMU and a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art.

Irena Roman's Beginning Illustration I and II will cover how to interpret a manuscript and translate the editorial viewpoint into an illustrative viewpoint. In the course, which begins on Wednesday, Jan. 18 from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m., students will learn steps in creating and illustrating, rough sketch, tissue layout, color composition and finished art. Students will be asked to show three examples of their work in order to enroll in the course.

A freelance illustrator, Roman received her BFA in illustration from the Massachusetts College of Art and has attended the N.E. School of Art and the Art Institute. She has received an award of excellence from the Boston Society of Illustrators.

Additional classes on the winter schedule include: on Monday, Basic Drawing for beginning and intermediate students, taught by Virginia Moore, starting Jan. 23 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. and Beginning Photography, taught by Paul Fortin, beginning Jan 23 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

On Tuesdays are Pastel Portrait for advanced levels, by Constance Pratt, Jan. 17 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Portraiture for intermediate and advanced students, Clement Micarelli, Jan. 17, from 8:15 to 10:15 p.m.; Survey of Art II, Beverly Stanley, Jan. 24, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.; and Exploring Visual Arts, an independent study project under the guidance of Stanley, Jan. 24, at 7:30 p.m. and arranged times.

Wednesday's courses at the Center include Watercolor Paintings by Virginia Avery, Jan. 25, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and Intermediate/Advanced Photography by Paul Fortin, beginning Jan. 18 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Thursday's schedule includes David Tandy's Introductory Drawing for beginning and intermediate levels and Introductory Painting for all levels, beginning Jan. 19 from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. and John Goldie's Beginning Darkroom and Intermediate Darkroom, beginning Jan. 19 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and arranged times.

The Friday schedule for winter also includes Louise Kalish's Color and Design beginning Jan. 20 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

For additional information regarding fees, credit courses, the Center's certificate program, the young artist classes and enrollments, please call the Center at 383-9548. Registrations may be taken over the phone and charged to either Visa or Mastercard.

Cohasset, 1983: The year in review

CHS sports report for the week . . .

Girls basketball

Cohasset took off to a promising start by squelching Weston 52-45 and Nantucket 57-33.

The girls finished with a 13-7 record last year but they plan to finish first or second in the small division of the South Shore League.

The junior varsity echoes the varsity's shout of victory with a 51-18 win over Weston and a 52-19 advantage over Nantucket.

The varsity lost two All-League seniors, Gia Baressi and Beverly Mullaney.

But Cohasset returns with a strong team of veteran juniors and two seniors.

Juniors dominate the starting line-up. Starters are forwards, Carla Lucas and Tracy Fitzpatrick, center Vicki Spooner and guards Janet DiGirolamo and Sarah Seavey.

Other forwards are: senior Trina Moore, junior Kerri O'Brien, junior Pip Gilmour and freshman Lisa Schumaker.

Other guards are: junior Jill Nedrow, sophomore Ann O'Leary and freshman Maureen O'Leary. Senior Maura Corkey will back up as a center.

Coach Bill Fallon said, "We have a good offensive team, which was demonstrated in the first two games. I think we may have a good chance at the States."

Boys basketball

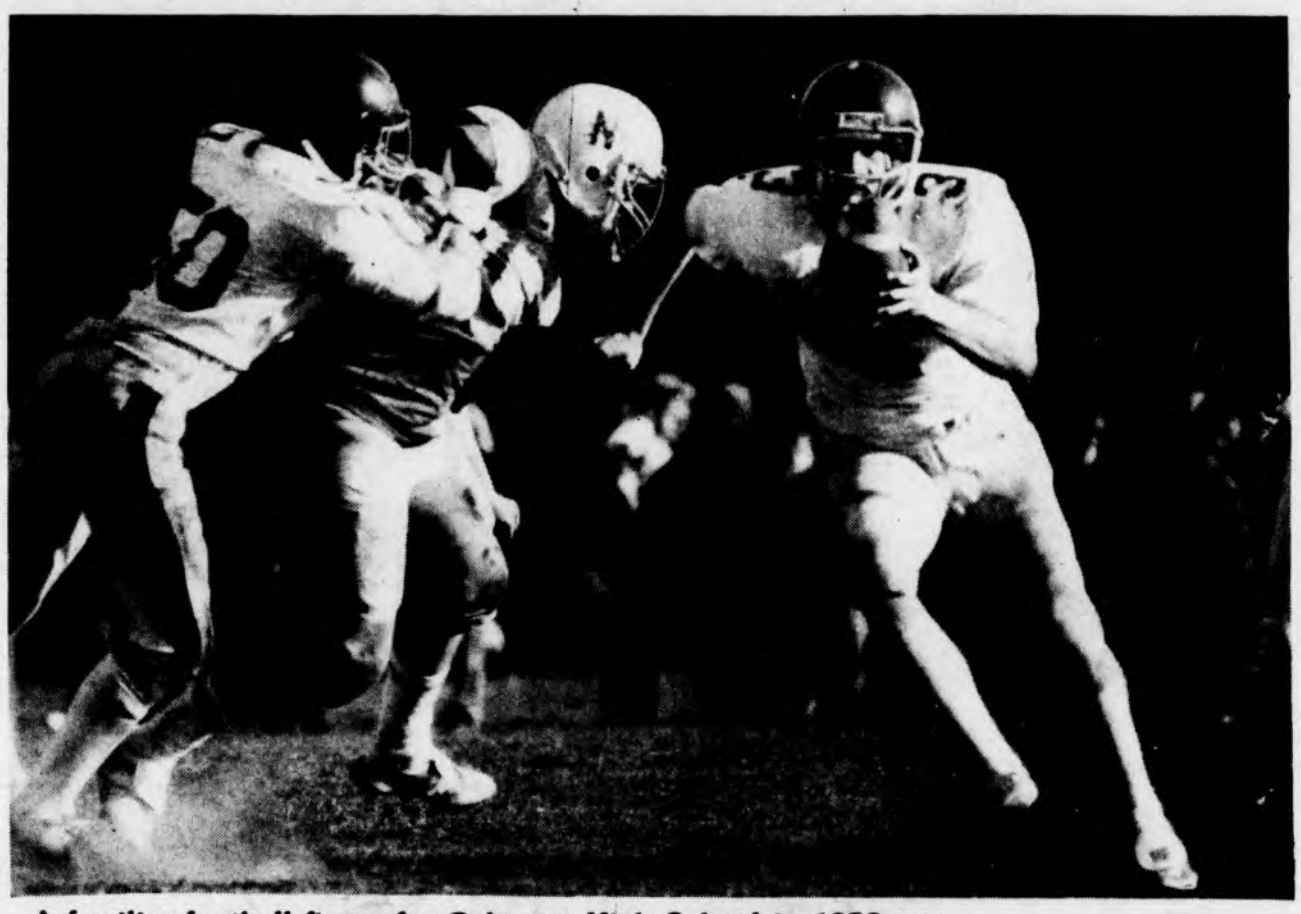
Three players who were great contributers to the Duxbury victory were Bob Schultz, Philip Bernstein and Floyd Hardwick.

Schultz, a sophomore, holds the position of first guard off the bench.

Bernstein is another junior all around player who can play center or forward.

Hardwick, another sophomore guard, is quick and agile.

Minelli has discovered some new talent this season.



Senior 6'3" John O'Connell came out for basketball for the first time. "He was a pleasant surprise. He works hard as a multi-role player," said Minelli.

Senior guard Chris Kuhn last played basketball on junior varsity two years ago. "He is another positive asset to the team," said Minelli.

Forward guard Brian Edwards is an eighth grader who made the varsity. "He will play a lot of varsity. He has outstanding skills," said Minelli.

Minelli expects his most challenging teams to be Hull, Abington, Scituate, Rockland, Duxbury and Hanover.

"It is really a toss up. We'll just have to see who pulls ahead in the league," he said.

The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon – any day between 9 and 5 – and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000

CHS sports roundup for the week . . .

By Carla Lucas and Tracey Fitzpatrick

GIRLS VARSITY BASKETBALL

The girls varsity basketball team started their first league game with a victory over Hull, 35-26.

Janet DiGirolamo played well, scoring 10 points. Coach Bill Fallon said the win was keyed by very good defense.

At Abington, Cohasset lost 46-33.

During the first half, Cohasset played very flat, but came back in the second half.

During the Christmas Tournament, Cohasset was paired off with Marshfield. Cohasset won 58-44, playing very well offensively.

Janet DiGirolamo scored 19 points and played well; Carla Lucas had 15 points and 17 rebounds and Sara Seavey added 10 points.

In the championship game of the tournament, Cohasset topped Scituate 51-49 in overtime.

At the half, Cohasset was down 24-19. The Skippers came back in the third.

Coach Fallon said "due to poor foul shooting we let Scituate back into the game." This led to overtime. Sara Seavey hit a baseline jumper which put Cohasset ahead to win.

Carla Lucas had 18 points; Tracy Fitzpatrick had 14 points and Janet DiGirolamo added nine points. Janet had an outstanding game at point guard and a great tournament.

Cohasset won the Christmas Tournament with Carla Lucas being elected as MVP of the tournament and teammate Tracy Fitzpatrick being elected to the all-tournament team.

BOYS WRESTLING

The boys wrestling team competed in the Norwell Christmas Tournament last week.

Captain Lee Reed won the whole tournament. Teammates Brian Leary won and lost two matches and James Dillion won one match. Tri-captain Billy Sargent couldn't compete because of a separated shoulder.

As a team Cohasset came in tenth in the tournament which was an improvement over last year's thirteenth place.

The Skippers will host Norwell Jan. 11 in a 7 p.m. match.

HOCKEY

The hockey team played archrival Scituate in a South Shore League contest. Scituate scored the first two goals of the game but the Skippers got one back.

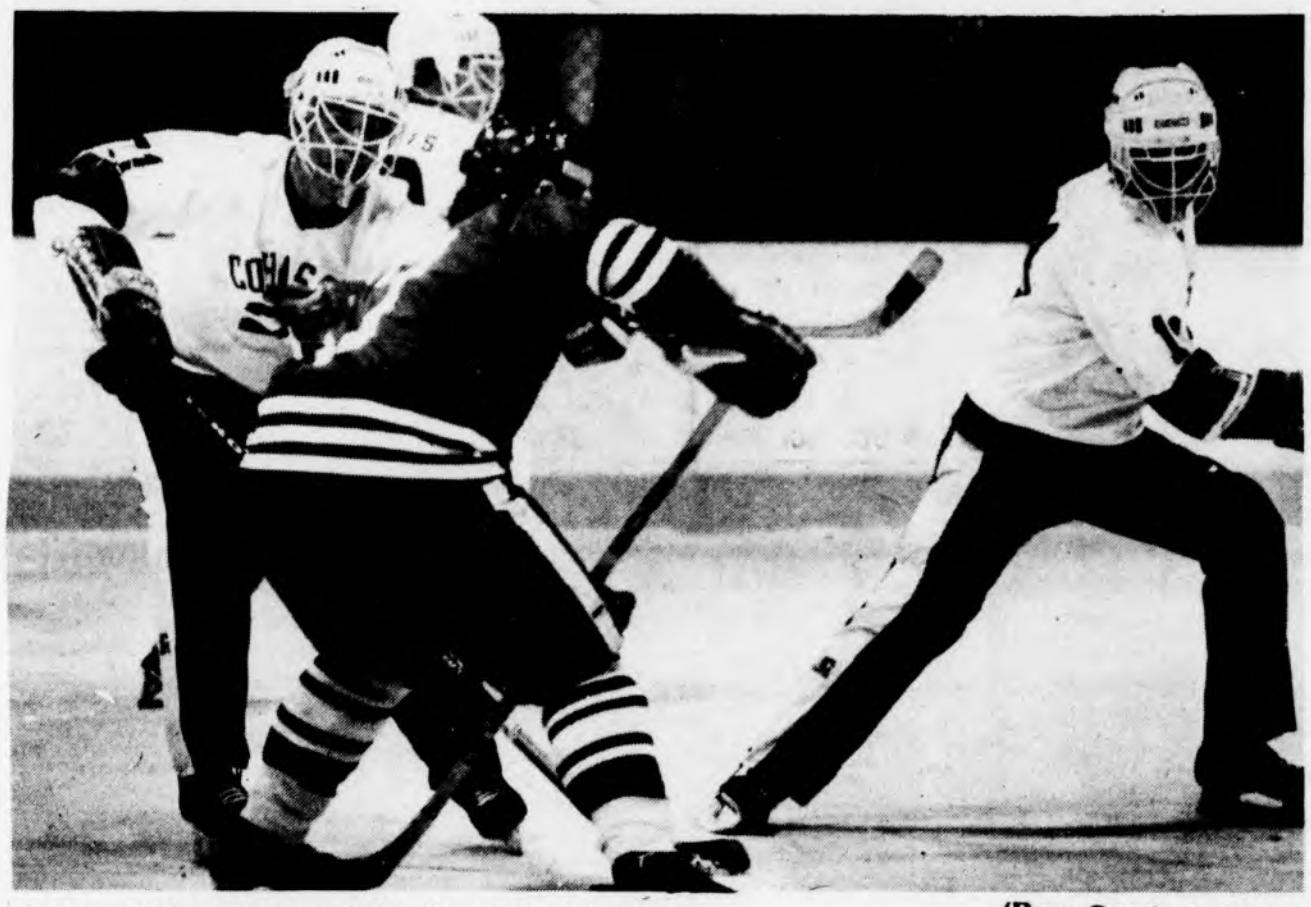
At the end of the second period, the score was 6-3, but many altercations broke out which ended a Skipper comeback. The final outcome was 10-3, Mike McNeil was in the goal, stopping 13 shots.

Lee Wilson got the first goal and Alex Ghetto contributed the two other Skipper goals.

The hockey team came into the non-league game with Hingham shorthanded by injuries and suspensions. Coach Bowen was forced to dress many junior varsity players. Senior Joe Hoffman had to play defense for the injured Kevin Quilty, dismantling the first two lines.

Everyone saw a lot of action during the course of the game. Senior Charlie Brady made his first varsity debut and played well in net. John Drago avoided a shut out by scoring late in the third period, making the outcome 6-1, a Hingham victory.

The Skippers faced Hull in the first round of the Lobster Pot Tournament. Cohasset jumped to a 3-0 lead, with goals by senior John Drago, Joe Hoffman, and eighth grader Craig Mulcahy. However, the Skippers' defense relaxed, allowing Hull to get six unanswered goals.



In the consolation game, Cohasset faced Marshfield, and played their finest game of the season. They played Marshfield evenly throughout the contest. The Skippers faced a hot goalie from Marshfield (37 saves). Perry Harris scored a goal to make it 3-1, but Marshfield scored twice late in the third period, winning the game 5-1.

☐Richard H. Morrison of 4 Forest Notch, recently celebrated his 25th anniversary with Boston Gas. Morrison joined the company in 1958 and served in various capacities in the company's operations area. He is currently director of regulatory affairs and real estate in the gas supply and production department.

He received a $100 gift certificate on his anniversary and became a member of the Boston Gas Quarter Century Club, composed of 1,300 active and retired employees with at least 25 years service. Morrison and his wife, Gail, have four children, Scott, Douglas, Helen and Richard.

☐Have been asked to wish Maureen Healey, Cohasset's first policewoman, grand success in her new venture.

☐Congratulations to Pvt. John M. Hernan, who recently completed basic training at Fort Dix, New Jersey. Pvt. Hernan is a member of the Army National Guard.

☐Had a great report about Dr. Christopher Bursk recently. Dr. Bursk is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bursk of Sheldon Rd., and is certainly doing his share to put Cohasset on the map! He has just been awarded the Simon Guggenheim award to write poetry, which means that he will study at Oxford for a year.

With him goes his family: his wife Mary Ann, and children Christian (15), Nora Beth (13) and Justin Joseph (9). Mary Ann, who has a Master's degree in Library Science, will volunteer her services while at Oxford.

Dr. Bursk has been given a leave of absence from Buck's County Community College. He is the poet laureate of Buck's County, and works with John Mitchner to write about peace. Another sideline is his work with the prisoners at a nearby prison, where they publish "Bars and Stripes."

Dr. Bursk has written many papers and books, including his book "Standing Watch," which was reviewed in the Mariner in 1978. Much of his writing deals with Cohasset, including Little Harbor, and this book and other publications will be at Fleming's Hardware Store over the Christmas holidays.

Dr. Bursk is a graduate of C.H.S., with a degree in poetry from Tufts University and earned his doctorate at Boston University. Best wishes to the Bursk family in their latest venture. They leave for Oxford Jan. 7 and will remain for the school year.

McGrath seeks nomination for 10th Congressional Seat

Former state Rep. Richard Michael McGrath of Wareham is seeking the Democratic nomination for the congressional seat in the 10th Congressional District.

McGrath served in the U.S. Marine Corps for five years and was a decorated gunnery Sgt. in Korea. He was the first disabled veteran (non-service connected) to be elected to the Mass. House in recent times. He was re-elected in 1974.

He was appointed to the Joint Standing Committees on Public Safety, Federal Financial Assistance, the Special Overload Commission, the Solid Waste Disposal Commission and the Mass. House liaison to the Task Force on the prison population crisis. He worked to secure passage on many laws involving law enforcement, the Mass. Fire Academy, the sprinkler and fire alarm warning system, as well as fighting to increase the state trooper police force and their authority, restore public defenders to courts where they had previously been eliminated, expand police powers on probable cause.

CITIZEN DISCOUNT AND BENEFITS FOR FUEL ASSISTANCE

As a freshman representative, McGrath became the first representative in the history of Massachusetts government to be elected chairman of a legislative/gubernatorial commission with unlimited subpoena powers. He chaired a record-setting 57 public hearings on bridges, highways and commercial motor vehicles.

In other legislative efforts and accomplishments, McGrath authored the computer bank of all federal assistance programs, Grants and Benefits Bill, the Iwo Jima Day Law, the Recalling of Retired/Qualified Judges Law, the John F. Kennedy Day Bill, the Mass. Economic Development Corp. Bill, and other special local home rule petition laws.

He co-authored or supported others, including the Revised Capital Punishment Bill, Veterans' Preference Law, the Architectural Barrier Law (for the handicapped), Mass. Maritime Academy, the public service fellowship program for jobs for Massachusetts, Professional Nursing Regulation Law, the State Uniform Criminal Code Commission Bill, the Annual Street List of Voters Law, the Military Firearm I.D. Card Law, the Mass. Highway Code Revision Law and many educational bills, laws and funding.

During four consecutive years, McGrath maintained a perfect 100 percent attendance record and a 99.5 percent roll call record answering more than 2,200 roll calls.

McGrath presently resides at 37 Oak Street, Tempest Knob, Wareham, with his wife, Bettye, along with his nephew, Kevin, a junior at Wareham High School.

Anyone interested in assisting McGrath in his campaign can write to him at his home address or call him at 295-0359.

After the ball... True confessions of a non-debutante

By Lois Martin

Shaking still a bit of slush rather than the dust of Cleveland from my boots, I've rehung my ball gown in the closet way back for the next 'coming out' event.

It was not I who came out in what would have been a socially-disabled move for 'used' debs.

It was my nieces. Those two, Tapleigh and Robin, twin daughters to my singular sister, joined other blooming young women to be presented to parents, peers, countless friends and relatives like an aunt and a cousin who 'went out' to see them 'come out' at the Assembly Ball.

And it is with smug and gladsome pronouncement that I say I got through the entire evening without that crushing urge to swap clothes with anyone. That's an affliction that has been known to grip me at inordinate moments.

And save for the merciless slipping of my right spaghetti strap during fast numbers, my gown and I got by without obtrusive interruption to the de classe evening.

Robin and Tapleigh had invited Terry and me, but it was Mrs. Caspar P.P. (Paul Philip) Kaffke who made that invitation official. I hastened to answer in my childish script, letting her, Kitty Sue (Mrs. Caspar P.P. Kaffke) know that I accepted the invitation with pleasure.

To tell you the truth, that pleasure was founded, with all due respect to Kitty Sue, on the opportunity to visit my sister Marilyn (who's older than I by 2.1 years), her husband Dick and the kids, the girls and Rick.

I've never been there to see them. They live in Shaker Heights where I confused homes with a library or a town hall or an elementary school. Finally I became inured to the mammoth structures so that I wondered if Republic Steel was just another house for somebody.

Jesting, just jesting.

If the girls' mother came out, it was in the 50s (mid, mid) as did her sister, maybe it was the time we both cheered in Boston Garden in the New England basketball tournament. Or, for me, for whom spontaneity is ubiquitous, the day I said, "Here comes Miss America," just before I fell the entire flight of stairs into a friend's bridal shower.

At any rate, we did it differently. And it was enthralling to see it done in the true style.

The Assembly Ball was held at the Union Club in Cleveland. The weather had dumped slush, sleet and snow on the thoroughfare, slowing but not stopping the event.

The munificence of gowns exhibited offered for a voyeur a spectacle of a fashion show. And the debs in their maiden white gowns beset the festival with the aura only youth can include. The gents were in tuxes, naturally. And as Dick, their Dad, escorted Rob & Tap down the stairs in their moment of presentation, I found merit in such tradition. Both primitive and civilized tribes have exercised rituals since time immortal. Coming out is the elitist form of society's due paid to the young. More realistically the event lets parents and loved ones view the nearly grown young women and even the young men who qualify as ushers, in their finest fettle, the good stuff.

There had been parties and a (high) tea on days preceding the ball. There had been fittings and cleanings and flowers sent to the debutantes. There had been a parade of young men and women through their house and a finite timing on use of the showers.

Most of all there had been unabused merriment in the getting ready and then in the ball. It was a new experience that included the meeting of people who live in and near that city. They're patrons of it really, noting its clinic and its playhouse. Frankly, I didn't look a lot at the municipality. I'm more likely to view the inhabitants. And it was my pleasure.

No sense teasing Terry to organize a 'coming out' for his group so I can wear my gown again. I'll simply save it for an important Selectmen's meeting once I get that spaghetti strap secured.

Stop & Shop provides carts for the handicapped

Specially designed shopping carts for the handicapped are now available at all Stop & Shop supermarkets.

Constructed to attach by chain loop hooks to the arms of a wheelchair, the carts are considerably lighter than the average shopping cart and allow greater maneuverability between aisles.

The carts have a wide wheel based to ensure stability for the operator, and all parts of the basket are within reach from the wheelchair.

Stop & Shop's checkout counter aisles are wider to accomodate the cart and wheelchair and are marked with the handicapped symbol. Handicap parking spaces are those closest to the store and are wider than normal to facilitate movement should special equipment be required by the handicapped.

"ALWAYS THE LEADER"

A historical review of Cohasset's fire engines

By David Wadsworth,
Historical Society Curator

At the Town Meeting of March 1848, Cohasset voters decided to provide the town with its first fire engine and fire headquarters building.

Up until that time there had been no way to prevent total destruction of homes and structures by fire, and the rate of attrition among the town's buildings had been unfortunately high.

During the early 1800's a citizen's petition had circulated through Cohasset asking for the purchase of firefighting equipment, but the only result produced was the equipping of a group of volunteers "Fire Wards" or wardens with fire hooks, buckets and ladders.

The efforts of the Fire Wards, though often courageous, usually was in vain, and numerous Cohasseters were rendered homeless when their houses and possessions fell victim to conflagrations.

Recognizing the need for improved firefighting capabilities, the 1848 Town Meeting appointed a committee comprised of Thomas Smith, Zaccheus Rich and Samuel Nichols to obtain a fire engine and a building to house it. The result was the construction of a wood and brick building at Cohasset Center and the acquisition of a horse-drawn "hand tub" pumper engine named "Independence."

The new fire station took the name of its engine and still is known as the Independence building. By 1850 the hand-tub pumper occupied the lower floor of the station and a large room in the second story was called "Engine Hall." This was headquarters of the volunteer group known as the Independence Fire Company, the crew of the pumper.

At that time, the town's fire company received no pay for their duty, but instead received an annual abatement, amounting to a few dollars, of each man's Poll Tax.

A trained team of horses to pull the engine was housed in a large building then existing at the corner of Ripley Road and Depot Court and called Tilden's Stables.

When the fire bell sounded, the horses, accompanied by one man, could be seen to leave the stable at full gallop, headed for the engine house a short distance away.

Pausing just long enough for the "Independence" to be attached, the team with its engine and crew would depart at full speed in the direction of the blaze.

During its long career as the town's fire engine, "Independence" served at the dangerous Lawrence Wharf fire on December 25, 1890, which threatened to destroy numerous buildings at Cohasset's Harbor.

Josiah O. Lawrence's old fish-packing shed was consumed in that blaze, but nearby structures were saved, including today's "Old Salt House" and the Historical Society's Maritime Museum, at that time located across Border Street near the wharf.

In the twilight of its active career the old hand-tub was pressed into service again in December of 1905 when Edward Everett Ellms' barn caught fire at Cohasset Center.

Supplementing the town's new firefighting system of hydrants, "Independence" was stationed near the Hillside Inn (today's Red Lion Inn) to quell a spreading conflagration which for a time threatened to engulf the entire village.

But by the 1930's the era of hand-operated horse-drawn fire engines had ended and the "Independence" honorably retired. Selectmen, searching for a suitable place to store the antique engine, finally had it placed in the old Town Home building at Pond Street, from which it subsequently passed into obscurity when that building was demolished in 1943.

A second horse-drawn hand-tub pumping engine, called "Konahasset," appeared on the local scene, owned not by the town but by a group of firefighters called the "Volunteer Veteran Firemen's Association."

Founded in 1911, the "Vol Vets" maintained their headquarters in the Guild Hall at the Cove (today's Legion Hall).

'Konahasset, like its municipal counterpart "Independence," was operated by a crew who worked the engine's pump by pushing up and down a set of rails which ran along the sides of the carriage.

"Konahasset" had been constructed in 1865 by the firm of Al Button & Sons of New York and dwarfed its companion "Independence" by measuring some 17 feet in length.

"Konahasset" was used primarily for competition in Firemen's Musters and Drills, but certainly stood ready to be pressed into emergencies if needed.

The old pumper, its brasswork gleaming and resplendent with its bright red paint, was a familiar sight on the streets of Cohasset for many years. However, "Konahasset" eventually faded into obscurity and finally vanished from the scene as did the Vol Vets, its owners.

For years the location of the two old hand-tubs was shrouded in mystery. Rumors said the relics of "Independence" and "Konahasset" still existed somewhere on the South Shore, but their whereabouts, if in fact they still survived, was uncertain to many.

It was only a few years ago that uncertainty became dispelled when an anonymous donor first contacted the Cohasset Historical Society with word that both engines did exist and could be returned to Cohasset if the townspeople wanted them.

Since then, "Konahasset" has returned, and "Independence" appears about to return. Still to be accomplished is the important task of restoring the old engines to their former glory.

At the S. Shore Art Center . . .

Entry dates for the South Shore Art Center All New England Juried Show are Jan. 8 for those artists wishing to submit slides of their work and Feb. 3 receipt of all original work.

The Jan. 8 deadline is optional for artists living within a 25-mile radius of the South Shore Art Center located at 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. All original work must be delivered to the Center Feb. 3 between 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. for the final judging.

Awards to be given in the Visions of Spring All New England Juried Show are $200 Best of Show, $100 Marion Huse, $25 in each category and the Grumbacher Gold Medallion for Painting. Awards will be announced at the opening reception Feb. 12 from 5 to 7 p.m. The exhibit continues through March 5.

The theme, Visions of Spring, may be broadly interpreted in any medium technique or style ranging from realism to abstraction. Categories include painting (oils and acrylics), painting (watercolor), drawing and pastels, prints, three dimensional and mixed media. The All New England Juried Photography Show will be featured in March. and information will be available shortly.

The entry fee for this year's show is $5 per entry and is non-refundable. There is a limit of three entries in all categories. Final judging for the show will be Feb. 5.

Jurors for Visions of Spring are Nancy Miller, curator of the Rose Art Museum, Brandeis University; Barnett Rubenstein, teacher of painting and art history, Boston Museum School; and Obie Simonis, sculptor whose public commissions stretch from east to west coast.

Miller was formerly the curator of education at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston and the Albright Knox Gallery, Buffalo, N.Y.

An artist whose work is represented in many Boston collections, Rubenstein was educated at the Massachusetts College of Art and the Boston Museum School. He has studied with Carl Zerbe and Oscar Kokosha.

Simonis has public commissions at the Oregon State Capital Revenue Building, Safeco Plaza in Seattle, University of Alaska, Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, Cambridge University in England, Aeroject General Corp. in Los Angeles and other places. He holds a BFA from the University of Oregon and has served as the artist-in-residence at Lewis and Clark College in Portland.

For further information regarding entries, call the Center, 383-9548, or write to the South Shore Art Center for a detailed brochure. Slides which are sent to the center must be clearly marked with the artist's name, title, size and medium.

For people who are outside the South Shore area, they may have their work transported to the center via M.L. Lank. Arrangements may be made by calling 338-4922. Pick up points for Lank are 54 Thayer St. in Boston and 11 School St. in Rockport, Mass.

Three artists, three different styles of art will come together for the South Shore Art Center's January show.

The first exhibit of the new year at the Center will feature imprints by V.M. Allen, laminated wood artistry by Robert St. Pierre and watercolor landscapes by John Wike. The show opens Jan. 8 with a formal reception from 4 to 6 p.m. and continues through Feb. 4.

"My work is experimental. The images sometimes come from dreams and day dreams, and sometimes from the material I work with," said Allen, describing her work. For her, printing is seductive because, as she believes, any image can be changed with each print by design or accident and each time it means something different.

Allen is a professor and program director of art history at Massachusetts College of Art. She has had one-person shows at Bentley College Art Gallery, Thomas Crane Library and Bazza Gallery in Oklahoma City and has participated in numerous group shows including the South Shore Art Center's shows at the Prudential Center and the Federal Reserve Bank, the National A.A.U.W. Centennial Exhibition at Boston University and various group shows at Massachusetts College of Art.

Her awards, both for art and academics, include the National Endowment for the Humanities, a summer stipend in 1980; graduate scholarship, Boston University; award of merit in painting from the Pittsburgh Society of Artists; first prize in religious painting, Halfway Art Gallery; a teaching fellowship at Yale and she is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She received her Ph.D. from Boston University in 1979.

A self-taught artist, St. Pierre's laminated wood vessels are not turned on a lathe; they are created entirely by hand using band and sabre saws, an assortment of rasps and files and various sanding techniques.

His work as a cabinetmaker and carpenter has given a close affinity with wood and even as a child "I realized and felt the great amount of supernatural powers it possesses within its fibers and year-rings," St. Pierre said. He sees wood as a magical material, quite alive and never truly dead.

He has had one-person shows at the Barnside Tavern in Hanover, Hingham Institution for Savings, Plymouth Five in Kingston and John Curtis Library in Hanover, and has participated in various group shows.

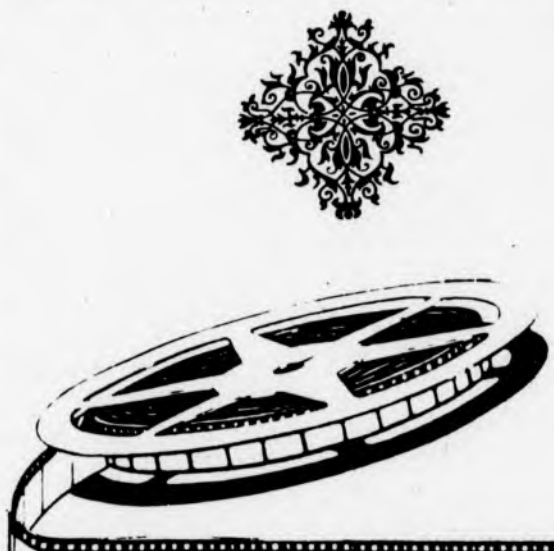
His awards include firsts at the Duxbury Art Association 14th Annual Festival; a second place at Duxbury Art Association's Winter Juried Show; honorable mention at the South Shore Arts Festival and the Cape Cod Art Association's All New England Show; excellence in abstract at the Plymouth Outdoor Show; and the president's award, Quincy Art Association's Professional Art Award.

He is associated with numerous art associations and is represented in the Scituate Galleries, Golden Gull Gallery, Copley Society New Members Gallery, Spectrum of American Artists and Craftsmen and others.

As a woodsman and naturalist for the better part of his life, John Wike believes his task as an artist is to "preserve and record segments of our natural surroundings before they vanish."

He works primarily in watercolor and pastel and "my technique is basically straightforward, yet with an effort for sensitivity and subtlety."

Wike's subject matter includes landscapes, marines, commissioned and non-commissioned portraits, drawings, caricatures and cartoons in charcoal, graphite, conte, pen and ink. His works are represented in numerous private collections in the United States and abroad.



He has had a one-person show at New England Deaconess Hospital and has participated in group shows at the 33rd National Exhibit, Academic Artists Association; the Third New Hampshire Biennial of the Arts; South Shore Arts Festival and various other juried exhibits.

Wike's awards include a first at the South Shore Arts Festival, a third at the Brookline Art Society and honorable mentions at the Brookline Art Society and the Newburyport Art Association. He is affiliated with Visual Artists and Galleries Association, South Shore Art Center, Brookline Art Society and Newburyport Art Association.

Wike has studied with Frances Hamilton, Dean Nimmer and Bernie La Casse at the Massachusetts College of Art and continues his education by taking courses in various programs of continuing education.

Integrating the works of these three artists into one show should prove to create a visually pleasing exhibit of their artistry. The show is open to the public Monday through Friday, from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For information regarding the exhibit or any of the Center's programs, workshops or winter classes, call 383-9548.

Registrations are now being accepted for the next session of classes in painting, drawing, landscape design, photography, figure drawing and children's art.

School budget to rise but teacher cutbacks are expected

The School Dept. 1984-85 Fiscal Year budget was unveiled Monday night with a $21,678 increase over last year, but a 4.5 teacher cutback is expected.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell did not specifically say what positions would be cut.

But he said four and one-half professional positions will be cut and one non-professional position (bookkeeper) would not be restored.

The Advisory Committee already told the School Commiftee, $96,101 more could be spent for the next fiscal year.

However, Crowell said systemwide, the school population will decline bv 82 students, and the committee will be bargaining with three professional units.

Crowell said the major budget controversy will focus on elementary class sizes.

He said, in some grades, the question will be "80."

"With class enrollments of 80, do we hire three or four teachers with class sizes of 21 or 30?" Crowell asked.

The major cuts unveiled Monday night were $24,195 for Grade 3 at the Osgood School, $3,800 for the Osgood administration, $22,000, Grade 5 at the Deer Hill School, and $2,212 for administration.

Deer Hill maintenance was cut $18,906 to bring a total school cut of $43,618.

At the junior-senior high school, the major cuts were: $32,668 for maintenance, $27,803 for Social Studies, $20,039 for the English Dept., and $5,250 for the Guidance Dept.

One area Crowell is not recommending staff cuts is the junior-senior high science staff.

Although enrollment will decline by 45 students, Science Dept. Chairman Samuel Erbe said it's unwise to have even 24 students doing experiments. There are now sections of 30 to 33 students with only 30 stations in the lab.

The committee will begin examining the individual school budgets in two weeks.

Special Town Meeting needs resident support

By Mike Berger

The unraveling of the Fire Dept. problems and an impact study to determine the effect of a sanitary landfill on Lily Pond will highlight Tuesday's Special Town Meeting.

A legal quorum of 200 residents is needed to begin the meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School auditorium.

The most controversial article will probably be Article 4 which asks for the town to raise and appropriate by taxation or available funds money to hire an outside consultant to evaluate the Fire Dept.

A Letter to the Editor, written by Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur, explaining the selectmen's support for the article is published on the editorial pages.

Grievance after grievance filed against Fire Chief Martin Dooley has taken much of the selectmen's time. From residents' oral and written comments, selectmen acknowledge residents want some action taken.

The other warrant articles are in order: $2,000 for sandblasting and stailning of the Bates Building; $47,430 to fund the settlement of Lowrey Bell Jr. vs. the Town of Cohasset and others; changing the town bylaw fine from $100 to $200; and $25,000 for legal services.

Other legal fee articles are asking for $3,075 to pay Goodwin Procter and Hoar Inc. for acting on behalf of the Planning Board in its court complaint against Yankee Oil and Gas and the appeals board in the Cox

Fire Dept. rules curtly discussed

Fire Chief Martin Dooley hopes to finish updating the department's Rules and Regulations as soon as possible, but told Selectmen "you probably won't get them this month."

The issue was curtly discussed at last Wednesday's meeting, with Selectmen telling Dooley to get the job done as quickly as he can.

Selectmen John DeBassio said that "if there is a priority in the Fire Department right now, it has to be Rules and Regs."

Dooley responded that the job "is not something I'm working on every minute of every day. I have other things to do, and I'm just trying to give myself some leeway here."

The Chief explained that Rules and Regulations are broken down into four catagories, some of which contain over 30 rules. The catagories are general rules and regulations, rules of conduct, rules of fire duty, and station rules.

Dooley said he has completed the introduction to the current set (which dates back to 1956 and has been ruled outdated) and is almost done rewriting job descriptions.

"We need to get this out as soon as possible," De Bassio reemphasized "recognizing that the town report

'Smurfs' keep the Skippers rolling

Watch out for them "Smurfs."

They are quick and aggressive and not afraid of anyone.

Who are they?

They can be found usually five days a week running up the basketball floor or stealing the ball away from their opponents.

They are David MacDonald, Tony Bogarty, Brian Edwards, Bobby Schultz and Floyd Hardwick.

The CHS basketball team is off to a glorious start, 7-1, undefeated in the Small Division of the South Shore League and fresh from a 57-40 win over Scituate Tuesday night.

The media is crediting Coach Ed Minelli with the fast start but Minelli said the success is the players' and the Cohasset fans.

The Smurfs are the fast and quick team. Their ballhawking defense and speed have combined into a cohesive unit which will outrun and eventually outplay their taller opponents.

But the Smurfs aren't the only ones.

The other team players are Captain David Barcomb, James Creed, Peter Caruso, Phil Bernstein, John O'Connell and Chris Kuhn.

Last year the team was 9-11 and everyone seemed to sense this was the year for the Skippers.

They were right so far.

Minelli said the turnaround this year is because the Storm report

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield reported no problem in Tuesday night's eight inch snowstorm. Sanding and salting equipment was sent out at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday with plows following at 11 p.m.

Five four-wheel town trucks and 12 hired contractors were sent out. The men worked around the clock and were still sanding and salting Wednesday afternoon.

Litchfield said everything as of Wednesday morning was in good shape and schools were set to resume Thursday morning. He added everyone stayed off the road which aided plowing operations.

Selectmen award contract for sandblasting Bates Building

Regarding sandblasting of the Bates Building, Chairman Mary Jane McArthur outlined the advantages of sandblasting early, months prior to staining the building.

Selectmen authorized the Executive Secretary to award the contract for sandblasting of the Bates Building to A.M.E.X., 22 Central St., Hingham, for the base price of $2,075 if it can be done without additional cost for tarps.

Open burning permitted

Open burning in Cohasset will be permitted from Jan. 15 through May 1 inclusive.

Permission to conduct burning may be obtained by calling Fire Headquarters at 383-0260 on the day burning is to be conducted.

Residents are reminded of permit conditions which are as follows:

Burning of grass, hay, leaves, and stumps is prohibited.

Permit hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All fires are to be extinguished by 4 p.m.

All burning must be conducted at a distance greater than 75 feet from any dwelling.

Open burning must be conducted without causing a nuisance.

Determination as to whether burning will be conducted on any given day is made by the Fire Department. Dry or windy weather conditions may suspend permit issuance.

For further questions regarding Open Burning, call the Cohasset Fire Department at 383-0260.

Zoning bill defeated

Legislation which would have stripped local zoning boards of a portion of their power died Jan. 3 with the close of the 1982 legislative session.

The bill, which required only final passage before being sent to Governor Dukakis for his approval, placed a three-year freeze on changes on any lot on a finished street.

All lots that had perimeter plans on file with the town would have been effected, according to a letter sent to Selectmen by James W. Segel, executive director of the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

In his letter dated Dec. 23, Segel urged local officials to call their State representatives to push for the bill's defeat. He noted that because zoning boards do not have to approve perimeter plans, "the community's ability to solve such problems as excessive density is delayed by three years" if the bill became law.

Segel also said that a current law has already frozen the zoned use of the land, be it commercial, residential, industrial or other.

Selectmen were given copies of this letter at their Jan. 4 meeting, and voted to send letters to their representatives, unaware that the measure had already died the day before.

A representative of the MMA said Friday that the bill would have to go through the full legislative process again this year before it could reach the Governor's desk and be signed into law.

Public hearing Feb. 16

The Board of Sewer Commissioners in accordance with the applicable provisions (Codified Federal Regulations) will have a public meeting to be held at the Town Hall Tuesday, Feb. 16 at 7:30 p.m.

At this meeting the Sewer Commissioners and their consultant, Ward Engineering Associates, will make a presentation of findings and alternatives for final analysis including preliminary cost estimates, the environmental considerations, and the administrative requirements for each alternative.

The input received from the public at this meeting will assist the commissioners and their consultant in the selection of the most acceptable alternative and to prepare the final plan for public debate and for public hearing in April.

Residents are reminded that copies of the Ward "Preliminary Study of Alternative to Current Facilities Plan for Wastewater Management" are in the library for background information.

Between now and the meeting date, more information on each alternative will be provided in the press.

LICENSE RENEWALS

Class II Motor Vehicle Dealers:

Cohasset Auto Body: In light of the Building Inspector's cited zoning violations at Cohasset Auto Body and the Executive Secretary's report that used auto sales are not Cohasset Auto Body's principal source of business, Cohasset Auto Body's license was not renewed for 1984.

Schiavo Auto Sales: Chairman Mary Jane McArthur reported she had spoken with John Schiavo concerning the various zoning violations cited by the Building Inspector and secured his promise that the violations would be corrected as soon as possible. No action was taken on Schiavo's Auto Sales application for a Class II Motor Vehicle Dealers license application.

Pilgrim Auto: In light of the Building-Zoning Inspector's cited zoning violation at Pilgrim Auto, no action was taken on its 1984 license renewal application.

Mitchell's Repair Shop: Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said that Mitchell's Repair Shop indicated on its application that used auto sales are not its principal source of business which makes Mitchell's ineligible for a license.

The Car Barn: Selectmen renewed the Car Barn's Class II Motor Vehicle Dealers License for 1984 with the stipulation that its cars for sale be parked in a manner that provides adequate space for motor vehicles to park when they pull off the highway.

Beechwood Auto Sales: Selectmen renewed Beechwood Auto Sales Class II Motor Vehicle Dealers License with the stipulation that the freestanding sign be removed.

Sunoco (corner of Rte. 3A and King St.): Lanza informed the Board that the current license holders, the Brown Brothers, moved their business location during 1983 to Depot St. and wish to transfer the license to that location.

Ken's Foreign Auto Repair: In light of Executive Secretary Lanza's report that Ken's Foreign Auto Repair did not indicate that used auto sales were its principle source of business and the various zoning violations cited by the Building-Zoning Inspector, the Board took no action on Ken's renewal application for 1984.

In light of the Zoning Inspector's observation that there are too many cars parked too close to the street on Brown Brother's Depot St. lot, the Board instructed Executive Secretary Lanza to write a letter to the Brown Brothers instructing them to park the excess cars awaiting owner pick-up in the adjacent municipal parking lot.

has to be done, and also recognizing that there is no clerical help. But this is a case of rewriting, not writing from scratch."

Dooley, who has been working on the project for six months, finally asked the Board when they would like the job done.

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle responded "I'd be satisfied if we had them by the end of February," but told Dooley not to push it.

Dooley answered that he would hurry, and the discussion ended.

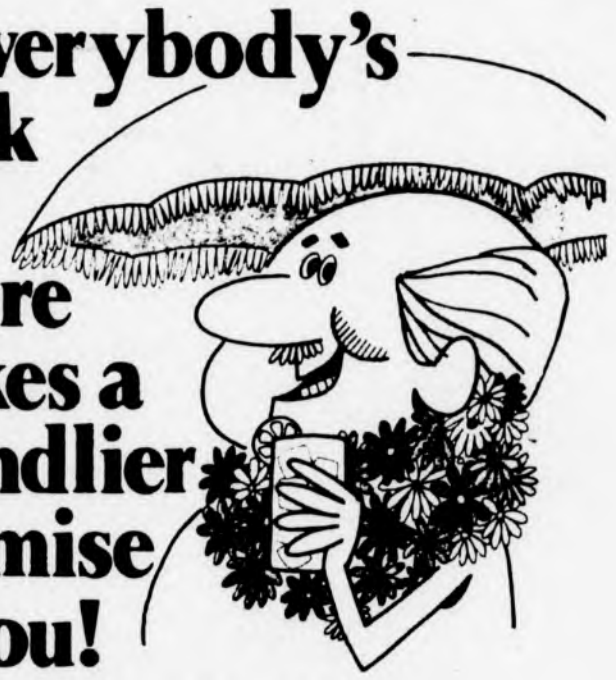
Who should be 'Person of the Year'?

Now that 1983 is history, who in town should be Cohasset's man or woman of the year?



Who has done or accomplished the most for the public good without fanfare or without much public recognition?

There are no requirements except the person should either be a resident or own a business in Cohasset.

Please send nominations and a brief reason for selection to the Mariner through Box 71, Cohasset, or the drop spots at Hennessey's News or Colonial Pharmacy.

The top three winners will be interviewed and photographed.

Cohasset Community Center winter programs

The Cohasset Community Center winter course registration continues. Most winter courses begin the week of Jan. 23, and class size is limited. Call 383-0088 weekdays between 9 and 1 to sign up for any course or workshop.

Two courses begin early and must be registered for immediately . A "Sunday Writing Seminar," taught by Tanna Kasperowicz and Joanne Young Nawn, begins this week, and runs for eight Sundays from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Students from 10 to 14 years-old with problems in writing will find this course invaluable in developing the skills necessary to communicate clearly and concisely. Often success in school depends upon ease in written expression.

Also beginning early is a four week "Puppet Making Workshop," Tuesdays, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., with Pat Boylan. Children, seven to eleven years old, will learn to create and perform with their own puppets.

New courses for children this winter include "Computers for Children." Wednesdays from 4:15 to 5:15 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. This eight-week course, taught by Wayne Thomas, will give students aged nine to 13 years-old instruction in programming, graphics and games.

Gymnastics has been expanded to include a "Mom and Me" program for toddlers under three years-old on Tuesdays from 2 to 2:45 p.m. and a "Gym Toddler's Fitness" Tuesdays from 3 to 3:45 p.m. for children three to four years-old.

Ruthann and Richelle Sargent teach all the popular gymnastics courses, which also include Tumble Tots for boys (Tuesday, 4 to 5 p.m.) and girls (Thursday, 3 to 4 p.m.), Beginner Boys (Friday, 4 to 5 p.m.), several Team courses and workouts, and a Saturday program that offers Tumble Tots for Boys and Girls, Beginners for Boys and Girls, and Intermediate and Advanced instruction.

"Classical Ballet" with Patricia Antoine will be offered Wednesday evenings, 6 to 7 p.m. for children 7 to 10 years-old, and 7 to 8 p.m. for children 10 to 14 years-old. Claire Berman offers "Jazz" on Monday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m.

Always popular courses returning are "Karate" with Bob Blaisdell, Wednesday afternoons, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. for children five to nine years-old, and 4:30 to 5:30 for children 10 to 12 years-old. "Bowling" with Bill O'Connell, will be held on Tuesdays or Thursdays, from 3 to 4 p.m. for Grade K-3. Marsha Serafin will teach "Cartooning" children nine to 16 years-old Mondays from 4 to 6 p.m.

High School students can prepare for a very important test with "SAT Preparation," taught by Gino DiGirolamo and Ron Emmons, begining Feb. 1, and continuing for five weeks.

High School and Adults will be interested in a new computer course, "Pascal Programming," on Tuesday evenings. Dennis Walsh teaches this, as well as "Computer Course for the Novice," Thursday evenings. Both courses are held at Cohasset High School.

A unique course for any woman 13 years-old and up, particularly those who may be moving to dormitories or apartments next year, is "Rape Prevention and Awareness," an assault prevention course taught by Bob Blaisdell on Sunday evenings.

Three exercise courses are being offered. Joanne Sheppard continues her "Exercise for Total Fitness" daily from 9 to 10 a.m. Joanne Wido Lehr will teach a new "Aerobic Dance" class Tuesday and Thursday evenings for men and women. Deborah Ketcham offers specialized exercise instruction for women both before and after childbirth.

"Pre-natal exercises" will be held Monday and Wednesday evenings, and "Post-natal exercises" will be Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, 10:15 to 11:15 a.m.

Jane Chatfield will again offer "Getting Better Acquainted With Antiques" Monday mornings, 10 to 11. This course is enlightening and fun whether you are a collector, a hobbyist or have a love for your heritage. Field trips are planned to the Musuem of Fine Arts and the House of Seven Gables.

Make a beautiful "Oriental Rug" with Mary Kelly Tuesday mornings or Thursday evenings. The work done by students in this class is truly living art, and will be valued in their homes for generations. Nancy Clapp will teach you to customize your house and accessories in her "Stenciling" course to be held Tuesday evenings or Thursday mornings for four weeks.

Three workshops will be held in the following weeks. "CPR" will be taught Wednesdays, from 7 to 11, Feb. 1 and 8, by Linda Farrag and Dr. Michael Equi. "Continental Knitting," a rapid method of knitting taught by Laila Roukonakis, will be offered Thursdays, Feb. 2 and 9, from 12 to 2 p.m.

The winter cooking event, "Not Just Spaghetti," with the team of Carol Walls and Anna Abbruzzesse, will be deomonstrated and eaten on Tuesday, Jan. 31, from 7 to 9 p.m. Fresh, homemade pasta in various recipes will be enjoyed by all.

Cohasset Community Center is again sponsoring a dance at Hugo's Lighthouse. The dance will be held Jan. 27, from 8:45 to 12:45 with music provided by the Band 3 A.M.

Osgood School awarded $600 grant

The Joseph Osgood School has been awarded a $600 grant under the Artists-in-Residence program of the Institute for the Arts.

In a letter to the school, Institute Director Richard Friedman said, "We are pleased to have you as our partners in this, the first year of the Institute, a new comprehensive arts in education initiative of the Cultural Education Collaborative."

Dancer Glenda Medeiros will work at the school from Feb. 27 to April 13 with Helen Pratt in the physcial education program. Dance experiences and self-expression are the key components of the program.

The Osgood School hosted theater and poetry residency programs the last two years under the auspices of The Artists Foundation.

Medeiros, a dancer and choreographer, has taught extensively throughout New England and in Great Britain. The objectives of her dance program are "to stimulate new ways of seeing and thinking about the world." She hopes her students will "experience heightened body awareness, gain greater confidence in themselves and their work, move freely and spontaneously and share personal expression and expand creativity."

During the residency she will work on her own choreography, conduct a teacher workshop which will focus on her work and how it relates to teaching and her curriculum goals at the school, and will meet with all classes for movement dance workshops.

She may also develop a small, high interest group to work on a special project.

The total cost of the four week program is $1,550. Additional funding is being provided from Mass. block grant funds of $750, $50 from the Osgood School budget and $150 from the PSO.

Site coordinator for the program is Helen Pratt, with teachers Dorothy Montouri, Sue Schadhauer, Shirley Tewksbury and Marilyn D'Angelo assisting on the residency committee.

This program was coordinated with the assistance of the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee.

players are more experienced and the players are familiar with the coaching system.

Even Minelli acknowledges the team is a year or two away from even better performances.

The biggest factor this year is the players realize they know how to win.

"Last year it was if we were behind, it was panic time. This year we know we have the ability to come back ," said Minelli.

Another big factor this year is the community support. Fans have been following the team to Norwell, the Scituate Christmas tournament. Minelli says the bigger the crowds, no matter how vocal, the better it is for the team.

"Anticipating we will make the playoffs, the more we play before large and vocal crowds, the better. The students are learning to mature in crucial situations an1 are not wilting under pressure," said Minelli.

He added, "This year we are taking the initiative and aren't afraid to attack."

This was evident Tuesday night. Minelli said the Scituate victory was the best team win he has seen.

Bogarty hurt his knee in gym class but still played. "It was an effort just for him to walk, let alone play," said Minelli.

Creed and Barcomb were in early foul trouble and played only eight minutes.

Off the bench came Bernstein, Hardwick, Schultz and Caruso to play "tremendously."

The leading scorers were MacDonald and Creed who scored ten points, followed, by Edwards, 9, Barcomb, 7 and Bogarty, and Bernstein, each with six points.

Here is a mini-capsule of each player.

David Barcomb, a 6-1 senior forward and team captain, averaging 20 points a game; Tony Bogarty, a 5-8 sophomore guard, averaging 15 points per game; James Creed, a 6-5 sophomore center, averaging, 15 points, 18 rebounds and seven blocked shots.

Others are: David MacDonald, a 5-9 junior guard, averaging eight points per game; Brian Edwards, a 5-10 forward, an eighth grader who has started several games and hit for 15 points and Bobby Schultz, a 5-8 sophomore guard, an excellent defensive player and the team's first player off the bench.

Peter Caruso is a 5-11 senior forward, a good rebounder and according to Minelli, "strong off the boards."

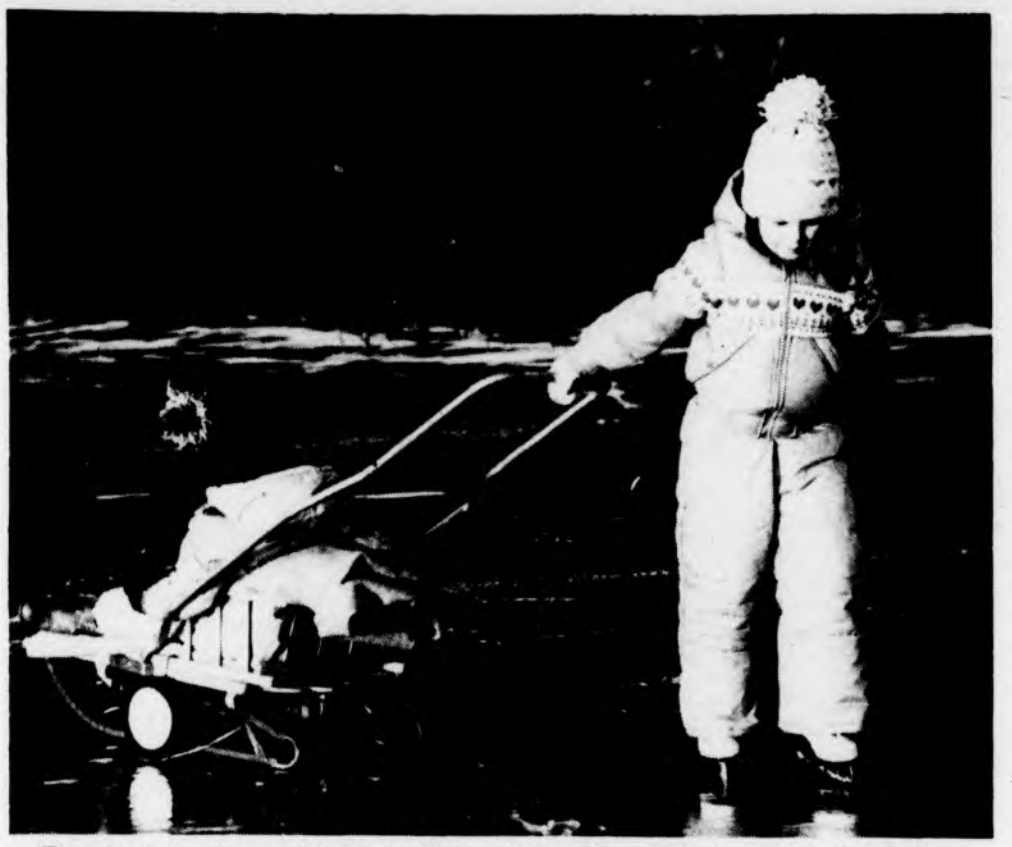
☐Eight women, former members of the Time Study department at the Old Hingham Shipyard, held a 40th year reunion recently at Hugo's restaurant. It was in January 1943 that women were selected for the first time for this kind of work, and about 20 percnt of the 100-member Time Study group were women at the old World War II shipyard. (This shipyard gained national recognition for producing ships for the Navy at the lowest cost in the country.)

The following women were present at the Time Study get-together: Mrs. Mildred Keith and Mrs. Emma Locke of Scituate, Mrs. Louise Hopkins (a long-time resident of Scituate, now living in Wareham), Mrs. Hazel Cornwell of Pembroke, Mrs. Sylvia Carlson of Canton, Mrs. Margaret Clark of Milford, Connecticut (a former Cohasset resident), Mrs. Lillian Capello of Cohasset and Mrs. Isabelle Totovian and her guest, Mrs. Jean Matakian, both of Watertown.

Management of Hugo's served the group complimentary champagne in honor of the occasion. The women's group had been meeting periodially over the years since the closing of the Hingham shipyard several years ago.



☐The 1983 Annual Massachusetts Easter Seal Society Banner Month fundraising campaign was successfully held throughout November in many Cohasset establishments.

During Banner Month, personnel at participating establishments have been asking their customers to support the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society by donating $1 or more to benefit programs and services for disabled children and adults.

Chairman of Banner Month in Cohasset was William Protrulis of the Cohasset Fire Department.

Support of the Annual Banner Month fundraising campaign benefits physical, speech and occupational therapy programs and services as well as camping, area swim programs and stroke clubs.

☐Things will certainly have a different look around the Town Hall, now that Peg Ramsay has left her post as administrative secretary to the selectmen. For the past 11 years Peg could be spotted at her "desk at the top of the stairs," and her smile was always a welcome relief after making the climb to the "halfway point." Through her job, Peg got to know the town thoroughly and rapidly, as well as all of the townspeople and its workers. Best of luck to Peg in her new career, that being an employee for the state at the Massachusetts Archives at Columbia Point in Boston.

Perched in the vehicle is Robert Buckley who's being hauled across a properly frozen pond by skating sister Candice.

☐Happy birthday to Nora Leary.

☐Received a nice note from Gordon Ricketts last week. Gordon is on board the USS Independence, and was there for Christmas. He wanted to be sure to thank his teachers and friends that signed the Christmas card they sent to him, and to say "Hi" to all. Gordon reports that he hopes to be home in the spring, depending on the "war situation." As he wrote his letter, Gordon was awaiting the arrival of Bob Hope, Miss Venus, Cathy Lee Crosby and Brooke Shields He said that he could only think how much the Music Circus would like that booking.) Finally, he wanted to be sure to tell his Mom "I love her."

☐Pat, Alice, Sean and Brendan McCarthy had a grand trip to California recently, including a visit to Indian Wells Golf and Country Club. One of the championship golf courses was selected to host the Bob Hope Desert Classic. They came home with nifty hats, and maps of the course for all the avid golfers to follow.

☐Here's hoping that Norbert Reardon is well on his way to recovery after his recent surgery. Norbert is a patient at South Shore Hospital, but not for long, we hope!

☐Congratulations to the hockey team, on their win over Rockland. It is sure to be the first of many — support them. And continued success to the basketball teams, boys and girls, for their outstanding records. Hopefully the next time the girls are scheduled to play, the lights will stay on!

☐The Community Center is in the spotlight for the month. It recently mailed out its lengthy schedule, including something for everyone. And, be sure to reserve Jan. 27, the date of their annual dance. The dance will be held at Hugo's Lighthouse, and only 200 tickets will be sold. See a member of the Board or inquire at the Center.

☐It was unanimous! In an un-official poll taken for the best decorations at Christmastime, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mulcahy of 79 Pond Street were the grand winners. For those that didn't see the house, Santa was at the top of the ladder, halfway in the window. He was in the spotlight all during the holidays, and it was certainly a treat for all of those who drove by. Truly the talk of the town.

☐These holidays marked a special time for Ken and Sue Fone, as they celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary in the midst of all the other activities. Congratulations and best wishes! They also received great news at Christmastime, when their son, Scott. became engaged.

☐Best wishes to Terry (England) and Chris Duggan as they move into their new Cohasset home to begin married life in their hometown.

☐Laurens MacLure of Cohasset has been named a member of the Corporation and the Board of Trustees of the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston.

As a member of the Corporation and Trustee, he will be part of a nationwide group of individuals who advise the Center on matters of policy and finances.

MacLure is President of New England Deaconess Hospital, a post he has held since 1975. He was previously Senior Vice President of The Boston Company.

His civic and charitable affiliations include serving as a Director of Blue Cross of Massachusetts; Corporator of Provident Institution for Savings; Trustee, Wheelock College; and Director, Controlled Risk Insurance Company.

He is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Business School.

☐Sally Sisson, daughter of Ruth Sisson of Cohasset, is an intern at Cavanaugh and McGuire consulting firm. Sisson, a communications concentrator at Simmons College in Boston, is responsible for researching and implementing an effective public relations and marketing program for the firm's management communications and training systems. She is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Army National Guard Pvt. John M. Hernan, son of Thomas and Margaret Hernan of 558 Beechwood St., Cohasset, has completed basic training at Fort Dix, N.J. During the training, students received instructions in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions. He is a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Lisa Seadale is a celebrity! The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ed Seadale, Lisa was married here last summer to Mike Hurst and they now make their home in Corpus Christi, Texas. Lisa's new job is making television commercials, and starts out by saying, "Hello, my name is Lisa Hurst." Consequently, everywhere that Lisa goes in Corpus Christi people know her and call her by name.

☐Now that the busy time of the year is behind us, and a new year has started, be sure to get your news to me. Your news is everyone's news, and it's great to share it.

S.S. Art Center unveils solution to 'red eyes'

The "red eye special" or better recognized as a photo taken with a flash and the picture comes back with the subjects having red eyes. Learn the secret solution to this problem and enjoy good photography by participating in a photography class.

Photography enthusiasts who want to sharpen their skills would benefit by enrolling in a South Shore Art Center photography course.

Learning to use one's camera effectively may relieve the heartbreak of getting pictures which are over-exposed, underexposed, not exposed at all, out of focus, with legs cut off or eyes crossed or with any of the other numerous pitfalls that happen to pictures.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd., is offering a number of courses on its winter schedule which focus on the techniques of good photography and on darkroom developing procedures.

Advanced registration is required for all classes.

Paul Fortin's Monday night class from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Jan. 23 is for the beginning photographer in color or black and white.

This lecture course covers all the basics including F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, composition, lighting and subject matter. Emphasis is recognizing elements of good photography and how to apply it to one's work.

His intermediate-advanced photography, meeting Wednesday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 beginning Jan. 18, will explore various subjects including portrait, people and landscape.

The emphasis is how to train the student's eye and to learn to evaluate work. Both black and white and color will be used.

Fortin holds a BS from the University of Rhode Island and a diploma from the New England School of Photography. He is a freelance photographer, lecturer and reviewer.

The two John Goldie classes, both meeting Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., beginning Jan. 19, are geared to darkroom procedures.

His beginning course emphasizes darkroom techniques and explores the aesthetics of photography in an intensive time frame.

The eight classes will be divided into four sessions each one dealing with a specific area of photography and developing.

His intermediate class is a demonstration-lecture-critique approach to working in the darkroom. Intermediate students will concentrate on sequences and projects toward developing a finer print. The more advanced students will explore special techniques to suit individual needs. Admittance is based on a portfolio review.

Goldie, an award-winning photographer with Old Colony Memorial and Mirror newspapers, holds an AB from Harvard. He was formerly assistant manager of Northeast Color Research.

The Center's darkroom is also available for use for two-hour sessions when the Center is open. The darkroom is for black and white film only.

ARTISTS COURSE

David Tandy, an artist and instructor familiar to many adults, will teach a course for young artists at the South Shore Art Center.

His course, High School Workshop, the Fundamentals for Young Adults, will begin Thursday, Jan. 19, meeting from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd. Advanced registration is reqired for all classes at the Center.

Tandy's class offers a foundation program for high school artists to develop talents. He will concentrate on refining the students' drawing and painting skills with a focus on color and good design and learning various drawing and painting techniques.

Tandy, who exhibits in both Boston and England, has his MFA froim Massachusetts College of Art and his MA from Chelsea School of Art in London. He is an assistant professor at Massachusetts College of Art continuing education department and Mt. Ida Junior College.

Other courses in the Center Young Artist department include Marjorie Vining's Portfolio Preparation Projects, beginning Jan. 21 and meeting Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon. The course will have students develop specific illustration projects which can be used in a portfolio and is based on a pre-college course taught by the instructor at the Rhode Island School of Design.

Susan Rodgerson's Junior High Workshop beginning Friday, Jan. 20, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., will explore the use of a variety of materials used in combination with one another.

Activities will stress individual expression and explore various art concepts. The course is designed for children 12 to 14 years-old.

Syma's Child's Clay and Sculpture, beginning Monday, Jan. 23, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., will combine clay, cardboard, wood, recycled materials and lots of imagination to create three-dimensional art work and to teach youngsters basic design.

The Children's Art Workshop I, for children six to eight years-old, will begin Jan. 19 and meet on Thursdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. This course, taught by Lisbeth Wy man, includes sketching, drawing and painting and working from nature in a variety of mediums. The course will emphasize color, design, observation and imagination.

Susan Rodgerson's Children's Art Workshop II, for children nine to 12 years-old, begins Wednesday, Jan. 18, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., and will cover the same things as the Workshop I but on a higher level.

For a copy of the complete winter schedule of courses for children and adults, workshops, seminars and trips, call the Center, 383-9548. Registrations may be taken over the phone and charged to either Visa or Mastercard.

T.M. attention

Why should you go out into the wintry night air to attend Tuesday's Special Town Meeting?

For two main reasons: Do you care about your drinking water and are you satisfied with the people who put out the fires?

Since July selectmen heard the comments of firefighters and some other town officials feelings. But it is time to hear from the rank and file residents, the residents who usually don't come to Town Hall but pay their taxes.

As we have said before, the Fire Dept. morale is a mess and this isn't the usual contract negotiations. It comes down to respect for men and professional respect among firefighters.

Selectmen Chairman Mary Jane McArthur has written a letter explaining the board's stance on the issue.

But the question still unanswered is what if the outside consultant recommends terminating the chief or taking action against some of the firefighters. What will selectmen do then?

The question on everyone's minds is if the problems can be solved peacefully or have the problems reached the point of no return?

Attend Tuesday night's meeting at 7 p.m. and listen, listen very carefully.

Estate variance settlement.

Another article calls for $10,836 to pay Roche, Carens and DeGiacomo Inc in connection with the case of Harbormaster Harry Ritter vs. William Figueiredo.

There are also money articles to pay Fire Dept. overtime for the rest of the fiscal year and $1,879 for concerning firefighter grievances, arbitration and Civil Service appeal.

The town has an extra $184,000 to spend generated by revenue from motor vehicle excise and license fees and $84,000 reimbursement from the MBTA.

After the nine articles have been acted, selectmen and the Advisory Committee will ask for some money to establish a town stabilization fund which is essentially a capital equipment fund.

The stars tell the story...sort of

By Claire McDonough

Well, folks, it's happening. One after another, the planets have been moving into Capricorn. O.K., so a few are still in Scorpio or Sagittarius, but that's just temporary. They're headed for Capricorn. And you know what that means.

As if that weren't enough, Mercury has been retrograde since Dec. 16. No wonder we couldn't find Cabbage Patch Dolls for Christmas. Oh well, at least we still have Madam Zolar in her chic little ashram on Third Cliff. Madam was good enough to give me some advice for all you astrophiles out there. And not a minute too soon, either.

Aries (March 21 - April 20): Your ruling planet, Mars, is presently in the sign of Libra. This means that you will devote all of your Martian energy to being totally unbalanced. Cheer up. Your actions will be so erratic that people will be even more intimidated by you than usual.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20): You are presently being trined by the Sun. Painful though this may sound, it is actually good news. If you should be one of the fortunate individuals whose employer gave you a season's lottery ticket for Christmas, this may well be your lucky month. Do not be intimidated by the unbalanced Aries who will try to take your winnings away from you.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Your ruling planet is Mercury. Mercury is retrograde. This explains why, for the past few weeks you have been fighting a compelling urge to do everything backward. Be particularly careful in traffic.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Moon children are having an exceptionally difficult time under current planetary aspects. This may be because everything that moves into Capricorn opposes you and you do not take opposition well. This was patent in the life of one of the better known, shy, retiring Cancerians, Henry VIII of England.

Leo (July 23 - August 22): This is not your month. Not only must you cope with a retrograde Mercury and all those planets in Capricorn, but Mars is squaring you. There is no chance in the world that you'll get the homage you feel is your due, and you may find some of your co-workers are downright irreverent.

Virgo (August 23 - September 22): You will be somewhat put out this month, as everyone else is acting in an unbalanced and irrational manner. Naturally, you would not let a thing like planetary configurations disrupt your life, and you will be annoyed by the way inferior beings comport themselves.

Libra (September 23 - October 22): Congratulations! This is another of those rare months when you are in step with the rest of the universe — confused, addled, and forgetful. Enjoy it while it lasts. Everyone else will come out of it during the second half of the month.

Scorpio (October 23 - November 21): A good month for you. While other planetary natives are in a bemused state, you will have an unparalleled opportunity to take advantage of them. Have you considered politics for a career?

Sagittarius (November 22 - December 20): Your mail will be lost, your phone messages will be unreturned, and your alarm clock will break down. Since you prefer things that way anyway, it should be an ideal month.

Capricorn (December 21 - January 20): You have just had, or will soon have a birthday. Congratulations! This explains why you look so much older. Turtleneck sweaters might help.

Aquarius (January 21 - February 18): A bad month! Your zany, unpredictable actions will fail to bring you the attention you so crave, as the local police will be busy elsewhere.

Pisces (February 19 - March 20): People will not have the time to pick on you this month — unless you have a lottery ticket, in which case you may find an Aries who will be willing to intimidate you into giving him your winnings.

Note To All Signs: Pay no attention to an unscrupulous individual who does sun-sign astrology in a newspaper. Remember — Mercury is just as retrograde for her as it is for everyone else.

Selectmen Chairman explains Article 4

Letter

To the Editor:

We would like to call the attention of Cohasset voters to Article 4 at the Special Town Meeting on January 17.

This article requests the Town to appropriate a sum to retain an outside professional to review the operation of the Cohasset Fire Department.

The Selectmen feel it is particularly important to have an outside evaluation of the management, organization, staffing and policies and procedures in the Department at this time:

It has been ten years since such an analysis was carried out.

There are management, staffing and firefighting techniques being used successfully in other fire departments and it is important for Cohasset to determine whether these are appropriate to Cohasset.

A qualified, disinterested third party can assist the selectmen in assessing the professional firefighting issues since there are differences of professional opinion between the chief and the firefighters.

The ongoing conflicts regarding policy and procedures have led to a steady flow of grievances which are resulting in expensive legal fees and taking an inordinate amount of the board's time.

It is the objective of the Selectmen to assure that Cohasset has the highest quality fire protection possible at an acceptable level of cost. We feel that an unbiased assessment of present Department operations, consideration of possible new techniques and a review of current policies and procedures can give Selectmen a sound basis upon which to make the decisions needed to maintain an effective Department.

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

I am quite excited about an act I co-sponsored to authorize Mass. Banks to make reverse mortgages to homeowners who are at least 65 years of age.

Older homeowners find their retirement incomes do not keep up with the cost of living. They are strapped for cash to maintain, heat and pay insurance, and taxes on their homes.

The basic cost of living for food, clothing and an automobile use most of whatever income the majority of elderly have at their disposal.

The wealth they have is tied up in their home. If this money could be released on a monthly plan they would not have to skimp in their sunset years. Who is more deserving than our senior citizens?

They should be able to live in the home they love and stop the disruption of being uprooted from their neighborhood, relatives and conveniences when they are most needed.

This new financing program would be an equity conversion. The finance company (banks, insurance companies, etc.) would re-write their mortgage up to 80 percent of the value of their home. The senior citizen would receive a quarterly payment of approximately $200 per month on the average, depending on the value of their home.

This is a nice supplementary income to loosen the tight budget belt.

The mortgagor would pay taxes and interest on the amount used. These payments would be deducted from the 80 percent equity plus the payment to the homeowner which is also charged interest.

If a person or couple both pass away the outstanding amount borrowed from the mortgagor could be paid off or possibly transferred into a regular mortgage if the heirs wanted to keep the home.

There are several stipulations in this proposed bill. The residence has to be owner occupied and consist of not more than a four unit property.

Several other states are in the process of enabling similar legislation — Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

I believe this legislation could be one of the most significant and beneficial for one of the fasting growing segments of our population in the Bay State and the nation, our senior citizens who are most deserving.

MASSACHUSETTS CAUCUS

"The Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators should be congratulated on their accomplishments this holiday season. I am the immediate past chairman of the Caucus.

Several of the Women's Priorities were signed into law recently.

I called attention to "A bill providing for Day Care facilities." The Commonwealth Child Care Center can now be assured of maintaining the site it occupies at One Ashburton Place.

The new law not only stabilizes this facility but encourages the creation of additional Child Care Centers for the children of state employees.

Another piece of legislation for displaced homemakers which has always been one of my top priorities provides the statutory framework for the displaced homemaker centers was successfully established in the budget.

This is a wonderful program that works. It provides women who have lost the income on which they have lived (due to death, separation or divorce), the opportunity to become self-supporting, not welfare dependent.

A further caucus accomplishment is an item designed to prevent "Child-Napping." Massachusetts now joins the rest of the country in efforts to prevent State Custody Shopping. States have a responsibility to deter a non-custodial parent from kidnapping their child, moving to another state, and petitioning that state's court to change the original order.

The law defines a method of judicial cooperation to enforce other states' orders.

A fourth women's issue of utmost importance was signed into law to protect the victims of domestic violence. In the past two years, nearly 54,000 adults and children have sought help and refuge as a result of violent home situations. Domestic violence is a problem of crisis proportions in our communities.

The new law offers victims help through the court system via temporary restraining orders and police intervention.

Fuel assistance revision

(The following is a copy of a letter to the South Shore Community Action Council. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Hinkley:

"I am writing on behalf of the Board of Selectmen to thank South Shore Community Action Council for its immediate response to our needs by furnishing us with a person to assist Cohasset's needy people in filling out fuel assistance applications for the past month on Friday mornings.

South Shore Community Action Council's quick and accommodating response to our needs was appreciated by the Board of Selectmen and the community at large.

As per Peggy J. Pimentel's letter of December 15, 1983, Cohasset is instructing people who need fuel assistance to file an application with the Scituate Council on Aging on Tuesdays, from 9:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. or to go to the Plymouth office on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Wednesday, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.

Again the Board of Selectmen expresses its sincerest thanks to you for providing Cohasset's needy citizens with a local site to have their fuel assistance applications completed and processed.

Sincerely,
Mark J. Lanza
Executive Secretary

Budget discussions

Selectmen will meet with the Advisory Committee to discuss budgets for the upcoming year, which will go before Town Meeting in April.

The joint sessions will be held on Jan. 10, 26 and 31 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Don't pump the water

Homeowners take notice!

If you are faced with a flooded cellar this winter, do not pump that water out onto the street.

Highway Superintendent Harold Litchfield says the town will not assume responsibility for any accidents resulting from such flood-pumping.

According to town bylaws, it is a violation to pump water onto roads if doing so creates a hazardous situation.

Litchfield said that he has had to send out trucks four times already this year to sand areas where ice has formed as a result of cellar-pumping.

The Clergy Speaks: Competition and a look at 1984

By The Rev. Edward Atkinson

Speaking from a businessman's perspective someone recently asked me who were my strongest competitors. He was in fact asking what other churches there were in Cohasset and which among them was most likely to draw members away from the First Parish. I answered saying that I did not consider other churches as competitors, but rather as co-workers in a common enterprise and differing only in their use of different symbol systems and methodologies. Our strongest competitors I continued to explain are not other churches but our mutual competitor, secularism — that majority of our population that has no church affiliation.

This competition was boldly evident on New Year's Day. Church attendance was poor, and what is perhaps even more symptomatic, church attendance was expected to be poor as our Sunday morning church celebrations this year were to follow an evening of secular celebrations which would render too many people in no condition to rise from their slumbers the next day. Sadly, those secular celebrations lack much of the meaning which religion has attached to the turning of the year in ages past.

In Judaism for example the new year, Rosh Hashanah and the day of atonement, Yom Kippur, which follows it are the highest of holy days. They recognize that, in common, we all need a fresh start from time to time, a time when transgressions are forgiven, when acounts are balanced, when we turn the book of life to a new page.

Though as individuals any day may suffice to begin anew, there is tremendous reenforcement to be gained through making such renewal a communal religious event. It is easier to forgive and forget when others are forgiving and forgetting, too. And when all of this is seen within the larger context of the changing relationship of earth to sun, the winter solstice and the larger perspective of God's forgiveness and love, then we have a time when our churches should be filled to capacity.

"THANK GOODNESS IT IS 1984 AND WE ARE STILL HERE"

Sometimes as rational, modern, scientific-minded individuals, we think we are beyond the power of mythical stories to influence our lives. I must acknowledge, however, that ever since I first read it, George Orwell's "1984" has clouded my thoughts of the future with dire images of enslavement at the hands of Big Brother.

Now, at last the fateful year has arrived, and we are still here and able to gather to express our ideas in freedom. I for one am delighted that the Orwellian spell has at last been broken and hope that some equally talented but more optimistic author may create a happier image to guide us toward 1994. Along this line here are some of the thoughts our members shared at the beginning of 1984 as we looked forward to the next decade:

There will not be a nuclear war. I think the biggest gain will be made in "space" — hopefully the gains in "human relations" will advance too! I predict that new efforts will be made in space research for better control of external conditions for agricultural production.

Peace from Growth through sharing our stories! Women, blacks, elderly speaking out. Eliminating negativity in our own lives. Tolerant uncritical attitudes stressed. I predict that in the next decade we will all come to realize that the responsibility for peace (which is love in action) rests on each one of us and begins in our own hearts — our relationships with ourselves and those close to us.

Ten years from now we will be here; we will have national health insurance; Sweden will be more prominent.

I believe there will be a cure for cancer as sure as vaccine for smallpox. Medical research will continue to solve major problems and provide marvelous and undreamed of treatments.

Despite the interplay of enormous forces — political, economic and social — indeed perhaps the cause of this interplay, the tremendous desire of and for "good" will continue paramount, and enable a continually interesting and better world. The fanatical growth and implementation of the information processing age will foster an ironic environment — not a headlong plunge into scientific hysteria where the layman gets left behind, but one in which we laymen will have the time and luxury to think about and get back to basics — a necessity, in my opinion.

Our (the U.S.) current role in the Middle East will change. How long can we fool ourselves that we are helping "keep the peace" when our service people are "holed up" in a fortress-like compound in Lebanon or flying "sortis" from an aircraft carrier in the Mediterranean? The U.S. and the U.S.S.R. will talk sensibly and "cool" the tense situation now existing to a liveable one.

Increasing world-wide interdependence — decreasing spirit of nationalism. World leaders will respond to people's demand for new creative relationships to assure peace and continued existence. Following the lead of science, people will begin to recognize the impact of love on all human functioning.

Finally, so long as we are successful in continuing to improve the living conditions of those in the third world and to provide hope we will maintain the peace. Arms reduction will have begun at last! — (a hope) The Chicago Cubs will win the world series. Ancient Chinese saying: "To predict is difficult, especially with regard to the future." Happy New Year.

Riding Club supports Rec. Dept. idea

Letter

(Here is a letter sent to selectmen. Ed.)

Dear Selectmen:

The Cohasset Riding Club supports the Recreation Department's proposal for the Penn. Central Railroad bed. This proposal addresses the maintenance of the property for recreational purposes, porhibition of debris dumping, and monitoring of abuttor's use so that it does not interfere with public recreational use.

Specifically, riders use some portion of the railroad bed daily. It provides a safe and valuable pathway for riders and (horse) drivers. Through the years the Riding Club has undertaken certain maintenance measures to insure safe passage for horses and riders.

"Spring cleaning" has involved trimming broken and overgrown branches, picking up a considerable amount of broken glass, trash, shingles, brush, etc., which have been dumped. (We have noticed that trash dumping has increased the past few years.) We are willing to continue taking an active role in clearing the railroad bed of debris.

We, as riders, have had few, if any, problems with other persons who use the area. The mini bike riders have been very polite when riding near the horses. Walkers, joggers and bicycle riders, skiers, bird-watchers, all share the area very comfortably. Our only problem with cars involve those parked on the bed making passage difficult. We feel this particular problem relates to the Recreation Commission's point regarding abuttors taking over-blocking public passage.

To conclude, we want to see the natural beauty along the railroad bed returned to its original state and will help to do that. We support the proposal to clean up and maintain the area for recreational use and will do our part to share in its care.

Our perfumers have blended hundreds of the same exotic oil, spices, florals, gums and resins into their interpretation of these elegant perfumes. The creations in the Perfumer's Collection are so faithful that the most sophisticated customer cannot find a difference. The significant difference is in your cost.

Recreation Dept. report . . .

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience classes which will be taught by Laurie Ann Goodrich. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, and will begin Sunday, Jan. 29.

Beginner training classes will be held at 6 p.m. The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership.

Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, correction, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience.

An intermediate class will be held at 7 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior training or have completed the Recreation Dept. beginner class.

From 8 to 9 p.m. there will be advanced class. For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain.

The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutly no spike collars will be allowed.

It is strongly suggested handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes, the fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age.

To register please call the Recreation office at 383-6791.

SKATING

With cold weather, hence, ice skating season approaching, the following should be used as a guideline for safe ice. Common sense is the most important denominator, however.

Ice safe for 0-30 degrees for single skaters is 1½ inches; couples, 2½ inches; and crowds, 3½ inches.

For 30-40 degrees for single skaters, 2½; couples, 3½; and crowds, 4¾.

For 40-50 degrees, single skaters, 6 inches; couples, 8 inches; and crowds, 12 inches.

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add two inches; for water logged ice, add three inches; if skates cut in - go home!

Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous - keep away from it. Also thicknesses in 40-50 degrees are safe depths for short periods of time only. Test your weight as you go.

The deepest portion of Elms Meadow is towards the Spring Street Dam (about 12 to 18 inches), the shallowest is towards the back of the area, two inches or so.

Do not throw debris on the ice to check for safety. This only clutters up the ice, making skating dangerous and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

HOCKEY

Goals should be placed at each end of the meadow so that you are skating parallel to Spring Street. Keep away from the dam proper; the ice may be weak there. The rest of Elms Meadow is for ice skating. Lighting will be employed at Elm's Meadow Skating Area as conditions warrant.

MAGIC SHOW

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a "Magic Show" by Jerry and Ann Fields who have shown their illusion and E.S.P. act to amazed audiences throughout New England Friday, Jan. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium. The cost is $1.50 per person.

The Fields have performed on the Rex Trailer Show, the Sonja Hamlin Show, and Jabberwocky.

They have worked theatre in the round and under the big top tent. They have even performed magic on radio. Their stage act includes one of the most talked-about illusions in magic today, "The Zig Zag Girl."

Some of the highlights of their act are the levitation of a spectator from the audience, the production of a live rabbit done by someone also chosen and the Zig Zag Girl Illusion where Jerry divides Ann in three with a spectator right there acting as a detective and helping them do it.

February issue of 'Single Living' coming

The February issue of Single Living will be on news stands and in the homes of subscribers within the next two weeks.

Highlighting the month's news magazine for unmarried men and women will be features on Nancy Merrill, of WBZ TV's "People Are Talking," Dick Syatt of WRKO's "Hotline," and Jean Bancroft, of Personal Expertise.

Topics to be explored are: "Can Men and Women Just be Friends?" "The State of Alimony... or Breaking Up Is Hard To Do;" "Sexy underwear comes out of the closet;" "Avoiding Sexual Abuse," and others.

People who wish to submit commentaries (called Perspectives), letters to the editor, questions to the advice column, Single Source, personal ads or listings of events should do so by Monday, Jan. 16.

Jeffrey Hartwell shoots the important little puck toward the net in a recent game against Hull.

Seahawks report . . .

SEAHAWKS YOUTH HOCKEY

This past week was a quiet one for several of the Seahawk Hockey teams due to a break in scheduling. Both the Squirt A's and PeeWee A team did see action.

The Squirt A's were beaten by Neponset 7-1. The PeeWees were a little more fortunate in beating Bridgewater Taunton 4-0, Weymouth 8-2, and Duxbury 8-3 in weekend action.

In the Bridgewater game, Scott MacKay earned a shut-out in turning away 26 shots on net.

In a South Shore conference game Saturday, the Hawks methodically annihilated Weymouth 8-2. The team was wearing mourning bands in protest of their coach's unjust suspension.

Erik Steverman got the first goal of his "hat trick" on an assist from Keith O'Connell. Pat Glennon had a pair of goals and single scores were added by Mike Richardson, Billy Lincoln, and John Zimmer.

Assists were credited to Brian Pompeo, Damon Sparrow, Paul Norton, all with two goals each, and Steve Boardman.

In the final game of the weekend, against Duxbury, the Hawks were still smoking. Pat Glennon, Paul Norton, and Billy Lincoln each had a pair of goals with Jon Mahoney and Steve Boardman accounting for the other two. Norton was high man with three assists and Billy Lincoln (two), Pat Glennon, Mike Richardson and Eric Meschino rounded out the scoring.

BANTAM

The Bantam A team coached by Phil Thomas was defeated this weekend by Canton, 4-1. Ned Flaherty was the lone scorer for the Hawks.

Coach Chris Brennan's Bantam C team blanked Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 4-0 behind the excellent goaltending of Kevin Gibbons. Gilbert Rebello and Brian McGovern, each with two goals, were the "puck-poppers" for the Seahawks, while assists went to John Murphy, Danny DeCoste and Fran Sturgis.

In a second game this weekend, the Bantam C's played to a 6-6 tie with Marshfield. John Murphy scored a "hat trick" and John Nyland, Kevin Wilson and Steve McCoy each dented the nets for a goal.

Assists were earned by Brian McGovern (three), who earned a "Playmaker's Patch," Brendan Duffy, Danny DeCoste and Kevin Wilson.

MITES

Mark Salvador's Mite A team remained in first place with their shutout against Avon-Holbrook 4-0 this weekend. Goal scorers were Allison Salvador, Mike Balista, Scott Peacock and Stephen Peacock with assists going to Joey Andrade, Allison Salvador and Scott Peacock. The "Game Puck" went to Nance Ekas for outstanding defensive play.

Frank Greenberg's Mite C team was defeated 1-0 by Abington despite outshooting their opponents.

CHS sports roundup for the week . . .

By Carla Lucas and Tracey Fitzpatrick

HOCKEY

The hockey team had two close games this past week, but only came out on top in one of them.

In the Hull game, Cohasset lost 4-3, but played their best game so far this year, outshooting Hull, 39-25.

Seventeen of these shots came in the third period but Cohasset could not put the puck in the net.

David Ormiston, Lee Wilson and John Drago each picked up a goal for the Skippers.

Cohasset had an exciting victory against Rockland, when David Ormiston scored with no time left on the clock to win the game, 3-2.

Lee Wilson and Perry Harris scored one goal each to help the Skippers to their first victory.

Jeff Hartwell, Danny Curran and Perry Harris all played extremely well along with the Skippers' defense, Kevin Quilty, Timmy Curran, David Ormiston, Phil Mahoney and Mike Abbruzzese.

Charlie Brady had an outstanding game in net and won the game for the Skippers.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The Cohasset girls basketball team beat Middleboro, 48-44, in a South Shore League game.

The Skippers went into the fourth quarter with a 39-24 lead and held on until the end. Janet DiGirolamo made two big foul shots at the end of the fourth quarter to ice the lead.

Carla Lucas had 20 points and 16 rebounds, Tracy Fitzpatrick had 12 points and 10 rebounds, and Janet DiGirolamo added nine points.

Cohasset lost to Norwell, 44-38, in their next league game, playing the second half of Friday's game on Monday due to a power failure.

At the half Cohasset was down 30 19, but they came back to cut it to 38-35 in the fourth quarter. It was a good comeback, but not enough. "The loss was largely due to poor foul shooting in the end," said Coach Fallon.

Carla Lucas had 14 points and nine rebounds, while teammate Sara Seavey had 11 points.

BOYS WRESTLING

Cohasset wrestled powerhouse Duxbury last week and fell short, losing 52-9.

"All wrestled very well considering five of Duxbury's wrestlers made the finals during the Christmas Tournament at Norwell, especially the J.V. kids whom I really was impressed with." said Coach Sweeney.

Ricky Rourke pinned his man for a win while teammate Lee Reed won his match as well.

Cohasset plays in S.S. Holiday Youth Indoor Soccer Tourney

Several local teams won championships in the recent South Shore Holiday Youth Indoor Soccer Tourney held at the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham.

Forty-one teams from as far away as Albany, NY and Nashua NH competed in action as games were held on the new astro-turf surface during the tourney.

The Hingham Lions won the opening Boys Under 10 division by defeating archrival Weymouth North 4-2. Nashua World Cup, Braintree Rowdies, Pembroke and Boxford also competed in early action.

In the Under 12 bracket, visiting Nashua World Cup Condors outpowered Medway 4-2, while Salem Five, Acton-Boxborough, Marshfield, Ludlow, The Pythons, Weymouth and Sudbury challenged for respectable finishes.

Perennial girls powerhouse Newton outlasted Boxboro 1-0 in an exciting defensive championship match. Pembroke and Dover-Sherborn girls teams gained experience finishing third and fourth.

Under 14 competition featured the first penalty shot decision in the playoffs when semi-finalist Winchester tied Rockland 1-1 but won after sudden death play. Wellesley dominated Winchester and breezed to a 7-0 victory while Cohasset, Walpole and So. Weymouth participated in early rounds.

The Center and Budweiser sponsored the 1983 Budweiser Christmas Tournament with the Champion Botra Bolts (Women), Newton (Premiere), North Shore International (Men's A) and Pete's Old Boys (30 and Over) taking titles in the four division, 24 team adult tournament.

Men's Premiere division play included several experienced indoor clubs such as Scituate, Nautilus, Warriors and Belmont. South Shore and Newton, composed of numerous Boston College stars, faced off in the finals.

Over 300 players and 1000 spectators participated.

DRAMA CLUB

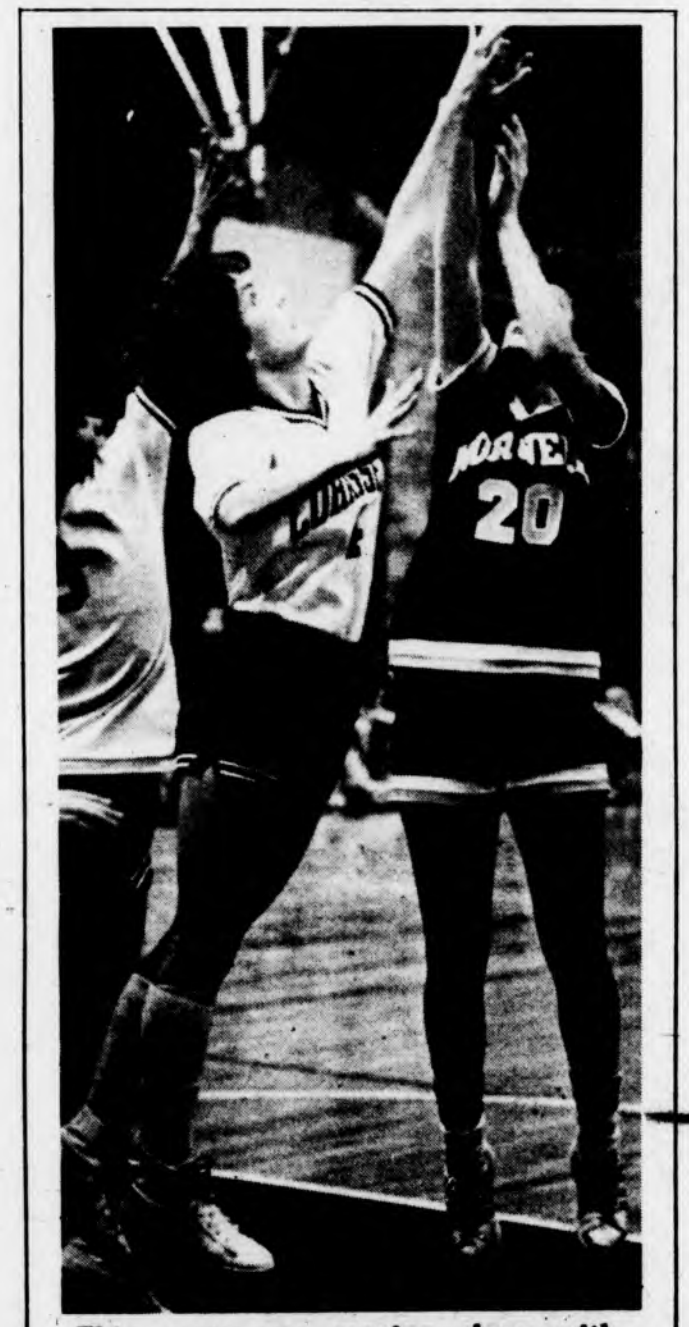
By Neely Hemassi

Mrs. Cisneros, a sixth grade teacher at Deer Hill School, has been teaching drama to sixth graders who were interested in learning a part in one of two plays.

They have worked on this project for a long time with enjoyment and hard work.

The children in the plays had to give up their after-school time and have their school work up to date to participate. It required a real commitment.

Students performed in the plays, "The Red Flannel Suit," and "The Christmas Peppermints" Dec. 22 in Deer Hill School.



LOGO DESIGN

High school art students from Hingham and Cohasset recently participated in a contest to design a logo for Wompatuck State Park.

The Department of Environmental Management and the Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council sponsored the contest and selected the design of Jeffrey Field of Hingham as the winner among the 31 entires received.

The winning design was slightly modified by DEM and will be used on the Wompatuck State Park Newsletter, Advisory Council stationery and for various uses at the park. The new logo will help promote the park and give it an identity that should increase public awareness of the facility.

Jeffrey Field's design was one of five finalists in the contest. Other finalists were Barbara Conti and Pam Ainslie of Cohasset and John Grassle and Seana Carmody of Hingham. DEM and the Advisory Council wish to thank all students and faculty who were involved in the contest.

This game was moving along with Cohasset's Janet DiGirolamo moving up against a Norwell player until a power shortage also shortened the game. (Rose Cundari photo)

Handicapped Awareness Program seeks crutches and hearing aids

The Handicapped Awareness Program at Osgood School is in need of some special equipment which Cohasset families may have gathering dust in their attics.

The program needs crutches or leg braces sized to fit children five to 10 years-old and hearing aids of any type or size (do not need to work).

The equipment may be donated or loaned for January and February by calling Taffy Nothnagle, 383-0895. The program's goal is to expose children to various handicapping conditions, using kits created by the Children's Museum, with the hope that understanding will help bring acceptance.

Never color me neutral

By Lois Martin

This minor debate I've had with myself about a year or so ago when I was talking with a former resident who now lives on the Cape. She was talking then, not critically really, about her town's historical commission and its sway and say over colors used on one's home.

That intrigued me. And last Thursday I was reminded of that encroaching tendency to limit.

I speak of a town's authority in having the say about property plumage. That is, we are getting bossier about saying what's pretty to have in town and what isn't. Communities, through ignoble bylaws, dictate both business and residential beauty points.

For instance, last week Norwell was aglow with conversation at a Selectmen's meeting about a blue automatic teller machine. The lettering on the canopy, some said, and the lighting of it, never mind the blue itself, had set the jowls of some officials ajar. They didn't like it and the business of having to see a blue automatic teller machine on a day to day basis was apparently jangling the nerves of some people.

Bank officials, eager not to lose face or pace in the community or business world, were quick to say the lettering's going and so's the blue, the shade of which I can't wait to see. Further there was talk about replacing that color, which has the endorsement of some people as being a favorite, with an off-white, or gray or something 'neutral.'

In that word is part of my alarm. Neutral. Nothing bores me like neutral. For goodness sakes, if we're going to be, must we be standard, neutral, cloned, indistinct, undistinguished?

Not that I have a mean word to say about off-white or soft-shaded gray. But if we are as communities to launch a drive to look the same, I'm against it. Before we do 'same,' or 'neutral' we have to allow a task force to determine forever what is prettiest, or most acceptable.

Candidates for local office are going to have to take tests on color charts. With our luck we're going to put someone in office who has a fettish for chatreuse or mauve or some tepid green that reminds her or him of something wondrous in childhood.

Probably the drive for prettiness was insured not from a natural sense of aesthetics but from sheer distaste when people saw certain routes or streets that became symbols of unattractiveness.

It isn't that we saw something we liked and decided to stay with it. We saw something we didn't like and decided to stay away from it...through zoning bylaws.

I called that woman from the Cape on a whim (the best way to call the Cape or visit there, I think). Called upon to be succinct for this purpose she said she understands many of the towns there in that highly-credited part of the state have historical commissions that have guidelines for signs and colors. Beyond that there sounds as if there's an almighty Cape Cod Commission which may pre-empt any previously royal rule when it comes to things like blue.

If she were, for example, to deign to repaint the outside of her house, she would speak with the commission, likely through formal means, and verify color options they allow. The Colonial blue is approved, she said, the brick or smoky dark red, several colors muted in tone and having an historic bearing on the Cape.

The goal, if we understand it correctly, is to avoid looking like Rte. 28. Now that's clearly not a nice remark for Rte. 28 to bear. But there we are.

Closer to these parts we use other examples as guidelines for what we don't want. I've always not wanted that Saugus strip if I can say that without maligning any town fathers or mothers there. And close we have pieces of Rte. 139 and 53 or Rte. 128, 'America's Technology Highway,' that serve as non prototypes for our tastes.

But there is still that piqued alert. I'm not a whit persuaded I either want or should have to live in a house that is proffered and approved by anybody's historical commission. I pay homage to history like Colonial colors. But when it comes to history I'm glad we moved ahead and made it that without stopping there. I hate to think we stop mixing paint if it wasn't used in the era of slavery.

I'd just as soon blend, though I'm not going to promise. I guarantee I'll be darned if I'll be neutral on almost anything. My paint and I both will have opinions, statements. I can't give you my word I give a hoot if anybody's historical commission should swoon at the shade.

I can't make it without individualism in me or around me. I adhere to standards but not to robots. Without the free breeze of independent thinking we'd still be a colony with slaves being rushed over our borders. Some would like that because at least they know what their blue would be.

Marshfield has heralded itself with a law that kicked video games out of town. The state's highest court said a town has the right to say what it wants in it. Fine, but does a neighbor have that clout to be boss over my house paint? I hope not.

Before long towns would lose their names, not to mention their distinctive and distinguished characteristics. We'd move to the Cape, to Eggshell White or to Nutmeg Brown or to Elite Ecru.

Standards are one thing. Style is another. And nobody ever got style or showed it by fitting into a silly mold.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Remember the old children's song, "I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream?" Well, you may do exactly that if you take the time to read the label on the frozen dessert they package these days and call ice cream. Carrageenan, furcelleran, agar-agar, alcin, calcium sulfate, gelatin, gum karaya, locust bean gum, oat gum, sodium, hexamataphospate, calcium carbonate these are just a few of the sixty plus chemical additives that might be inside your favorite container of ice cream. There was a time when Sunday dinner was preceded by a turn at the handle of the ice cream churn to make a dessert of rich cream and real fruit packed in salt ice. The additives used now are supposed to simulate this rich product's flavor, color and creaminess and if you see the word "flavored" on the container, you know some amount of artificial flavoring has been added. If you and your family enjoy frozen desserts, but are concerned about hidden ingredients, the following is easily made.

FROZEN FRUITED YOGURT

Puree unflavored yogurt, fruit and honey in the blender and then freeze the mixture. For each pint of yogurt use 1 banana or 1 orange or 1/2 c. diced fresh fruit, or 1/2 c. of diced dried fruit which has been softened in warm water and 2 to 4 T of honey, depending on the sweetness of the fruit. Start with the smaller amount of honey; blend and taste. Transfer mixture to a plastic container suitable for freezing, cover and allow to harden in the freezer. This will take about 30 min. For a creamier product, whip the frozen yogurt in an electric mixer and let it harden again.

BANANA SPICE CAKE

1/4 c. butter
1/2 c. honey
1 egg
1½ c. minus 2 T whole wheat flour
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 tsp. each nutmeg, allspice and salt
1/2 tsp. baking soda
3 T yogurt
2/3 c. mashed banana (2 small bananas)

Cream butter and honey. Add egg and beat until frothy. Mix dry ingredients together and add alternately with yogurt to creamed mixture, stirring until smooth. Fold in banana. Bake in a 350 degree oven in a greased 8" square pan for 25 to 30 min., until a toothpick inserted into the center comes out clean. Cool 5 min. in pan, then turn onto a wire rack. When cool, frost.

'The Old China Trade' to be held at Town Library

"The Old China Trade 1784-1842" will be Ellen Woolf's topic when she speaks at the January meeting of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club.

A research assistant and guide at the Museum of the American China Trade in Milton, Woolf will cover the trading of tea, silk, porcelain and other exotic goods. She will also have on display examples of these items which still adorn many American homes.

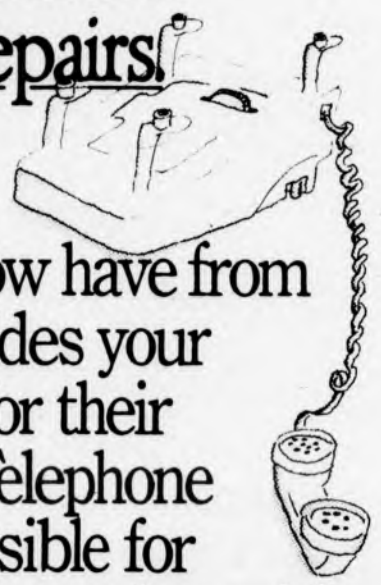
The meeting will be held Monday, Jan. 16, at the Scituate Library on Branch Street. All newcomers are invited to the meeting at 10 a.m. and the coffee to precede at 9:30 a.m.

Hostess group for this month's coffee will be The Explorers, a special interest group co-chairmaned by Sandy Smith, Kathleen Fay and Lorraire Kauffman.

For baby-sitting or membership information, call Lyn Leighton, 383-6175 or Bunny Wagner, 545-6422.

Breaking up isn't hard to do.

The phone system is all broken up. But you shouldn't be. Because all you have to do is remember that now your phone service is divided into three separate components.



1. Local Service. New England Telephone will still provide local service, toll calling within your area code, and access to long distance.

2. Long Distance. You can choose a new long-distance carrier or do nothing and continue with AT&T.

3. Equipment and Repairs. You may buy phones wherever you like. Or lease the phones you now have from AT&T. Whoever provides your phones is responsible for their repair. New England Telephone is responsible for maintaining and repairing phone lines.

New England Telephone customers will find that breaking up isn't hard to do. Because we've made it as easy as 1,2,3.

Musings...

By John H. Cutler

☐There are no uninteresting things, there are only uninterested people. C.K. Chesterton said it.

☐Thirteen is considered so unlucky that at one time in Paris no houses had that number.

☐All his life he ate sensibly and had no vices — which is why he was in perfect health when he died of acute boredom.

☐Wouldn't it be better to isolate and label the few things that are not injurious to health?

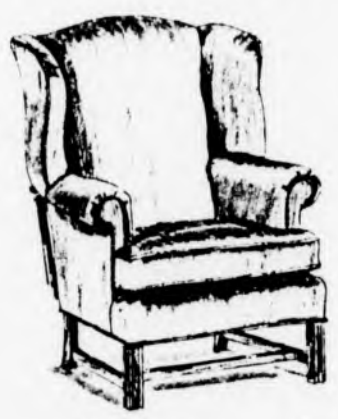
☐"The sinner who spends and gives away is better than the devotee who begs and lays by." — Sadi.

☐Franklin D. Roosevelt once said that dealing with the State Department was like watching an elephant become pregnant.

☐I didn't say his hat wasn't becoming. I just said I've seen better fits on a trombone.

☐She was a marked woman and she flunked.

☐Does this ring a bell? Destiny shapes our ends and ends our shapes.



☐"Education is the task of bringing the young and the great together." — John Jay Chapman.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VI, no. 14 | telephone 383-3950 | thursday, january 19, 1984 | 30 cents

Gjesteby files complaint with state A.G.

School Committee member Martha Gjesteby filed a complaint with the state Attorney General over a committee policy decision on releasing School Dept. information to board members.

Recently, the committee, by virtue of a 4-1 decision (Gjesteby, the lone dissenting vote) approved a proposal requiring a board member to fill out a form requesting information from the school superintendent.

If that information request requires research, a majority of five members (three votes) must make the request.

This policy is only for school board members and not the public.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell proposed the form and committee member John Langmaid proposed for questions requiring research, a majority of committee members should join in that request.

Crowell said the form would aid him to keep track of informational requests from committee members.

The policy will be in effect for a two-month trial period, and also during the time period the board closely examines the school budget.

The top section of the form has a line for the name of the person requesting information and several lines are provided to describe the information needed and a reply date expected.

Gjesteby told the committee she called Paul Gordon, the head of Mass. School Committees who told her he did not know of any school board to have such a form.

Gjesteby told selectmen last week she feels the form violates her civil rights and also endangers the liability of town officials.

She feels the policy, if enacted, could ask school board members to vote on an issue without knowing "the full story."

The policy was not reviewed by town counsel for its legality. Counsel Richard Henderson said he first learned of the policy at the selectmen's meeting Jan. 18.

Selectmen to direct Fire Dept. study

By Mike Berger

Tuesday's Special Town Meeting voters essentially told selectmen they and not outside consultants must solve the internal problems of the Fire Dept.

In other key voters, the Water Dept. won its article for a $35,000 study to evaluate the potential pollution impact of a commercial landfill and the Lowrey M. Bell Jr. case civil rights case against the town was settled with the passage of over $47,430.

Besides the Fire Dept. $20,000 consultant study, the only other article which did not encumber town funds was the withdrawal of $2,000 to sandblast and stain the town-owned Bates Building.

This money, $22,000, was used to add to the town's Stabilization account, essentially a capital fund account. The account now stands at $73,000.

Two-hundred, 52 people attended the meeting, 52 above the legal quorum.

The most excitement of the evening was provided by the Fire Dept. consultant question.

Glen Pratt of King Street proposed the pivotal amendment which changed the article from a $20,000 outside consultant study to a resident or selectmen controlled study.

As a result of a 155-97 vote, selectmen will decide if they will conduct their own study or establish a citizens committee to investigate management and firefighting procedures. The citizens committee would report back to selectmen within nine months.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said there had not been a comprehensive management study ever completed on Fire Dept. procedures and he felt selectmen did not have the technical expertise to evaluate firefighting procedures. He also opposed a citizens committee because he felt neutral evaluators were needed.

Mitman said selectmen received preliminary proposals from Firepro of Wellesley, former Boston Fire Commissioner George Paul, the Massachusetts Municipal Association and the International Society of Fire Service instructors.

These proposals, said Pratt, ranged between $12,000 and $27,000.

Pratt said there was enough talent and interest among Cohasset residents to complete the study and

Litchfields are part of BBC documentary

By Judy Gilman

When Jim and Brenda Litchfield of Cohasset met each other more than 40 years ago in England during World War II, they never thought they'd be the subject of a BBC-TV documentary that will be aired later this year.

But it was the happy circumstance of old comrades keeping up with former buddies that led the BBC right to the Litchfields' door. And how all this activity relates to the South Shore Mayflowers, a club for United Kingdom women living in the area, is another story in itself.

For something as convoluted as this, it's often wise to start at the beginning — in this case, World War II.

Jim Litchfield, a Cohasset native, was stationed in England for much of World War II once the U.S. entered the conflict after D-Day. He planned to make himself impervious to British feminine wiles, even going so far as to display a photograph of nieces and nephews as his own children. Then he met his future wife Brenda. She too worked at the air base where the American 2nd Air Division of the 8th Air Corps was stationed in Norfolk, the portion of England also known as East Anglia, a flat country marked by windmills and dykes that reaches toward the North Sea.

But war intervened in the best-laid plans of men and women and there was an inevitable separation period, as the war finally came to an end in Europe.

Cohasset's week

Ambulance hearing

Calling all Cohasset residents:

The Ambulance Study Committee is asking for all residents to attend a Monday, Jan. 23 public hearing at Town Hall and offer oral or written comments to the committee regarding proposals for private ambulance service, regional ambulance service and a common emergency telephone number.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. Written comments should be sent to the committee, chaired by Roy Fitzsimmons or to selectmen.

Shooting ban proposed

Selectmen will probably propose at the April town meeting to ban hunting and target shooting in town except for aprpoved weapons ranges.

Selectman Frank England made the proposal because he was concerned about an incident in Hanover in late December when a stray bullet went through the dining room window of a home.

Selectmen will ask Police Chief Joe Kealey to see if the town can impose a tougher ordinance than the state law which forbids discharging a weapon within 500 feet of a dwelling.

The only shooting range in town is the basement of the Osgood Elementary School. This is used by gun clubs for competition and for police officer target shooting. Hunting is already prohibited in town.

Guild announces candidacy

Edward M. "Ted" Guild announced Tuesday, Jan. 17, he will run for re-election to the Board of Sewer Commissioners.

Guild, who campaigned as an advocate of the alternative methods of waste water disposal, was elected to fill a one year unexpired term last April.

Guild has been the Commission's designated representative on legal matters. He worked closely with Atty. Allan vanGestel of the firm Goodwin, Proctor and Hoar in resolving the legal impasse with the state.

Under a negotiated accommodation agreement, both the Town and State have agreed to refrain from any court action against the other in order to allow time for the completion of the study of alternative systems by the Town's engineers, Ward Engineering Associates.

The Ward Report is scheduled for completion in April.

New bus signs

The Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway Co. is installing new signs at all stops in the area served by the carrier. Each sign will contain a local number to call for information about schedules. The following are numbers to call in various towns: Cohasset, 834-7810; Hanover, 834-7810; Hingham, 834-7810; Marshfield, 834-7810

P & B rates go up

Commuters who use the Plymouth & Brockton bus (Railway Company) found a substantial hike in the fares this weekend (Jan. 18) when they boarded the bus for Boston.

The cost of a one way ticket purchased through Pancake King in Hanover, for example, went up to $3 from $2.45. That's a round trip increase of $1.10 for the commute.

A news release issued through the firm said state and federal agencies granted the fare increases for which P&B filed applications in June with the Department of Public Utilities (DPU) and the Mass. Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA). The release said no opposition was expressed during public hearings on the fares held in Boston and Plymouth in August and September.

A company spokesman said commuters had received notification that the fare would rise but the increase had not been specified. President George Anzuoni and the manager were not available for comment Tuesday. The spokesman said at the time no one else was on hand to outline the increase in the fare.

The P&B will issue a riders' survey later this month to "find out about you and what your transportation needs and interests are . . ."

The company also says it has changes in mind to assist commuters during the reconstruction of Rte. 3. Those changes are to be outlined in the future.

Free income tax help

There is free income tax help available for low-income, elderly and handicapped persons, sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons.

Beginning Feb. 1 through April 14, the program will run at the Unitarian Church Parish House, Main Street, Cohasset.

Please call 383-1561, 383-1100 or 383-0216, for an appointment.

Firetruck hearing

Selectmen will either set an open or closed hearing to fully examine if a Fire Dept. ladder truck was properly used during a Hull fire at the Golden Sands Motel.

Firefighters alleged Dooley ordered the truck's extension ladder be used to break through a boarded-up window.

Selectmen ordered the ladder truck inpscted by a consulting firm and asked Executive Secretary Mark Lanza and two advisory committee members to report to the board on the allegations.

The reports were given to selectmen last week and were read at the selectmen's meeting. But no details were made available.

Hingham water rates draw complaints

By Judy Gilman

Water users were vociferous in their complaints about both the quality of water and the quality of service at a public hearing Wednesday night on the 16.45 percent rate increase the Hingham Water Company has requested of the state Department of Public Utilities.

Only about three dozen residents of the water company's area, which includes Hingham, Hull and a portion of North Cohasset, attended the DPU's only scheduled public hearing in the area on the rate increase which was filed last summer.

George Ford, counsel for the town of Hingham, made an eloquent plea to adjourn the hearing to another night in view of the weather and road conditions.

"The numbers here tonight are not reflective of those who wish to comment to the commission," Ford said. Hull town counsel James Lampke also joined in the request for another meeting and James Stetson, the DPU's counsel and the hearing officer, took the request under advisement. None of the commissioners were present, and Stetson said they had other previous commitments.

Water supply committee chairman Catherine Salisbury made a detailed presentation of problems of service and quality in the system. "We are concerned with the lack of planning and with no money being used to upgrade the distribution system," she said. She added that five percent of the system in Hingham is served by two-inch pipe and another five percent uses three- and four-inch pipe. Today's standard for supplying water to fire hydrants is eight-inch pipe.

Problems with water pressure and quality throughout the town were detailed, including the South Shore Industrial Park and the Central Street area.

Salisbury charged that the company puts in lines only to serve present, rather than future, needs. The well known as Free Street Number 4, she said, has been drilled at a cost of $309,000, which has been added to the rate base, but the well has not yet been approved by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Hingham Deputy Fire Chief Robert Garvin complained of the rising cost of fire protection and water supply to the town's hydrants. "In 1982, the cost per hydrant was $279 a hydrant. In 1983, it was $336 per hydrant. We've had no improvements in the pressure in the hydrants since 1976. We get filthy water in our pumps and complaints whenever we open a hydrant."

A Thanksgiving weekend fire in the Nantasket area this year when there was, again, no water in the hydrants. After a call was made to the water company "the pumps were turned on and the pressure literally blew the gauges off the trucks."

There were other residents who complained of unusable water and other service problems.

The DPU has scheduled three days of hearings Feb. 14, 15 and 16, in its Boston offices at 100 Cambridge St. At that time town counsels will be questioning material submitted in the original rate hearing by the water company.

The water company wants to increase its employee level from 28 to 31, to improve service, according to general manager David Kanke. And the company is looking toward building its $6 million filtration plant in South Hingham which should eradicate much of the iron and manganese content in the water which currently plagues Hingham households.

High blood pressure workshop

Dr. Neil Neimark will hold a High Blood Pressure Workshop at The Raskin Walk-In Medical Center, Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A, for concerned citizens of the surrounding communities.

The importance of proper diet, exercise, and stress management in relation to quality blood pressure control will be discussed. Questions about high blood pressure will be answered.

Free blood pressure checks by Ginah Stone of the Medical Center will be conducted if desired.

Light refreshments will be served.

Manny Salvador questions 'temporary' mooring use

The following are official minutes of a recent Harbor Committee Meeting.

Chairman Charles Fink reported Atty. James DeGiacomo reported that recent legislative action taken by the Town in order to grant regulating power to the Harbormaster was lacking in two sections.

The bylaw, which was passed at the regular 1983 Town Meeting, provided regulatory power over boats in the harbor but failed to specifically mention floats and lobster cars.

After discussion it was recommended to selectmen a bylaw be proposed at Town Meeting in order to correct the oversight.

Specifically, it was recommended that Article 23, Paragraph A (i) of the Town Bylaw be amended to include the words "float and lobster cars" in two places in order to correct the legislative oversight.

COMMITTEE BUDGET

A proposed budget for the Harbor Committee was discussed. Town Executive Secretary Mark Lanza suggested a yearly budget of $300 to cover secretarial expenses, mailing costs and other administrative charges such as copying costs.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested a lower budget which would reflect current secretarial hourly pay rates within the Town or perhaps ask for volunteers.

Selectmen wil be asked to consider the Lanza proposal as the result of the Committee's vote.

FACILITY FUNDS

Chairman Fink reported the legislature acted favorably on proposed legislation which might provide funds for harbor facilities, an issue long thought dead.

Reported favorably by the House is an Act to establish a permanent Coastal Zone Management program, float a $15 million bond issue for coastal facilities improvement, amend present statutes relative to the issuance of tidelands licenses and transfer a number of the functions of the Division of waterways to the Department of Environmental Management while retaining some functions within the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

It was noted that Cohasset, by virtue of the prior engineering work accomplished by the Town through the Harbor Committee, was in an excellent position to compete for any funds to be appropriated or raised through a bond issue.

The Town Pier project will require the expenditure of $500,000, one half to be provided by the Town.

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, urges that the recreational value of the pier enhancements, as well as the commercial value, be stressed. Selectman Rocco Laugelle concurs.

The Cohasset Recreational Committee will develop a position paper to assist in this process, and Anderson Nichols will attempt to identify other governmental agencies which might assist in the financing.

TEMPORARY MOORING

On another matter, Manuel Salvador wrote to the Town Oct. 7, objecting to the undefined use of the word "temporary" in Bylaw Article 23 and Harbor Regulation No. 14.

Town Counsel Robert O'Connell acknowledged that "temporary" lacked definition and was too vague to be enforceable.

Further, it was noted "temporary" users of moorings were not made subject to the requirements of Article 23 of the Bylaws which requires that stickers acknowledging the payment of mooring fees be applied on any boat moored in the harbor.

Discussion of the words "temporary," "moor," and "mooring" ensued and resulted in a determination that "moor" means to attach a boat to a mooring whether on a temporary or permanent basis.

The "temporary" verbiage is to be studied by Counsel and appropriate language suggested to remedy the confusion.

Temporary situations will be defined so as to exclude emergency situations but to ecompass boats moored on a vacant berth with the Harbormaster's consent.

Such boats should be subject to a daily mooring fee, and the committee voted to recommend to the selectmen that:

"All boats, in excess of 12 feet, on moorings or tied to Town floats, that do not display the sticker indication payment of the Cohasset mooring fee will be charged a user fee of five dollars per day."

The committee discussed the fee relative to arguments that it might be considered a revenue producing charge. They concluded a users fee might cover some costs of administering the system but not all and would certainly not produce a "profit" to the Town.

Special Town Meeting

also told the audience selectmen were frustrated in their attempts to deal with the problems.

Advisory Committee member Paul Neelon said the board was split. One half of the committee agreed with selectmen while the other half of the ten-member committee felt the establishment of the five-member selectmen's board and the establishment of the Weak Chief's gave more management authority to selectmen.

Neelon said the recommendations of a previous management report, "Kimball Report" issued in 1974 were never used.

Resident Lloyd Prescott said Cohasset was being known as a community of consultants and studies and it was time for selectmen to stand up and face the problem - headon.

"Call a spade a spade and don't pass it on. This isn't a popularity contest to win. If you think it is you will hear from us at the next election. Fish or cut bait," said Prescott.

Acting Fire Capt. Richard Conley and of 10 Holly Lane refuted some of Prescott's comments and put some of the blame of the Fire Dept. problems on Fire Chief Martin Dooley and Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

"There is $50,000 worth of management skills between the fire chief and executive secretary. They have not been put to work to solve the problems but some have been put to work to cause the problems," said Conley.

He said the grievances filed were caused by violations of the firefighters contract.

Referring to Prescott's statements about a strong labor union and of firefighters washing their cars or fixing their buoys, Conley said "You have not heard of us till this year. Things have been difficult this year but you keep coming back to the same problem. You don't need the Blue Ribbon panel. You may have the management skills right here."

"Washing cars and working on buoys between Jan. 1 and March 29 was an accepted practice. You laughed at that but no one is laughing at 3 or 4 a.m.

"The people down in front and in back (selectmen and firefighters) are the ones to settle this," Conley said.

Landfill study

Water Commission Chairman William Montuori told voters to the commission's surprise, no such environmental impact study of a commerical landfill to Lily Pond was required of Barry Brothers, landfill owners.

The commerical landfill is now owned by Cohasset Heights LTd. which has sold its rolling stock to BFI.

The commission reported there is no adverse pollution impact now but the study was required now to protect the town's main water supply.

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street questioned how long the town would continue to fund the study; is road salt contributing to the pollution problem and should a dam be constructed to alleviate the problem?

Lowrey Bell case

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said there remained one civil rights question out of the four-count suit filed by Lowrey Bell Jr. Henderson said the courts dismissed the complaints of conspiracy and constitutionality but still on the court dockets were civil rights.

When the town decided to enforce a 1978 town meeting approved zoning bylaw on the Bell family the questions posed were: Was the Bell family treated differently than another family? Did political pressure by neighbors impacted by the building of the tennis court affect the town officials decision to deny the special permit.

The denial by the appeals board was later rescinded by the state Supreme Court. Bell said the settlement of $47,056 will be used to pay his legal fees in the case.

Henderson said the bylaw, calling for definite setbacks, will be examined by the Planning Board and rewritten for clarity. But he added the way the bylaw was enforced caused the problem.

Legal fees

Town meeting authorized spending $25,000 for town counsel services for the balance of the fiscal year ending June 30. Thirty two thousand, 500 was appropriated this fiscal year.

Another article approved by voters will send $3,070 to Goodwin Procter and Hoar for representing the Planning Board in the Cox Estate variance case against the appeals board and Yankee Oil and Gas and $10,836 in connection with the case of Harbormaster Harry Ritter versus William Figueiredo. This case concerns ownership of moorings in Bailey's Creek.

Other articles

Voters approved increasing the Fire Dept. overtime budget another $45,000 for the balance of the fiscal year. Twenty-eight thousand, 148 was budgeted for Fiscal 1983-84. Advisory Board member Jackie Dormitzer reported there was more money spent on overtime this year than the average of $30,000 to $38,000 spent annually for the past five years.

Town meeting also approved a request to amend the bylaws to raise the fine for littering from $100 to $200 and $1,879 for settling firefighter grievances and appeals.

Vo-Tech asks towns to approve tech program

South Shore Vocational Technical High School will ask its eight member towns to approve the addition of a post-secondary technical program to be offered at the school.

The approval would necessitate amending the charter. If approved by two-thirds of the members towns, the school would offer technical courses after the regular school day is over (from 3 to 9 p.m).

Training would be done in conjunction with a local community college so that a student may earn an associate's degree. Vo-Tech is not accredited to give such a degree. Quincy Junior College has expressed an interest, Supt. Dr. Cliff Easton said.

Easton said the program has revenue-producing potential and will be self-supporting. Its budget would be separate from the high school's budget, he said. Any current faculty member teaching in the technical institute would do so of his own volition and with extra pay, Easton said.

Teachers' union representative Russ DeCoste, a guidance counselor, said the program will likely put greater demands on the clerical staff. "There may be people in-house now who are pretty taxed," he said. "I have a concern about seeing the existing staff weakened."

Easton said if the adult evening program combined with the technical institute, there would be enough money to pay a part-time clerical assistant.

Committee members also raised concerns about the wear and tear put on the old, well-used equipment. Easton said the technical institute will be self-sufficient. He said the profit made by the program can be put back into the school in the form of new equipment.

"Night school has already provided computers," Easton said.

Rockland representative John Doyle said he won't support anything that costs money because Rockland is verging on bankruptcy. He said he is wary when Easton says a program won't cost money. The shops aren't generating the money Easton said they would, Doyle said.

"I over-estimated the amount of money generated," Easton said. "I expected the restaurant to open up in October; it won't open until January."

Six of the eight member towns must approve the technical institute at town meeting. The member towns are Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

Maud Lee of Hingham tells a similar tale. Her husband Richard was also in the Second Air Division. They had firm plans to be married in August 1944. But when he called on a July day nearly a month earlier, and said, "This is it," her wedding day was the next day. After a five-day honeymoon, he left for Germany and she didn't see him again for more than a year.

There were many British women who had dated and married Americans during the war before D-Day. Once characterized as "those bloody Yanks," the Americans had come to be accepted as something less than nuisances. And so, with the war winding down, the British government realized it had on its hands many thousands of women, some fiances of Americans, some wives, who were determined to get to the other side of the Atlantic as quickly as possible. America, which hadn't known the terror of bombing or the pinch of strict rationing, beckoned.

It wasn't simply a matter of hopping on a boat and coming across the Atlantic. There were quotas that were filled, and the British government was concerned enough about its female subjects transplanting themselves to a new culture that they insisted that all those who planned on embarking spend three weeks in a familiarization camp before leaving. Both Brenda Litchfield and Maud Lee remember the camp at Tidwith and also remember that there were some who went who decided not to make the trans-Atlantic journey.

Because both Litchfield and Lee were already married to Americans, they were at the top of the list of departures. Even so, the time seemed to drag interminably until embarkation day. And there was the quality of the unknown waiting on the other side.

Both, however, found a warm welcome on the South Shore. Lee remembers distinctly the waiting once the ship came into Quincy. "You weren't allowed to get off until your husband had come and checked in. And they put these big name labels on our jackets. I tucked mine inside." What she wasn't anticipating was not recognizing her husband. "I'd never seen him dressed in anything but a uniform and there he was, in a trilby. If he hadn't grabbed me, I would have walked right past him."

They both remember a wonderful, friendly welcome. "Oh, they couldn't do enough for you. And after the years of rationing, we couldn't believe the amounts of food."

Eleven years after they'd both come over, Litchfield started the Mayflowers, a club for United Kingdom wives of all ages.

Appearing in the upcoming BBC documentary are Peggy Cataldo, Brenda Litchfield and Marjorie Bargout.

The second part of the story, how and why the BBC got involved and came here, involves a feeling of reminiscence and devotion on the part of the men of the 2nd Air Division. Over the years, they have endowed and maintained a uniquely complete library of their part in World War II in books, films and other archives in the town of Norridge in Norfolk. Brenda and Jim Litchfield have been there and contributed a history of Cohasset to the library's collection.

So when freelance London researcher Katrine Klay asked her military sources (she was then at work on a book using the archives of the Imperial War Museum) if there was a particularly good source of material for a story on GI brides, the answer was "Norridge."

The 2nd Air Division not only maintains the archives in Britain but is also a close-knit group that has a yearly reunion, whose records are zealously kept in Norfolk as well. So Klay found a goldmine of sources and references right at her fingertips, which led her to the Litchfields and the Mayflowers.

The South Shore was only the first stop on the BBC's route, which will include filming in New York, Philadelphia and Dallas, as well, the last the site of this year's division reunion. In some cases, say Klay and director Jonathan Gili, the story will be told through the eyes of children of these GI marriages. "Not all the stories are happy," added Klay, as some brides found the adjustment to a new society too much to handle.

Both Brenda Litchfield and Maud Lee had some reminiscences in that vein.

"When I first came to Cohasset and heard this child call an adult by her first name, I couldn't believe it," Litchfield recalls. "It just wasn't done in England."

Lee agreed. "I tried to draw a middle line with our girls, not to be too strict. I think the English children of our time tended to be too quiet. I guess I was successful. People would always say to me, 'Those Lee girls have such nice manners.' "

But there's no regret, even though the early years meant many adjustments and no trips home. "Everyone was strapped pretty tight and didn't go home. And you had to go by boat." Now both Litchfield and Lee usually return to England each summer in a matter of hours. (Though the interviewing BBC crew wasn't as lucky, flying in last week after a 22-hour trip.)

The Litchfields, together with the Cataldos of Rockland and the Bargouts of Holbrook, will be the featured couples in the South Shore segment of the BBC presentation that is still unnamed and that will probably be shown sometime in the 1984-85 season on Channel 2, WGBH-TV.

In the meantime, the Mayflowers keep on meeting, acting as both a social and support group. Any wife who hails from anywhere in the United Kingdom is welcome to join. Call Maud Lee at 749-0325 for more information.

☐ Marie Palm, a Cohasset resident, recently joined the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Co. as a sales associate.

A Katherine Gibbs graduate, Marie was formerly a broker specializing in Florida real estate. Her husband Mike is a sales representative for Century Color and a former Red Sox pitcher. They have six sons and two daughters, and Marie is a member of the Hatherly Country Club.

The Jack Conway Co. has 27 offices serving the South Shore and Cape Cod.

☐ Joining Governor Dukakis for the signing of a proclamation declaring February "Voter Registration Month" is former Solicitor William B. Golden of Weymouth, formerly of Cohasset and Marshfield, with Marshfield High School students: Stephen Smith, editor of the Marshfield High School newspaper and Laurie Pearce, treasurer of Marshfield's S.A.D.D. (Students Against Drunk Driving) and an Alternate to the "Student Government Day" activities.

Golden, the Dukakis coordinator for Norfolk and Plymouth counties, will take an active role in the major registration drives slated for this month. Golden said that political and civic participation has run in the family: his grandfather Philip Oakman served as Commissioner of Public Roads in Marshfield and his Great-Uncle Oliver was a town selectman.

Golden said February and March were busy months for civic minded voters: state and federal party caucuses will be held in February and March 13 is the Commonwealth's Presidential Primary Day.

☐ Jean Bagley has joined the Cohasset office of Gallery 360, the Gallery of Homes.

A real estate professional for two years, Bagley is a former Outreach Coordinator for the Weymouth Council on Aging. She is also a Certified Activities Coordinator for Nursing Homes in Massachusetts and was the activity director at the Ripley Road Nursing Home in Cohasset.

Mrs. Bagley has participated in continuing education programs at Bunker Hill Community College and Quincy Junior College, and has also studied floral design.

She is a member of the Weymouth Garden Club, the Mass. Federation of Nursing Homes, the South Shore Board of Realtors and is a volunteer in the Weymouth Meals-on-Wheels program.

A Cohasset resident, Mrs. Bagley is also a Notary Public.

☐ Navy Lt. William F. Malloy, Jr., son of William F. and Janet D. Malloy of 86 Jerusalem Rd., has completed the Lawyers' Military Justice Course.

During the eight-week curriculum at the Naval Justice School, Newport, R.I., newly-commissioned Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard lawyers study the application of their prior law school training and legal knowledge to the military community.

The instruction is designed to provide a thorough working knowledge of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

During classroom sessions, seminars, case studies and individual research, future military advocates study the rules of evidence, in-service legal assistance programs and the procedures for court-martial, boards of inquiry and investigations.

☐ Michael Cifrino of Jerusalem Road, has recently taken a job with City Gardens, Inc. of Newton, Mass. Cifrino was recently the landscape designer at Old Colony Landscape Service in Weymouth.

Cifrino's new job duties will include the designing and implementation of interior landscapes into the offices and atria of corporate buildings, hotels, restaurants and malls in the Boston and South Shore area.

City Gardens is an interior and urban landscape company with offices in New Hamphsire, Atlanta, and Hollywood, Florida. City Gardens also operates the Ritz-Carlton Florist Shop "Floralies" on Newbury Street in Boston.

☐ Mr. Bruce Edmonds of Pond Street is in Steamboat Springs, Colorado with his daughter and son-in-law, Joan and Paul Lawrence, and grandchildren David and Peter (David and Peter are also the grandchildren of Leonard and Adele Lawrence of Spring Street). Peter is participating in a down-hill race, and it is Bruce's first chance to watch him in action. Peter took a third place in the Jr. Olympics last year at Winter Park, Colorado.

☐ Once again its time for a round of applause for Harold Litchfield and his able crew! The town was "a cinch to navigate."

☐ One nice sideline to all of the snow was that it enabled people to get together. Bernie Mulcahy, Clark Chatterton and Bob Leonard, all C.H.S schoolmates and teammates, had a chance to remember old times and catch up on new ones. It was the first time they were able to get together since the famous Little League Reunion, and they had a lot to talk about.

☐ Julie Hoogeveen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Hoogeveen was recently awarded as a junior 4-H leader. Julie is one of many teens assisting with leading the 4-H clubs, and received recognition from 4-H agent Deborah Swanson.

☐ Jack and Doris Golden found a home to stay in while their house is being repaired after the recent fire. Thanks to the kindness of Dick Guilfoyle of Nichols Road, they are finally able to unpack their suitcases and settle in.

☐ Mary Jo Mahoney, a 1982 Cohasset High grad, is making her presence felt at the University of Maine! Mary Jo made the Dean's List last semester, and is carrying a double major in Animal and Veterinary Science and Animal Medical Technician. Knowing Mary Jo, she's involved in tons of other outside activities, as she was in high school.

☐ Had a phone call from Bob Dunn last week. Bob was a 1962 Cohasset grad, who lives in New Mexico, where he is in the real estate business. Bob reports that Mom and Dad are living in New Jersey now, and loving it. Sister Debbie lives in a town near her brother Bob, and brothers Kevin and Steve both have homes in Hull. Bob also reports that he sees other '62 classmates once in a while. Mary Jane Cotton lives in New Mexico (something they found out after their 20th reunion), and is doing "just great." Jerry Jerimah, a pilot-turned-businessman flies into New Mexico occasionally (Jerry lives in California with his wife and twins).

☐ John and Mary Benbow looked as if they were in seventh heaven last weekend as they were cross-country skiing all over Cohasset. Several people were enjoying the sport. At least all of this snow is good for something!

☐ Glad to hear that Jack Creamer is on the mend after his recent accident while chopping wood.

☐ Lucky students at Osgood School will be able to partake in a Dance Program under Glenda Medeiros and Helen Pratt. The teachers will benefit too, as there will be workshops held. The Artists-in-Residence program is one everyone can learn from.

☐ Have heard a lot of nice things about Torin Sweeney, "rookie coach" of the wrestling team. Torin is a 1982 graduate, and made his mark in the South Shore as a dynamite wrestler.

Area AFS students share thoughts

By Theresa Sullivan

They like ice cream, jeans and computers.

They think wearing bright pink and green together or wearing plaid pants is sort of peculiar.

But they've learned that people are the same in all parts of the world. They feel there could be peace if "people would talk together."

"Race and religion don't count," said Hugo Barrios, an American Field Service (AFS) student from Venezuela. Hugo is staying with the James and Karen O'Hare family of Hingham for a year.

Tui McArthur has been living in Cohasset for seven months. "We could have peace," she said. "I think it's the tolerance and understanding that's important. You think about why people do things. You try to figure out why they do it."

Tui is an AFS student from New Zealand living with the Rev. Ed and Sally Atkinson family.

Eleven AFS students and one former AFS student gathered in Hanover last weekend for an "area weekend." About once every two months different towns in the South Shore host the other AFS students at the public high school for a day.

After spending last Friday at Hanover High School, students and the Hanover families hosting them had an international potluck supper together. Following a program put on by the kids, the students attended a party in Hanover.

They spent the night with Hanover families and returned to their own "families" Saturday. Although Hanover does not have an AFS student staying in the town this year, the organizers of the AFS Chapter were happy to host the area weekend.

The students said they came to the United States to learn. Lina Amin of Jordon is living with the Steven and JoAnne Stella family of Norwell. She said her impression of the United States was based on TV shows like "Dallas" and American movies. After being here awhile, she's found, "There's no such thing as a typical American."

Hugo said they also realize that the South Shore is different from other parts of the country.

When speaking to the Hanover group last Friday, each AFS student thanked the Hanover AFS Club for the weekend. Most of them also entreated students in the audience to become an AFS student, and families in the audience to become host-families.

Fahri Diner of TurkishCyprus also thanked his host-family who was at the dinner, the Bill and Judith Earle family of Scituate. The Earle family decided to host a student because Karen Earle had gone to France as an AFS student a couple of years ago.

While on exchange, the students become involved in extra curricular activities, and they take the academic aspect of their education seriously. Fahri told the group, "I didn't come to Hanover High School today because I had track practice and a math test. I didn't want to miss it because I didn't want to make it up."

As part of the presentation, each student spoke to the group in his native language; then said the same thing in English. After charming their audience with their friendliness and sincerity, the AFS students sang a few songs, standing with arms linked and faces glowing.

The theme was the same in all the songs: AFS is love, brotherhood and peace.

The songs were sung in 12 different accents. Each voice represented a different country. Each song said that all nations can sing in one voice.

Editorial

Bad precedent

It doesn't take a long period of time for an observer at School Committee meetings to come to the conclusion board member Martha Gjesteby is often the lone dissenter on the board.

Sometimes, the committee conversations are less than cordial and rather heated.

But that's acceptable because we live in a democracy and every committee member should have the right to give an informed and responsible opinion.

In addition it is expected every board member should have equal access to School Dept. information. We trust each school committee member will keep his or her word to what is public and what isn't public information.

We find no disagreement in a form requesting information from the school superintendent as a records procedure. as a move to increase public awareness and for board members to make better informed decisions.

But we agree with Martha that her civil rights as a duly elected representative is impaired if three members or a majority of the school board decide Martha should not know certain information.

Although the intent of the policy was not specifically stated as one to keep Martha Gjesteby away from School Supt. Eugene Crowell during budget time, it is anticipated, Gjesteby will request the most information and ask the more critical questions.

That is past practice.

As an elected official, every committee member should have a right to make the most informed decision and likewise know that some information such as a teachers personnel folder is confidential.

Although this policy is an experiment, the majority-rule proposal should be repealed. It sets a dangerous precedent for all Cohasset government committees to adopt.

Observations

What is the definition of an expert. Selectman Frank England feels it is "an ordinary guy from out-of-town."

Was this a preview of the Cohasset Super Bowl? Just before the Advisory Committee was set to meet with selectmen concerning certain town departments, Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria called out his troops to a quick huddle 10 yards away from sitting selectmen?

Grandma ran out of answers

We celebrated Tanya's eighth birthday Saturday.

"It's great," she confided. "I don't even have to go to school Monday because it's Martha Luten King's Day."

With a little prompting, she recalled the correct name, and even remembered "Dr. King was a very great man who tried to teach people that it doesn't matter what color you are and that we should all work together and help each other out."

"Do you remember," she went on, "that I visited you in at the State House last year, and we saw General Hooker?"

I did indeed. When Tanya pointed to the statue of a noble-looking general astride a horse, and asked who it was, I realized that I had no notion who the gentleman was or what he had done that was memorable.

"That's General Hooker," I winged it, reading the name from the plaque, "and he was very brave in a war."

Tanya went into rhapsodies. "Thank you, General Hooker," she enthused, throwing her arms around the base of the statue. "I love you, General Hooker."

When I told her it was time to go indoors, she reluctantly released her grip. "Goodbye, General Hooker," she sobbed. Then she looked up at me.

"Grandma, who's that man on General Hooker?"

"Do you remember seeing the Senate Chamber?" I asked.

She giggled, an eight year-old recalling from her superior vantage the misconceptions of a seven year-old.

"Yes. I asked you why the sea gull had a sign in his mouth. You told me it was an American eagle and he was holding a banner."

She frowned. "What did you tell me it said?"

"It said, 'God Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts,' " I reminded her.

"Then we went to see Senator McKinnon and you sat on his lap."

"I remember," she said impatiently. "He gave me a dollar and I said I'd vote for him.

"Then I told him about the eagle wanting God to save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and I asked him if God did.

"I didn't understand what he said then, though. He said all the precincts weren't in yet."

"I think," I told her, "he meant we all have to work with God to make that happen, and maybe everyone isn't ready to do that yet."

"I suppose so," she said. "Grandma, how come somebody shot Martin Luther King?"

Grandma ran out of answers.

A few words about the Lowrey Bell case

By the Rev. Edward Atkinson

The warrant for the Special Town Meeting scheduled for Jan. 17 is a sorry commentary on the state of our community life. Called for in the warrant are over $86,000 in additional legal expenses to the town.

Over half of that sum results from the settlement of a basically childish dispute over the construction of a tennis court.

No doubt the aggrieved party in this case is acting within his legal rights. At least the judicial system seems to support him, as we are told that the proposed $47,430 settlement will "avoid higher potential cost."

Nonetheless, I shall cast a symbolic "no" vote on this issue.

There is something grossly immoral in compensating one individual more for a loss of recreational opportunity than we expend in the same year for the town Recreation Department which serves the other 7,700 residents of the town or eight times the amount expended for the Council on Aging which serves our elder citizens.

It is a shameful situation.

Shameful that neighbors should have so little consideration for each other that they cannot resolve their differences out of court. Shameful that such huge sums of money should be needed to obtain a ruling on a relatively simple question of law. Shameful that those who suffer most by this action are the innocent children and elder citizens of our community whose programs are often underfunded because of budget stringency while legal expenses drain our limited public resources.

We may have no other choice but to vote in the affirmative on the Articles to come before the Jan. 17 Town Meeting, but we should not do so without the words of Jesus resounding in our ears. "Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for you tithe the mint and dill and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith; these you ought to have done, without neglecting the others. You blind guides, straining out a gnat and swallowing a camel!"

Stable Management

The Cohasset Riding Club, as part of its Winter Lecture Series, will present a program on Stable Management Sunday, Jan. 22, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

The program will be presented by the Animal Rescue League of Boston and will cover a common sense approach to Stable Management for all horse owners.

Proper care, shelter, and feeding will be stressed, particularly relating to Massachusetts anti-cruelty laws.

A film and discussion will accompany the lecture.

Cohasset 4-H members are asked to meet at 7 p.m. for a brief meeting before the presentation.

The public is invited. A $1 donation to the Animal Rescue League will be requested.

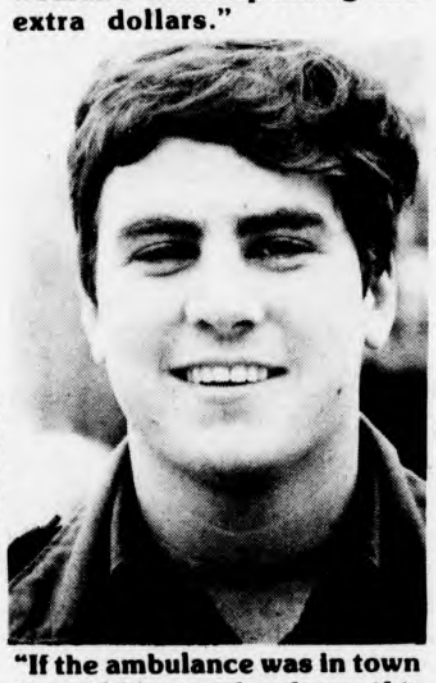
What do you think of private ambulance service?

Maureen Flaherty

"Considering the possibility that someone would be coming from out of town rather than from Cohasset, I think the time element is a factor. I think if you balance the situation with the taxpayer being saved money as opposed to saving a life, I wouldn't mind spending the extra dollars."

William Kleinz

"My family has used the town-run ambulance with excellent results. And, besides, I don't see any special advantages to the other."



Tanna Kasperowicz

"I like the idea of the ambulance showing up before the fire truck. And I like it all coming from the same call. I'd rather see some positive things happening, better medical training for EMTs, etc. Unless it were a regional effort, I can't see any special advantage."

Ken Corcoran

"I would rather have the town-run ambulance because I believe the other would cost more. I agree with the argument that the private ambulance would not know exact locations of everyone in town as the town-run ambulance would."

Tom Atkinson

"If the ambulance was in town it would be good to have, if it saved money. Otherwise, I'd rather keep the present service.

Joan Kovach

"I favor keeping it the way it is. I called them once for a neighbor and their response was fast and appropriate and effective and it was clear they knew the family. Familiar and very satisfactory. We wouldn't get the same with a private company.

Nancy Pottenger

"I would rather have someone from Cohasset coming to my house rather than from another town (Hingham or Scituate) were it a regional ambulance."

Telephone wise, modular is now the thing

By Judith Denzer Cooper

Are you modular? If you are, the recent changes in telephone company ownership will not be a problem.

All new telephone service and responsibility makes the assumption that home telephones are modular (unpluggable). Any phone installed after 1976 fits the new design and almost all desk or table phones installed in the last 15 years are also unpluggable.

One possible exception is a wall phone. If the phone has been on the wall for 15 years or more it is probably wired into the house rather than removable (modular). Homeowners should contact American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T) for specific instructions on how to convert hard wired to modular phones.

WHY IS MODULAR IMPORTANT?

As of Jan. 1, 1984, if you have trouble with your telephone service the proper procedure is still to call the phone company repair service at 1-555-1611.

You will be asked if the problem is in the phone or in the wires. If you say "I don't know," or "I think it's the wires," New England Telephone (NET) will visit the house. If the problem is in the wires (as it usually is) the company will fix it at no cost.

If the repair person determines the problem is not in the wires but in the phone, you will have to pay a $50 service charge and the phone will not be fixed. NET cannot work on the phone because it belongs to AT&T.

This entire scene can be avoided if the phones in your house are modular. In that case you simply unplug the phone at the location of the problem (static, no dial tone, etc.) and plug in another phone. You can borrow a phone from your neighbor or use another phone from your own house for this test.

If the problem still exists even when you use a second phone, then you can call NET with confidence and tell them the problem is in the wires not the telephone. They are responsible for keeping the wires in good condition at no cost to the homeowner.

WHAT HAPPENS IF THE PHONE IS BROKEN?

All residents may continue to lease each phone in a home as they do now. The cost will increase from an average $1.10 for a rotary dial table phone, to approximately $1.50 per month. But AT&T will make all repairs on leased phones at no cost, IF YOU BRING THE PHONE TO THEM.

Even if you own your present phone or want to buy the phone in your home ($20.00 for a standard rotary dial desk phone), the AT&T will service anything that's wrong with the phone for a moderate fee. But again, this is only if you bring the phone to them.

If the phone with a problem is wired into the house the cost for a service call to fix the problem will be $100 per hour, ($40 for the first 15 minutes and $20 for each 15 minutes after that).

Both NET and AT&T have been advertising the fact your phone service will not change unless you actively cancel it. You will automatically be leasing your present phones and as long as they are modular there is no problem testing them and having repairs done without cost. If you have a "hard-wired" phone, AT&T will explain how it may be converted to a modular phone if you call 1-800-555-8111.

Although local service will cost more, long distance rates should decrease over the next few years. There will also be new service options such as "cross-state" service which will allow calls from the 617 area code to 413 for $10 per month. This program is important to parents in eastern Massachusetts who have children at western Massachusetts colleges such as U. Mass. Amherst.

The phone company is also working on a minimum phone cost program which will be called "measured service." This will allow a customer to have phone service for $3.00 per month. The individual could receive unlimited incoming calls and make up to 30 short (five minute) calls a month. This program would mean that phone service would not become an excessive expense for people on a fixed income.

New telephone bills will look different and may be seven or eight pages long. But the bottom line will not be drastically different. NET is doing the billing for AT&T so there will still be only one monthly bill which covers all telephone service.

Call for a universal number

(The following is a copy of a letter sent to selectmen. Ed.)

Happy New Year and great thanks for all the hard work you've done for the town. It isn't the increased number of selectmen alone but the caliber of you people that has put new spirit and efficiency in our town government.

No doubt you saw or heard what Chief Justice Burger had to say about arbitration vs. litigation. How and when can we start? One glance at our warrant shows the pressing need.

With the talk of consultants for the fire department, it seems appropriate to once more consider a department of public safety: police, ambulance, and fire prevention.

Having our own ambulance is a great source of peace of mind, especially to people with physical limitations.

Upgrading the training of the EMTs seems a logical step forward. However, while I know the police number, 383-1212; the fire dept. number doesn't come easily to mind. One universal number would be excellent, such as keeping 1212.

Best wishes for the coming year.

The truth behind those 'tards & tights

By Lois Martin

Back to the body. There were at least 10 more pounds on it and those had formed loosely, hanging in places they weren't needed. They were probably related to the day I made popcorn at 10 a.m. or that evening I pulled a chair up to the hors d'oeuvres.

At any rate, a friend got this 2 for 1 gift for body revitalization. She invited me to join her, saying she'd heard that up to about the mid-50s you could recoup muscles. Thereafter, well, I was afraid I had a preview of coming attractions.

I treated myself to new 'tards and tights but in balance I refused to buy myself the more expensive ones because I looked the same in cheaper 'tards.

The weighing and measuring in was conducted at Woman's World by a 32 year-old woman who was created when nature was in her prime. She is 5'7", 115 pounds, she said on tart questioning. And her lithe, compact, perfectly shaped body was topped by a pretty face. In my heart I forgave her. I was tempted to pray that she fall in love, bear six children in that many years and develop an addiction to macaroni and butter.

A lot of women's eyes fill with tears during the weighing in. But it's the measuring I found most disconcerting. The only merit I found in my body was the circumference of my left upper arm.

Then just before the group exercise I glanced at my chart and panicked.

There was this high figure there. But that was not my hips, it was my age.

A fit person in black leads the exercises. She is on an elevated platform and the rest of us are in front of her. Mirrors are everywhere. There is no casual glance that can avoid one's apparition in the mirror. I found mine and winced. Such a contrast between my 'tards shape and that of our leader, a different species almost.

It was while I was on three-fours that I discovered what I'll call 'the grasshopper theory.' The leader had seen to it that we got on our hands and knees and kept hurling one leg in every direction, angle, for about 10 minutes. No commercials.

And I wonder. If you took a grasshopper and decided to de-leg it, would it suffer more pain if you broke off bits of each leg evenly or if you just ripped off one good leg whole at a time.

My answer to this physics/medical question:

The grasshopper would suffer more pain if you ripped off one entire leg at a time rather than breaking off equal pieces of legs at a pace.

And I'll tell you why. So much action was placed on my left leg that by the time it was called upon to support the body during the right leg's workout, it was unable to do so. Had I, I figured as I emitted soft moans, been allowed to alternate legs/pain, I'd have lasted longer.

No one cared. The woman behind me, an off-duty drill sergeant unless I miss my guess, kept up the count. You're supposed to count as Michael (Michelle?) Jackson sings gustily. I couldn't move my lips.

During the pushups I started peeking between my toes toward the door. Maybe my son would come back early with the car. I could rush toward him as if he had contracted a highly contagious flu and get him out of the building in an emergency escape.

On the wall there was a notice for the "Hip & Thigh Clinic." Not on your life. People don't like my hips and thighs, let 'em avert their eyes. Besides mine were broken by then.

It was clear to me that my son had no intention of ever picking me up again. That would be, I determined as I lifted my head toward my knees with pelvic tilt in place and plump face flushed, the last bloomin' time he'd get the car. No decent son would leave his mother there unattended. When he finally arrived, I stivered toward him giving him plenty of time to daydream about being there to pick up that nifty instructor instead of the precious old soul who was his mother.

It's been about a week since I started my fat farm training. I'm down a few pounds and I walk funny. My friend's gift is good for six weeks. It's called the "trial" membership. And it certainly is. So far I've managed to bring my rib cage to better development. And my 'tards fit a bit better.

Furthermore, I've developed keen outrage toward people who rip off grasshopper's legs for the fun of it.

"Hot" is the way we like our food when it's January in blustery New England. Steaming "hot" soup, a few "redhot" muffins to go with your chowder and "hot-off the griddle," what woodsmen and campers call flapjacks, but are more elegantly known as crepes. With crisp bacon or tasty country sausage, pancakes can even be served as a luncheon dish and to make apple pancakes, peel one tart, juicy apple, quarter and stir thin slices into the batter. Canned or frozen blueberries may also be added. Pancake sandwiches can be made into a hearty dish with a filling made from leftovers, using two pancakes to make the sandwiches. Creamed chicken or tuna, creamed mushrooms or ham filling may be used as follows: 1 can concentrated cream of chicken soup diluted with about 1/4 c. cream or milk. Add chicken and mushrooms and season to taste with nutmeg or sherry. If you have leftover ham, add one can cream of celery soup, diluted with the cream or milk. Here is how the French make their crepes, which may be used for dessert when spread with jelly, rolled up and sprinkled with powdered sugar.

FRENCH PANCAKES

Put in a bowl:
2 eggs, beaten
1 c. milk
1/2 tsp. salt
1 c. all-purpose or pastry flour

Stir until smooth. Cover and let stand at least 1/2 hour. The batter should be thin — just thick enough to coat a spoon dipped in it. If the batter is too thick, stir in a little more milk. Heat a 5 or 6" frying pan. Grease lightly and pour in batter to cover the pan with a very thin layer. Tilt the pan so that the batter spreads evenly. When cooked on one side, turn with a spatula and brown other side. Keep warm if serving immediately. May even be frozen. Makes 18 to 24.

Getting together for dinner is a pleasant pastime guaranteed to lift one out of the January doldrums. It's an occasion for much research and preparation for Scituate couples who take turns hosting gourmet meals. Susan and Neal Campbell, Nanette and Bill Limbacher, Sue and Walt Fraser and Roy and Barbara Swanner have dined on Danish cuisine, Mardi Gras recipes, Christmas desserts — even a clambake. One of their favorite appetizers is Nanette's

HOT SHRIMP BROCCOLI DIP

1 pkg. frozen chopped broccoli
1 stick butter or oleo
1 can cream of shrimp soup (Campbell's)
1 can chopped shrimp pieces
1 8 oz. cream cheese
Juice of one lemon
Salt and pepper

In medium saucepan, saute broccoli in butter. Add lemon juice, salt and pepper. Blend in cream cheese, add soup and shrimp. Cook until bubbly, mix well so it doesn't stick. Serve warm from fondue pot with king-size Frito chips.

At the South Shore Art Center

The New Year brings a new beginning and a chance to try something new. The South Shore Art Center has added some new course offerings in its design department.

Registrations are now being accepted for the winter semester at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd.

Heading the list of courses in the design department are Beginning Illustration, taught by Irene Roman, Wednesdays, from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. beginning Jan. 18; and Artwork for Reproduction, taught by Joe Ciccolo, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., beginning Jan. 23. Advanced registration is required for all courses.

Artwork for Reproduction will introduce students to the procedures and techniques designers use to create artwork which they may wish to reproduce. Emphasis will be on design as a means of communication and class projects will be based on professional assignments.

Ciccolo will cover layout techniques, typography, use of materials and methods. A freelance graphic designer, himself, Ciccolo background will give him the tools for teaching this course effectively.

He holds an M.A.E. from SMU and a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art and has 16 years commercial art teaching experience from the Framingham VoTech.

Beginning Illustration I and II will cover with students how to interpret a manuscript and translate the editorial viewpoint into an illustrative viewpoint. Roman will teach the steps in creating and illustrating, rough sketch, tissue, color composition and finished art. She will have students do an actual illustration assignment.

For this course students should have good drawing and design skills and in order to enroll they will be asked to show three pieces of art.

A freelance illustrator, Roman received her BFA in illustration from the Massachusetts College of Art and has attended the N.E. School of Art and the Art Institute. She has received an award of excellence from the Boston Society of Illustrators.

Also in the design department, Louise Kalish will teach Color and Design on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning Jan. 20. This is an essential course for every artist. The course stresses a background in color and design in order to create effective works of art.

Assignments will be given to teach the use of color and the basic elements of good design which will strengthen the impact of finished work.

Those persons interested in taking any one of these courses or any of the Center's classes in drawing, painting, landscape design, photography, etc. are encouraged to call the Center, 383-9548, to enroll. Enrollments may be taken by phone and charged to either Mastercard or Visa.

"Sculpture in a Landscape - the overlapping of sculpture, environmental art and landscape architcture" - is a new course offering at the Center.

Taught by award winning landscape contractor Mary Smith, the course will meet Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning Jan. 21 at the Center. Her course, "Home Landscape Design," will follow on the same day beginning Jan. 21 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Emphasis in both courses is on concept and design; neither class is a course in gardening. Specific plants may be named but time will not be spent on horticultural problems. Advanced registration is required for both courses.

Smith's course, Sculpture in Landscape, will consider two problems: setting a specific sculpture into the landscape and designing a specific landscape as a sculpture. Participants will develop projects in class.

Her other course, Home Landscape Design, will help students learn to create a feeling with exterior environments. Through this course she attempts to make her class more aware of the principles and tools of landscape architecture.

Students will develop appropriate solutions to three assigned landscape design projects chosen to help them deal with landscape design on a residential scale. Smith will explain simple drafting techniques.

Her extensive background as a landscape architect and instructor will benefit students enrolling in the Center's landscape design classes.

She is currently a teaching assistant in Residential Design at Harvard's evening program. She holds a graduate degree from Harvard's School of Landscape Architecture and as a landscape architect works on both residential and commercial property.

She has authored the "Chelsea Waterfront Study" and "Color Systems in the Landscape." Her work as a landscape watercolorist also gives her an experienced eye for creating visually pleasing outdoor environments.

For complete information on these two classes and others at the Center, call 383-9548. Phone registrations may be taken and charged to either Visa or Mastercard.

Cohasset Democrats to caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will hold a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 11 at 2 p.m., to elect delegates to the 1984 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

The Convention, which will be held on June 9, 1984, will endorse a candidate for United States Senate and select "Party and Elected Official" delegates and alternates to the 1984 Democratic National Convention.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and two alternates equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for Governor and President.

Donna J. McGee will call the caucus at the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 29, 1983. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas.

Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegates selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic State Committee, 11 Beacon street, Suite 426, Boston, Mass. 02108, no later than February 13, 1984.

Community Center has something for everyone

The Cohasset Community Center means different things to every age group in town, and in its membership.

For young children, it is the location of their nursery school, gymnastics or dance program.

Older children come to the Center Karate, gymnastics, dance and many creative expression courses. Teenagers and adults find specialized help in academic/computer enrichment, complete exercise programs , craft, cooking and hobby instruction.

All ages participate in bowling, and many groups use the Center's facilities, such as Scouts and Social Security.

Expansion plans are now underway to provide more suitable rooms for the physical activity courses, which are so popular.

The Center depends upon community support, and has received enthusiastic backing in the past for its annual fund-raisers. The Winter fund-raiser, the "Frosty Frolic," will be a dance at Hugo's Lighthouse Jan. 27 at 8:45. Ticket prices are only $3 and music will be provided by the Band. So please consider buying a ticket as a donation to the Center's programs.

Tickets are available mornings at the Community Center, 3 No. Main St., 383-0088. Remaining tickets will be sold at the door.

This is the final week of registraton for the Cohasset Community Center's winter programs. Call 383-0088 between 9 and 1 weekdays to sign up for any course or workshop.

Programs offered range from academic enrichment to craft instruction and physical exercise and development. Highlighted are some new offerings: "Sunday Writing Seminar" for children 10 to 14 years old, an opportunity to improve those all-important writing skills; "Mom and Me" and "Gym Fitness," new gymnastics classes for small children offered in addition to a gymnastics schedule for all ages and abilities. Both boys and girls, "Classical Ballet, for children 7 to 14 years old, and "Pre-Natal" and "Post-Natal" exercise courses specifically designed to tone and develop the body of the new mother.

"Aerobic Dancing" will be offered to women and men in the evening. There will be two new field trips added to "Getting Better Acquainted with Antiques," one of the Museum of Fine Arts and one to the House of Seven Gables. "Rape Prevention and Awareness" is a crucial self-defense course designed for women of all ages.

Popular courses which are returning include "Puppet Making Workshop," a four session course for children 7 to 11 years old to make and perform with puppets. "Jazz" returns on Monday afternoons; "Bowling" for children Grades K through 3, "Cartooning" for children ages 9 to 16, and high school students' "SAT Preparation" also are offered again.

"Computers for the Novice" and a new course, "Pascal Programming," will be held in the evenings. "Exercise for Total Fitness" with Joanne Sheppard continues daily. "Oriental Rug-Making" and "Stencilling," two exquisite decorative arts for the home, will again take students.

Three workshops will be held in the following weeks: "C.P.R." Wednesday evenings, from 7 to 11 p.m., Feb. 1 and Feb. 8 with Linda Farrag and Dr. Michael Equi, certified instructors; "Continental Knitting," Thursdays, Feb. 2 and Feb. 9, from 12 to 2 p.m. with Laila Roukonakis; and the cooking evening "Not Just Spaghetti," Tuesday, Jan. 31 from 7 to 9 p.m. with Carol Walls and Anna Abbruzzesse.

Art Center still searching for a new home

By Pat Desmond

The South Shore Art Center is still lodged at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, more than a year after beginning its search for a new home.

"There's not much new," Margaret Dillon, the center's executive director, said this week when asked how the drive was going.

Cohasset is still the center's first choice for a new location. But finding a suitable site hasn't been a simple undertaking.

The center asked people to come forward with potential sites some time ago. Dillon said there were a number of people who had land available, but nothing was right for the center.

"Either it was unbuildable or there was some other problem," she said.

The Cohasset School Committee turned the center down on a request for school land.

Dillon termed the money already raised for the new center as "preliminary gifts." A capital drive will be getting underway at a time yet to be determined.

It was almost two years ago when the center first announced plans to move to a larger location. The gallery space at the center isn't quite what the artists hope for and, while classes are held in the building, there is no real meeting room.

The announcement about the planned move included information about a poll taken among members of the center on the proposal. Cohasset was the first choice of the members' poll. Hingham was second and Scituate was the third choice.

Since that time, some money has been raised. Last spring the South Shore Music Circus matched the grant that got the idea off the ground.

"I'm not sure when we'll start the capital campaign," Dillon said. "We'll send out an announcement when we're ready."

LITTLE CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS

Mrs. Sue McNamara, mother of Megan, (a.m. Kindergarten) was a guest lecturer on Jan. 6 to discuss the tradition of Little Christmas and the Three Kings and their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh. The discussion ended with a celebration of small fruit cakes adorned with whipped cream, and gum drop jewels. Children had surprise gifts of chocolate filled gold coins.

Children are now doing a Fairy Tale Unit. They have made small castles and illustrated their first story. The story was read over three days, so the children could work on the skills of what might happen next (inference) then recall what did happen the day before (recall). They learned many new vocabulary words - enchanted, pantry, utensils, splendid, parlour. The fairy tale was "The Fisherman and His Wife," by The Brothers Grimm.

MAGICIAN TEACHES SAFETY

Mr. McFeeney, a magician who works for the National Safety Council, visited Deer Hill and Osgood Schools on Friday, Dec. 16.

Mr. McFeeney lives in South Carolina, but he travels all over the United States and has been shown on local TV and radio.

Mr. McFeeney was visiting the South Shore area when Safety Officer Jones asked if he would perform for Deer Hill and Osgood.

Mr. McFeeney mixed magic with safety tips. He had two assistants, Kevin Mulchahy, and a rabbit called Bruce Bunny. Kevin said, "I didn't know where I was going until I was picked." He does agree with most kids saying, "It was very funny, but also taught us a lot."

Officer Jones says he wants him back.

Johnston's talk on Saudi Arabia is a hit

On December 14 and 19, Mr. Francis Johnston of Fair Oaks Lane spoke to Mrs. Ely's World Relations class at the High School. The aim of the course is to expose students to the areas in the world in which the United States plays a part. They study the places in the news, the background of the people and what effect their beliefs and experiences have on current dilemmas.

Mr. Johnston had lived in Saudi Arabia and explained how the Saudi way of life differs from ours. He brought a copy of the Koran and described how it governed the people in every facet of their lives, not just religiously.

The students heard the tape of a prayer call which sounds from the mosque five times daily and signals the time of prayer. The social laws were different also as evidenced by the fact that a woman is considered so inferior that she is not counted as a member of the family. If she is waiting in line in the market, a man has the right to get in front of her! Besides the social laws, Mr. Johnston explained about the different sects of the Moslems, the Shiites and the Sunnis and how they differ in belief and practice.

These differences are evident in the disputes in Lebanon, Syria, Iran and Iraq today. Mr. Johnston's talk was so fascinating that he stayed and spoke to other classes as well. It was a day that stimulated great discussion!

CHS debate team competes at Dartmouth

The Cohasset High School Debating Team has taken part in several debates at Dartmouth High School this year. Although the team has yet to win a debate, members of the team are gaining valuable experience in debating methods and strategy.

The team, which is primarily composed of sophomores, is a member team in the highly competitive South Shore Debate League. Many of the teams in this league take part in many championship tournaments throughout the New England area.

The team has lost several very close debate matches to such forensic powerhouses as Somerset High School and Dartmouth High. Cohasset's debate roster includes: Mike Greiner, Bob Corkery, Glen Hochkeppel, Mike White, John Kornet, Dan Rossi (all sophomores) plus freshman Patrick Walsh and seniors Meg McCullough and Maura Corkery. Cohasset's debate coach is Mr. Edward G. Sheehan.

This year's debate topic is the American Criminal Justice System. "We are a young team - one that will improve with age," said Mr. Sheehan. "The competition is very tough but we are getting sharper with each debate."

Cohasset's two affirmative teams are presenting plans to reform the jury system in Massachusetts and to revise the federal guidelines for search and seizure. The negative teams are presently trying to attack plans that would: reform the bail system; establish new guidelines for the use of hypnosis in trials; reform the use of the exclusionary rule and change the guidelines for use of grand juries in criminal cases.

School Committee on computer use

The School Committee recently discussed use of the school computers for courses sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center. The committee is considering charging a token fee for use of school equipment.

Board member Diana Kornet is concerned center use might take up access time needed by school students. But School Supt. Eugune Crowell stressed school students would be given the top priority to use the computers.

Committee member Dr. Joseph Nedrow favored a token fee because he feels the more residents have exposure to the school computers, the better for the School Committee budget at town meeting.

CHS sports roundup

By Carla Lucas and Tracey Fitzpatrick

GYMNASTICS

The gymnastics team met Hanover and lost 102.7 - 70.55. The team did well considering most of the gymnasts are seventh and eighth graders who have never competed before.

In the meet against Scituate, the girls improved their scores by 12 points, but lost 110-82.1.

Marybeth McNamara placed third in the floor competition, and Susie MacManon placed second on the beam and third in vaulting. Coach Palardy feels the gymnasts are improving.

HOCKEY

The hockey team faced some tough competition this past week, playing Duxbury and Hanover.

In the Duxbury game, Cohasset lost 12-2. The Skippers started off with a bang with a goal by Alex Ghetto but Duxbury had seven unanswered goals after that in the first period.

Peter Sandblom then came in to play net for the Skippers and only let in one goal.

However, in the third period Duxbury scored four more goals to Cohasset's one by Joe Hoffman.

In the Hanover game the Skippers played well in the first period, allowing Hanover only one power play goal.

However, Cohasset's 15 penalties caused them to give up six more goals. Hanover went on to win the game 8-2. Alex Ghetto and Danny Curran scored one goal each for the Skippers.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The Girls Basketball team pulled a 13-12 half time deficit to a 39-35 win over Scituate.

"Overall we did not play very well," commented Coach Fallon, "but we did show some poise to pull the game out."

Janet DiGirolamo had 12 points and two big foul shots in the last 16 seconds, to put the game away.

Against Holbrook, Cohasset pulled off another big win 51-43, to improve its record to 8-2.

"We had an excellent first quarter, outscoring Holbrook 21-9," said Coach Fallon, "and we finished strong in the last, making seven out of nine foul shots, which is quite an improvement."

Janet DiGirolamo had 17 points and an excellent floor game at point guard while teammate Tracy Fitzpatrick had 13 points.

BOYS WRESTLING

The Boys Wrestling team fell short to Norwell 35-24.

"Yet, all wrestled very well," said Coach Sweeney.

Lee Reed won his match while wrestling in a higher weight class at 128 versus a much larger competition.

A very sharp looking Brian Leary won his match as well.

Eric Whitman, a very promising sophomore, pinned his man for a win. Ricky Rourke won 8-4 against a very tough competiton and James Dillon, although he lost 10-8, had a super match against an experienced opponent.

Who should be 'Person of the Year'?

Now that 1983 is history, who in town should be Cohasset's man or woman of the year?

Who has done or accomplished the most for the public good without fanfare or without much public recognition?

There are no requirements except the person should either be a resident or own a business in Cohasset.

Please send nominations and a brief reason for selection to the Mariner through Box 71, Cohasset, or the drop spots at Hennessey's News or Colonial Pharmacy.

The top three winners will be interviewed and photographed.

Cohasset youths charged in break case

After a month's work, Hingham police have recovered $100,000 worth of stolen property and have charged a number of Hingham and Cohasset teenagers in connection with a series of December housebreaks.

And suspect, David I. Smith, 17, of 23 North St. was arraigned in Hingham District Court Monday morning on a charge of breaking and entering. At least three juveniles will be charged, and police are continuing their investigations.

The recovered property, which Det. Lt. Edmond Burgess said was recovered from under bridges, in wooded areas and as a result of numerous anonymous phone calls, included a wide range of items, from a portable television set to an antique clock to a diamond-studded ladies' watch valued at $30,000.

Burgess said the youths were probably collecting the stolen goods in preparation to selling them later. Liquor taken in several of the breaks was missing, and Burgess said the youths had probably consumed it.

He said the housebreaks followed a pattern of school truancy that is still being investigated.

In most cases, house entry was gained by either walking in an unlocked door or by smashing a side or back window in order to reach in and undo the lock, Burgess said.

He credited cooperation between the detective division and the patrol division, especially Officer Sam Amonte, with the recovery of the stolen goods.

Burgess and the entire detective division, Taylor Mills, Gerald McInnis and John Kichler, are continuing their work on the case.

Parents upset with elementary class size options

By Mike Berger

It is likely school parents and the School Committee will be asking the Advisory Committee and April Town Meeting voters for more money than allocated for the next fiscal year.

The reason is larger than expected elementary school class sizes. The requested amount could be more than $60,000. The advisory board allocated over $90,000 to the school committee this year but much of that will be used to settle four labor union contracts.

Last year the committee asked for over $50,000 and the amount was approved by a 12-vote margin and over the wishes of the advisory board.

Monday night, about a dozen parents attended a school board meeting to hear School Supt. Eugene Crowell unveil his "80" class size options.

Eighty refers to the number of students expected next year. The question is if three or four teachers will staff the classrooms.

Three teachers could produce class sizes of 25 to 28 pupils per teacher while four teachers would bring the class enrollments for the primary grades to the 19 to 21 student per teacher classroom ratio.

Crowell presented five options which involve combining a section of Grade 2-3, Grade 4-5 and Grade 5-6.

The section, said school administrators, would be heterogeneous, meaning a cross section of student abilities would be grouped together for the class.

The parents' first reaction to the options was unanimous support for Option 1. Under this plan, 1.5 teachers would staff the Kindergarten, four teachers for Grade 1, 3, 4, 5, and 6. Three teachers would staff Grade 2.

The lowest class size under this option would be 19 students per class for Grade 6 and the highest class size would be 22 students per class for Grade 2.

The other classroom ratios are 21 for Kindergarten, Grade 1 and 3 and 20 students per class for Grades 4 and 5.

Option 2 was Crowell's preliminary budget recommendation, a proposal he said was fiscally sound but a plan, educationally, he opposed.

Under Option 1, three teachers would be hired at a near $20,000 cost. Under Option 2, the staff for the primary grades drops from 23 elementary positions now to 21.5.

Option 2 involves combining 16 Grade 2 and seven Grade 3 students into one class and a combination of 12 Grade 4 and 10 Grade 5 students.

The average classroom ratios for this plan are: 21 for Kindergarten and Grade 1; 25 for Grades 2 and 3; 23 for Grades 4 and 5 and 26 for Grade 6.

Options 3-5

Option 3 does not include any combined groups but cuts the staffing level from 23 to 21.5. Classroom ratios are: 21 for Kindergarten and Grade 1; 22 for Grade 2; 28 for Grade 3; 20 for Grade 4; 27 for Grade 5 and 26 for Grade 6.

Option 4 uses a Grade 3-4 combination, combining 12 Grade 3 and a dozen Grade 4 students into one class. This class would be housed at the Deer Hill School.

This plan's average classroom ratio is 21 for Kindergarten and Grade 1; 22 for Grade 2; 23 for Grades 3 and 4; 27 for Grade 5 and 26 for Grade 6.

Option 5 uses no class combinations but cuts 2.5 positions from 23 to 20.5. Average pupil-teacher ratios are 21 for Kindergarten and Grade 1; 22 for Grade 2; 28 for Grade 3; 27 for Grade 4 and 26 for Grades 5-6.

Ambulance support overwhelming

By Bill Hayward

Residents who attended the Ambulance Study Committee meeting Monday night showed overwhelming support for the current Fire Dept. ambulance service.

Everyone who spoke at the meeting favored retaining the ambulance service. No one spoke in favor of hiring a private ambulance service.

Many residents praised the quick response time of the Fire Dept. ambulance. "I've used the (Cohasset) EMT s (emergency medical technicians) four times for myself and once for my wife, and they are there immediately," said one man.

Marie McCarthy told about the day her daughter had a serious bicycle accident. At the time of the accident neighbors called Mrs. McCarthy and the Fire Dept. simultaneously. "I drove about the distance of a city block, and by the time I got there they already had her on a back-board and in a neck brace."

Several people said there are numerous small streets and private drives in Cohasset, which might confuse employees of a private ambulance service, where Cohasset EMT s are familiar with the town.

Firefighter John Boswell said, "You get a private service in here and they will be driving around for hours, looking for some place that doesn't exist."

Another firefighter, William Litchfield, said a private ambulance service could not be as cost efficient as the Fire Dept. service because EMTs double as firefighters.

Several residents asked why the committee had been formed if residents were happy with the current ambulance service.

McCarthy said, "I was perplexed as to why this committee was started," Robert Thompson said, "If it isn't broken, should we be fixing it?"

Committee member Dr. Mark Friedman said "No one is saying that the present service is bad." He said within the last few years tremendous advances in emergency medical treatment have been made, and the committee is trying to make sure that Cohasset gets the best, most efficient service possible.

Upgraded emergency medical treatment would require EMTs with more training than Cohasset's EMT s now have.

When asked if a private ambulance service could provide more advanced emergency medical treatment, committee Chairman Roy Fitzimmons said, "One company has offered 60 hours per week of intensive life

Political cauldron starts to bubble

The political dust is starting to stir and the local election talk and rumor is beginning to surface at the "Log and Line."

Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur and Selectman John DeBassio have or plan to take out nomination papers for a three-year term this week.

Former Advisory Board Chairman Jean Cotton and Diane Sullivan, DeBassio's opponent last April, said they have no plans to run for selectmen.

Meanwhile, School Committee Chairman Dick Conley is still considering if he should run again for the school board.

Also taking out nomination papers for two unexpired four-year terms on the Recreation Commission were Roberta (Robin) Suhrbier of 178 South Main St. and Peter Laugelle, 17 King Street and Parks Dept. supervisor. Alna Ekberg of 66 Nichols Road is running for a five-year term.

Casino gambling bill filed again

By Pat Desmond

The story of the fight against casino gambling hasn't changed much in the past few years.

One report after another has been published to document the charges made by the anti-casino forces. Ties between organized crime and the casinos of Atlantic City have been written about by journalists and resarchers.

The same arguments are used for and against the casino picture.

The pro-casino people say the gaming establishments can bring new income, higher property values and glamor.

The anti-casino people counter with what else comes along with the money--higher crime rates and overburdened resources.

The state legislature will consider casino legislation again this year. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) filed the bill "on request," as her office puts it.

Officials in Hull have been backing the concept of a casino for that town for the past seven years--ever since the townspeople there approved a referendum on the issue.

Murray, whose district includes Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, opposes the passage of the bill.

Citizens Against Casino Gambling, CACG, is continuing its lobbying effort.

Beth Harling of Hingham said this week CACG will soon be sending a mailing to the legislators.

"We went down to Harrisburg (Pa.) in November to a meeting (for LANCE, a multi-state group) and we're keeping an eye on things here," Harling said.

Harling said she's been reading the latest report on the issue, which was done by the 20th Century Fund using professionals from New Jersey's Rutgers

This meeting will be an opportunity for citizens to receive answers to their questions, to have it put into the planning for the reconstruction and to begin individual preparations and travel plans for the reconstruction period.

Mass Lobstermen's expo

The Massachusetts Lobstermen's Association will hold its Annual Meeting and Exposition at Dunfey Hyannis Hotel, in Hyannis, from noon Thursday, Jan. 26, through noon Sunday, Jan. 29.

Seventy-seven organizations, representing a complete cross-section of the companies which provide all the products and services which are essential to the operation of commercial lobster fishing activities, have reserved booths to exhibit their products and services, for the weekend.

In addition to the exhibits, a full schedule of seminars, educational and training films, product demonstrations, and panel debates are planned.

A special program for women attendees has been developed and will include numerous hands-on activities, such as quilting and scrimshawing and tours of local attractions.

Saturday, Jan. 28, after a full day of activities, the 21st Anniversary Gala Reception and Banquet will begin at 6:30 p.m. and continue through midnight.

Special Awards will be presented to individuals who have served the commercial lobster fishing industry with distinction during the year of 1983.

Dick Flavin, who is the satirical commentator for WBZ-TV Channel 4, will be the principal speaker at the banquet.

Girl Scout cookie sale

It's time for Samoas, Do-Si-Dos and the newest cookie — Medallions — to appear in kitchen cupboards across the state.

It's time once again for Girl Scout cookies to soothe the palate of "Cooke Connoisseurs."

The Girl Scout Cookie Sale is a great American tradition. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Girl Scout Cookie Sale.

Debbie Haase, a Service Unit Cookie Manager for Cohasset, asks friends and neighbors to join in the celebration by purchasing Girl Scout cookies.

Mrs. Haase said the Cookie Sale not only provides funds for Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council programs, but it allows girls an opportunity to excell and be recognized for this achievement.

Selling cookies is a way in which girls learn about goal-setting, hard work and responsibility .

The sale is one of the Council's major events each year and is the single largest source of income for the Council's operating budget.

Money from the sale helps to maintain camps, and recruit and train leaders. It also assures the continuation of Council programs.

The goal this year is to sell 1,164,400 boxes throughout the Council.

The Girl Scouts in Cohasset will be taking orders from Jan. 20 through Feb. 5.

Dooley "drops off" budget

Chief Martin Dooley said this week that he was required only to "drop off" a proposed FY 1985 fire department budget at last week's selectmen's meeting. That is the reason, he explained, why he did not supply the town officials with backup information for his financial requests.

Because he was asked only to bring selectmen a copy of the department's budget for their perusal, he did not anticipate a full budget hearing that night. He was not listed on the agenda, he added, and only intended to drop the copies off and leave them for selectmen's review at a later date.

But selectmen did review the budget proposal during last week's meeting and at several intervals asked the chief to supply reasons for certain fiscal requests. Among the more curious budget items was a proposed total of $27,000 for next year's overtime account. Just a week ago town meeting voters approved an additional $45,000 be added to that account because actual expenditures exceeded the 1984 allotment and will probably rise to more than $70,000. Selectmen could not understand why such a miserly figure was anticipated next year when the account totaled a record amount this year.

Chief Dooley, who noted he will bring his department's proposed budget before selectmen a second time Wednesday night, would not comment as to whether he padded or decreased the totals. He did say he would bring factual data on which he has based his calculations, to the selectmen's session.

"I never thought there would be a full hearing on the budget that night," Dooley said. "I was told to drop off the budget at the meeting, and I thought that was all I was required to do." He noted he would be prepared Wednesday night to substantiate his budget projections.

Boys take 2 of 3, up record to 10-2

By Mike Berger

Cohasset suffered its second loss in 12 games, falling to Hanover 71-62 despite "playing their hearts out," said Coach Ed Minelli.

Hanover leads the South Shore League Large School Division and is rated eighth in Division II. Hanover won its last six games before Cohasset by an average of 30 points and has not lost a league game in three years.

Seven of the first starting nine players are seniors.

Cohasset is rated fourth in Division III high school basketballand it is unlikely the Skippers will face Hanover in the playoffs because of the different divisions.

Center James Creed led Cohasset's scoring with 19 points and guard Tony Bogarty added 16. Team captain David Barcomb chipped in with 12 points and David MacDonald, although only scoring six points, played well, said Minelli.

Cohasset took the early first quarter lead 15-12 but fell behind by eight points by halftime.

Hanover dominated the third quarter, upping the lead to 18 points but Cohasset never gave up. The Skippers stormed back in the fourth quarter, cutting the lead to nine points. "The kids never game up. They played their hearts out. Hanover shot 70 percent from the outside in the second half. That's incredible. In addition two of Hanover's starting five had their best games of the year. But I'm proud of my team," said Minelli.

Earlier in the week the Skippers enjoyed a two-game sweep, beating Rockland 78-71, and East Bridgewater 65-58.

It was the first victory in three years over Rockland and marked the first time since 1959 Rockland fell below the .500 mark in basketball.

Minelli credited Creed, Bogarty and Barcomb for outstanding performances.

Creed, a 6-5 center blocked 15 shots (nine in the first quarter) pulled down 19 rebounds and blocked a shot on a three-on-one breakaway with 40 seconds to go in the game.

Bogarty scored 18 points, had nine assists and six steals and grabbed ten rebounds.

Barcomb grabbed 11 rebounds, scored 11 points and according to Minelli "really took defensive charge when

Elementary class size options ire parents

A full graph of all the options is published elsewhere in this week's edition.

Many parents have experienced crowded classrooms this year, particularly Grade 3. Some parents noted the classroom was so crowded, students could not use the computer.

Parent remarks to the committee included educational fears of class combinations. One former elementary teacher and a parent said if Option 2 was used, money and a lot more planning time must be given to the teacher supervising the combined class.

Another parent who learned from a Grade 2-3 combined class said she had trouble with grade identification the entire year.

School committee member Diana Kornet said a combined class might lead to student stimulation and a chance for students of all abilities to excel under a different learning environment.

But high school student representative Jennifer Ralff said some students could feel slighted for being selected as the ones to enter the combined class.

All the parents attending the meeting agreed they must lobby other parents to petition the advisory committee for more money to hire more elementary teachers (i.e. Option 1).

School committee member Joe Nedrow said the committee "is on the same team" with the parents but realistically must plan for other options if town meeting voters reject the call for hiring more teachers.

Crowell noted Gov. Mike Dukakis had changed his campaign promise for more state aid, earmarked only for education.

Monday, Dukakis said there will be more state aid funds but the funds will be sent to the community. In Cohasset's case, Town Meeting voters will decide which town department which receive all or portions of the money.

Aid figures released by Gov. Dukakis's office for Fiscal Year 1984-85 show Cohasset will receive $1,024,042, a $69,595 increase over last year's aid figure. In addition, Cohasset will receive an MBTA reimbursement of $96,712.

Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said the committee will support all or portions of the school board's proposal if the need is substantiated and depending on how much extra money the town receives.

The committee is waiting for a definite clarification on the amount and how the extra aid must be used.

the game was close."

Also having his best game of the season was David MacDonald who scored 12 points.

Cohasset led 47 to 33 at the half and 66-50 after three quarters. Rockland battled back in the fourth quarter, outscoring Cohasset 21-12. Minelli said fatigue set in because the team was unable to practice because of the long holiday weekend.

Against East Bridgewater, Creed scored 25 points, pulled down 17 rebounds and blocked four shots as Cohasset shot to a 8-0 record in the South Shore League and 10-1 overall.

East Bridgewater was the closest competitor in the S.S. League Small School Division.

MacDonald followed up an excellent game against Rockland with an 11 point, nine assist performance for the Skippers. Eighth grader Brian Edwards had 14 points, hauled down eight rebounds and had five steals.

Barcomb chipped in with eight points and Bogarty stole the ball nine times, handed out eight assists and grabbed 11 rebounds. He scored four points.

Minelli said this was an important win because the team showed excellent depth with only a 12-point combination by Bogarty and Barcomb.

Cohasset shot to a 15-4 lead early in the game and kept the lead to between seven and nine points for the remainder of the game.

"Car starting thermometers" available from ALA

The ALA Auto & Travel Club has developed a "Car Starting Thermometer," a quick index to determine the likelihood of ones experiencing car-starting difficulties on cold, New England mornings.

This "Car Starting Thermometer" has been an extremely dependable gauge for the ALA's in-house predictions. When ever the temperature drops significantly, the degree of difficulty in starting a car increases geometrically. These same climactic conditions influence the number of ALA members who call the Club's Road Service Department.

If you would like to receive additional copies of our thermometer, please call 237-5200.

DeMichele's art at Quincy Co-op Bank

Cohasset artist Susan DeMichele has a one-person show hanging in the Quincy Co-operative Bank in Tedeschi Plaza.

The show which runs through the end of February represents DeMichele's work in oil doing landscapes and figures as opposed to her large abstracts with which people on the South Shore are most familiar. She works from life rather than from photographs when painting landscapes or figures. A painter, she believes, "cannot translate her feelings and impressions of the subject from a photograph." DeMichele relies on spontaneity, catching the light or the gesture of the moment.

Her work has been shown in numerous juried shows in Kansas City and on the South Shore. Her awards include a 1983 special award, South Shore Art Center's Summer Art Festival and an award in the Center's 1981 All New England Juried Art Show. She has taught classes at the South Shore Art Center, Hingham High School and the Hingham Adult Education.

DeMichele has studied at Boston University, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, Kansas City Art Institute and the State University of New York at Cortland. She has also studied with artists Domingo Barres and Mathew Monk.

Her work is included in private collections in Kansas City and New England.

Clement Micarelli recently painted a portrait of Dorothea Buckingham at the South Shore Art Center.

MONOPRINT WORKSHOP

Monoprint Workshop — an opportunity for artists to explore the excitement of direct printing — will be offered by the South Shore Art Center Saturday, Feb. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Instructor Louise Kalish will introduce participants to the use of a sheet of glass as a plate instead of a press and to the variety of techniques and materials used to produce unusual and fascinating works of art. The workshop will meet at the Center, 103 Ripley Road. Advanced registration is required.

She will work with the students in applying inks to the plates and in pulling a print and will bring to the workshop her extensive experience with monoprinting.

Kalish studied at the Massachusetts College of Art, Brandeis and the Museum of Fine Arts. She has had numerous exhibits in New England and her work is represented in corporate collections. She is a docent at the Rose Museum.

For further information on this workshop or any of the Center's winter courses, call the Center at 383-9548.

From the "old Mexico" town of Patzcuaro to Mexico city, from the seaside spas of Alcapulco to Cancun--little has to be said about the allure of Mexico. As if Mexico's tropical weather and cultural richness were not enough to draw you there, the financial aspects of such a trip fairly summon you southward. Consider that the late 1982 devaluation of the peso turned Mexico into a bargain-hunter's paradise. And now that lowered oil prices have deprived the country of its much anticipated and needed external revenue, the Mexican government is going to great lengths to ensure the excellent treatment of tourists. Rarely in the history of any country has the American tourist received so much for his dollar.

☐ Good luck to John Sturman as he gets ready to move into his new home on No. Main Street.

☐ As plans are underway to escape the winter weather, if you are heading to Florida (Disneyland to be exact), be sure to look for Sara Froio, who is a student-worker there. Sara is sure to be a fine chef upon completion of her duties. She is a student at Johnson and Wales, and loves it.

☐ Keep news coming, without it there's not much new "Around Town."

☐Realtor Claire Shields of the Cohasset office of Gallery 360, the Gallery of Homes exceeded the $3 million mark in residential properties under agreement in 1983.

A consistent million dollar broker during her career, Shields holds the designations GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute) and CRS (Certified Residential Specialist). She has completed several courses offered through the Gallery of Homes educational program, including Transactional Analysis, Control Selling and Successful Practices.

An active member of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, Shields is Chairman of the Make American Better Committee and serves on the Bylaws Committee. She has been on the Hospitality Committee and the RPAC (legislative action) Committee for the Board and is a two-time past president of the Women's Council of Realtors, Eastern Mass. Division and is serving her second term as treasurer of the State Chapter of Certified Residential Specialists in 1984.

In addition to her activities as a residential real estate broker, Shields also manages 100 Pond Street, a cluster zone — the first of its kind in the South Shore area — in Cohasset.

Shields is a resident of Scituate.

☐ A Dartmouth College freshman from Cohasset has been cited by an English professor for outstanding academic achievement during the past term.

John F. Maloney II was cited by his English professor for a course in literture and composition. Of Maloney's work he says, "Mr. Maloney is cited for outstanding essays all term and valuable contributions to class discussion."

Son of John and Rose Maloney of 16 Woodland Drive, he is a 1983 graduate of Cohasset High School, where he was a member of the National Honor Society, and captain of the varsity basketball and baseball teams.

☐Congratulations to Cathy and Jim McKinnell, 42 Fay Road, Scituate, who are the parents of a whopping 10 pound baby boy, David Jessiman, born Jan. 16 at The Jordan Hospital.

The maternal grandparents are Mrs. Dorothy Koski, 22 Buttonwood Lane, Minot, and Mr. Henry Koski of Helsinki, Finland.

The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. D. James McKinnell, Little Harbor Road, Cohasset.

☐ Julie Litchfield, daughter of Harold and Pat Litchfield, certainly had a surprise in store for her "sweet sixteen" birthday. Mom and Dad organized a huge surprise party for her. Many fibs prevailed in order to pull it off, but it was worth it! The party was held at the Sons of Italy Hall, with Disc Jockey Vinny B. in charge of the entertainment, and Carmen doing an outstanding job catering the event. Imagine having 140 people in on a surprise and not one of them giving it away. Happy birthday, Julie.

☐ Domenic Campedelli has had an extremely successful year as a member of the Boston College Hockey team. He has been responsible for more than a few wins with that unbelievable slap shot of his (better than it ever was)! and, while the team was in Minnesota he made the All-Star Team. With all of the super players to choose from, that certainly is an honor.

☐ Although the Super Bowl game itself wasn't so "super," it did give everyone a chance to break up this horrid winter month by getting together to watch the festivities. And, for the ladies, it marked the beginning of a "normal" dinner hour, without having to work around those Sunday night games. Hurray!

☐ It's so nice to have Jan Lahive around Cohasset again. Jan's former job took her out of town for the greater part of every week, but now that she is working locally, she's back! Her smiling face is a welcome sight, indeed.

☐ Anyone who needs a driveway shoveled should get in touch with Kevin Mulcahy— what a great worker he is! He makes the job seem like fun with his stories and good humor; almost makes the snow worthwhile. Not that we need any more, the students won't get out of school until July if it keeps up!

☐ It is a nice feeling to know that several of our school bus drivers have taken the CPR course . . . here's hoping that they never have to use it, but it certainly is a great idea.

☐ Have been asked about the "Person of the Year," being run by this paper. It is an easy way to get your candidate the recognition that you feel he or she deserves. Just send your candidate's name, along with the reasons that you feel they deserve the honor, to the Mariner and they do the rest.

Among the entrants that have spoken to me is a daughter that nominated her Dad . . . now that's an idea with an extra special touch! The requirements are minimal: just be sure that your nominee lives or works in Cohasset . . . after that just mail your nomination to Box 71 or drop it off at either the News Store or the Colonial Pharmacy.

The three people to top the ticket will be interviewed and their pictures will appear in the paper.

☐ Here's hoping that Lee Wilson will be able to return to the ice this week. Lee has been sidelined with an injury since the hockey game two weeks ago, but reports he is feeling better with every day that goes by.

☐ Brenda and Jim Litchfield must certainly enjoy being in the spotlight . . . they have been anticipating the event since last summer, when the BBC first contacted them. Brenda's soft-spoken English accent makes one want to listen to her by the hour. She is able to take a "refresher course" occasionally, as she and Jim try to get to England when they can.

☐ Speedy recovery to Denise Dolan, who underwent back surgery recently.

☐ The Girl Scouts are braving this freezing weather, selling their cookies. This is a fund-raiser that everyone benefits from, and the cookies are sooo good. Wonder how many thin mint cookies they sell?

☐ This is the Saturday that all would-be Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers have been waiting for . . . the Community Center Dance will be held at Hugo's Lighthouse, from 8:45 p.m. to 12:45 a.m. Last year everyone had a grand time. Don't be left in the wings. Contact the Community Center for more information.

☐ While I was waiting for new tires last week, several would-be sledders came in looking for old inner tubes, claiming that they are the fastest way to get down the hills since skiis! Another plus is that they are a cinch to lug back up again. Thought it was a great idea to pass along!

☐ Please keep your news coming. Have you been or are you going somewhere? Let me know . . .

PSO looks at teacher evaluations

By Bill Hayward

The PSO (Parents School Organization) met recently to discuss the process of teacher evaluations in the Cohasset school system.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell and High School Principal Richard Streeter spoke and gave a brief slide demonstration explaining the teacher evaluation forms now used.

Crowell said all teachers are in a "probationary period" during their first three years of teaching. When they sign a fourth year contract, they are tenured.

The evaluation process works on an annual timetable. At the beginning of the school year department heads get together with teachers (in elementary school the principal performs this function) and set two or three goals for the teacher to achieve.

The goals could range from better communication with students to creating a better classroom environment. Crowell said, "These are observable goals and objectives."

Between October and March teachers are visited and observed by their department heads or the principal. Non-tenured teachers are visited at least four times during this period, tenured teachers twice.

Conferences are held between teachers and supervisors during this time to determine the progress teachers are making towards their goals.

In April evaluations are completed.

The evaluation consists of an evaluation form and a written statement.

The forms include three categories: learning (how well the teacher is learning to teach), teaching (teaching techniques), and professionalism.

These categories are further divided into more specific components, which are rated on a scale from unsatisfactory to excellent by the evaluators.

Superisors use the written statements to express any subject which is not shown by the evaluation forms.

In the final analysis, a teacher may or may not be recommended, or recommended with certain improvements needed.

Essay contest for Grades 10—12

Students in Grades 10, 11, or Grade 12 are invited to write an essay of 500 words on the topic: "The Future of Democracy in Our Country."

Essays are due March 1, and will be judged on content and form by members of the Congressional Dames.

The winning essay writer will win a week in Washington, D.C., with attendance at the "Congressional Seminar."

William Kite, head of Cohasset's English department, has applications. Interested students are encouraged to stop by the English office or ask their English teacher for specific information on the contest.

Who should be 'Person of the Year'?

Now that 1983 is history, who in town should be Cohasset's man or woman of the year?

Who has done or accomplished the most for the public good without fanfare or without much public recognition?

There are no requirements except the person should either be a resident or own a business in Cohasset.

Please send nominations and a brief reason for selection to the Mariner through Box 71, Cohasset, or the drop spots at Hennessey's News or Colonial Pharmacy.

The top three winners will be interviewed and photographed.

The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon — any day between 9 and 5 — and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000

Deja Vu

The 1983 April Town Meeting saw the controversial School Committee-Advisory Committee debate on more money for the School Dept.

It could happen again as the first beat of the drum was sounded Monday night with the call for over $60,000 to fund more elementary school teachers.

This year, there's an added twist. If what is coming out of the State House is true, Cohasset will be receiving more state aid.

The question is: Which town department will get a share of the pie? That's a tough question and it's tough for an advisory board member to sit through and listen to every department head request.

Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria, noted for his thoroughness and fairness, said it best this week when he was asked about the School Dept's call for more money.

If the need is substantiated and if there is more money, the School Dept. proposal for more elementary school teachers will be given every consideration.

That is a good attitude to begin budget talks and we hope the School Committee and Advisory Board can sit down and discuss the budget in an organized, unemotional way, knowing the advisory board is looking at the total town picture.

For the school parents who attended Monday night's school committee meeting, we agree with you that the town is wasting too much money on legal fees and excluding the Water Dept. study on Lily Pond, outside consultant studies.

Another view

School Committee member John Langmaid has another opinion to those expresssed here last week regarding the school committee policy on committee research by the school superintendent.

He says the power of a school committee is in the majority of the government body, i.e. three member. Therefore only a majority and not a single committee member can direct a school superintendent to do research on a subject. The superintendent, said Langmaid, works for the committee and not a single member.

Langmaid said he made an amendment to the motion to clarify and distinquish between two different types of requests; those public information questions not needing research and longer, indepth questions needing administrative research.

In a related matter, School Committee Chairman Dick Conley said he voted for the authorized form because a person, claiming to be a Cohasset School Committee member, called up the state Dept. of Education to request a year-ending report but never left their name.

Committee member Martha Gjesteby, who filed a complaint with the state Attorney General's office, still feels the required form limits the power of the committee because she said the superintendent decides what subjects he will research.

Dull and boring awards

By Claire McDonough

"Did you know this was National Dull and Boring Week?" I asked the Dragon.

"I suspected as much when I noticed you celebrating it for seven days," he said.

"For someone who says he wants a nice peaceful weekend," I told him, "that was not a very smart remark.

"It's true, though. They named the 10 most dull and boring people in America. I wasn't on the list."

"That must have been a relief," he told me.

"Not really. At first it was, then I saw that Erma Bombeck made it. If syndicated is dull and boring, I could use a little. Actually, there are lots of things that are dull and boring that never receive the recognition they deserve. Like the food you can eat when you're on a diet."

"Right," he agreed. "And you know what's even more dull and boring? Talk show hosts who spend two hours interviewing the author of the latest diet book telling you how you can lose 25 pounds in three days eating nothing but starches and sweets."

"I think traffic reports from Skyway Control are boring," Patrick interjected. "What do they control, anyway?"

"Homework," Skipper said flatly. "That's what's really boring."

Breida sniffed. "You don't do enough of it to know. To me newspapers who poke into people's private lives and publish intimate details of their illnesses are dull and boring."

Larry nodded. "Actually, all newspapers are dull and boring. All that aren't the Mariner," he added hastily.

"I find fashion shows dull and boring," the Dragon mused. "Even if I could afford the clothes, my wife probably wouldn't let me date the model."

"I think junk mail is dull and boring," I said. "Particularly if it begins, 'You may already have won,' or tells you you won a discount on a siding job."

"Specials on meat at supermarkets," the Dragon contributed. "One more day and it would be Board of Health news."

"Going out of business sales four times a year."

"Refried beans."

"Elevator music."

"Cute news reports."

"Any weather reports."

"This conversation," I said. "It's getting very dull and boring."

Skipper nudged Breida. "If this conversation is dull and boring, wait till we see her article."

Breida grinned. "Yeah. Next year she may knock Erma Bombeck right off the charts."

Update on Straits Pond situation

The following is a copy of a letter sent to Selectmen.

Dear Board Members:

In response to a letter from the Town of Hull's Executive Secretary, Christopher McCabe, regarding the control of midges and algae in Straits Pond, I talked with Mr. Lewis Wells of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Mr. Wells suggested he train someone in the towns of Cohasset and Hull in the method of taking mud samples to determine if larvae are present. I suggested the Tree and Park Department in each town. That, of course, is your decision.

The mud samples should be taken two (2) or three weeks after the ice has disappeared. Probably the second or third week in March. This will give an idea of when the aerial spraying should be performed.

Also, Mr. Wells said that Helicopter Companies should be contacted by the towns to obtain bids for the spraying. This should be done now so that whatever company does the spraying knows well in advance so that there will be no delay when the time comes to do the job.

Spraying will probably be done in late March or early April. Perhaps the Executive Secretaries of Cohasset and Hull could do the above immediately, working together. The Boards of Selectmen could then decide, jointly, based on their Executive Secretaries' information.

Mr. Wells also informed me that the Reclamation Board has monies available to perform the aerial spraying of Straits Pond.

I will be pleased to assist you in any way. Our constituents must not have another spring and summer as the last few years and especially as last year.

Sincerely,
Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

What is the issue?

To the Editor:

I do not feel the school committee request form for information (researched variety) is an issue. Nor is it an issue that a majority of the school committee must vote before it directs its superintendent to engage in any heavy research assignment(s).

No one member of the school committee or any elected board should have the ability to direct its chief executive to calculate statistics with regard to public documents.

I am assuming here that it is not the intent of the majority of school committee members to deny any member the right to inspect or scrutinize any public document.

The underlying issue here appears to be that the Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Loop holes have been closed in the new drug trafficking law. The law ensures those who are caught "dealing drugs in Massachusetts will be successfully prosecuted and severely punished."

Court rulings citing inconsistencies in penalties have resulted in numerous charges being dropped or reduced against accused druge dealers.

A statewide crackdown on drug trafficking is an essential component of the effort to close any existing loopholes in the state's drug laws.

This legislation will allow the Commonwealth to carry out the intent of the drug law which is to see that those people who are trafficking in drugs in Massachusetts, not only get caught, but are successfully prosecuted, and severely punished.

The legislation tightens up the mandatory minimum language in the drug law by inserting in each section where it does not already appear, the words: "No sentence imposed under the provisions of a certain number of years.

The Courts ruled that the language dealing with mandatory minimum sentencing added to the penalty provisions of the statute in 1980 and 1982 were vague and did not clearly indicate that a mandatory term was required.

Lucy Forte is Executive Director of "Concerned Citizens for Drug Prevention, Inc." (CCDP) a statewide coalition of parent organizations. Mrs. Forte could hardly believe that after 10 years of plugging for this legislation fruition of their efforts were finally achieved, drug pushers will not go free.

Unless the risk-to-profit ratio is dealt with effectively, drug traffickers will continue to reach our youth. They will continue to provide the easy availability of marijuana and other drugs to children until the courts have just laws and strict enforcement.

The State Supreme Court struck down portions of the mandatory drug law for "Vagueness" on three cases within the last three years involving about 300 pounds of marijuana each. These criminals were released from prison after having served only part of their sentence.

Drug Abuse is the number one health problem among America's Youth!

The death rate for Americans between 15 and 24-years old is higher than ever due to drug abuse.

Statistics show that 60,000 children between 10 and 19 years old enter drug therapy each year for marijuana and alcohol related complications.

Our legislature, our courts and our Governor must take seriously the problem of drug trafficking, especially marijuana, which is coming in by the tons because the law is so lenient.

Most of the ills of society are drug related, yet the laws are weak and enforcement of these laws is even worse. Most major drug trafficers go free in our courts or serve very little time when they are jailed.

When drugs of all kinds are no longer extremely, easily available to children, the public will know that the laws are just, and working to protect the innocent.

Marijuana drug trafficking is the third biggest business in the U.S.A. today. It is a multi-billion dollar business exceeded only by General Motors and Exxon.

The goal of the "Concerned Citizens for Drug Prevention, inc." is Drug Free Youth. The organizaton can be reached by contacting Mrs. Lucy Forte or Kevin Tedeschi, Chairman of their board, P.O. Box 2078 Hanover.

The real issue...

majority of the school committee is satisfied with so little documentation.

In a second matter, I would like to comment on a letter from Rev. Edward Atkinson, which ran in last week's Mariner, and after Town Meeting's vote on the issue he discussed therein.

The only issue there ever was regarding the Bell vs. the Town case is that former elected officials mistakenly involved themselves in a neighborhood dispute.

I feel the present board of selectmen and other boards (advisory and elected) have since realized the error of that involvement.

As an example, I point to a report from the Drainage Study Committee (published in the Mariner recently) and its obvious efforts to separate neighborhood problems from town problems, and its recommendation of advising no action on the former.

As for Jesus. I am sure after reading the town zoning bylaws He would have sided with Lowrey Bell.

support."

A resident said, "That means you only get intensive treatment eight hours a day." He added it would make more sense to give the Cohasset EMTs more training, and get the upgraded service 24 hours a day.

Regarding upgraded medical treatment, Dr. Friedman said, "There is flexibility . . . It does not require that we go 'bingo' right away into the paramedics (the highest level of emergency medical training)."

Cost would be a factor in further training for Cohasset EMTs. It is also likely a private service would cost more for higher level EMTs. However, the committee did not yet have costs for private services available.

University. The report studies what has happened in Atlantic City since casinos were legalized.

"The report confirms that legalized gambling just expounds illegal gambling. The state can tally up some revenues it wouldn't otherwise expect. But the toll in people who over-extend themselves, in welfare and unemployment, can not be tallied.

"I don't think there is any way of telling how many failures in personal lives or business result from the encouragement by the state to gamble."

Harling went on to say that CACG itself sticks to the issue of casinos.

While all the debate about casino gambling has been going on, property values in Hull have been rising fairly rapidly. Proposals for condominiums and conversion of existing buildngs into condos are multiplying.

The real estate ads show that while there are many houses for sale in the $40,000 range, there are properties for sale in the $90,000s and beyond as well.

The promised increase in property values for the community was one of the big selling points in the earlier pro-casino debates.

One of the other major arguments is that casinos create jobs.

The CACG research has turned out more than one press release saying that the high-paying jobs created by casino development didn't go to locals in Atlantic City. The low-paying jobs are the available ones.

> 'I don't think there is any way of telling how many failures in personal lives or business result from the encouragement by the state to gamble.'
> Beth Harling of CACG

Carol Oteri of Hull, one of the more vocal opponents of gambling in her town, was given a national award from the Methodist Church last spring for her courage in taking on the issue.

The Hull casino plan, released several years ago, called for one gambling palace located on the former Hall estate, near where Hull meets Hingham and Cohasset at West Corner. When the plan was first announced, most of the opposition came from the two more affluent towns that would be affected by the casino-created traffic. Since then, opposition has spread to the plan put forth by MGM Grand, the casino and hotel operation that wanted to come to Hull.

As Maria Plante of Cohasset says, "It's a statewide issue."

Plante is also a member of CACG.

"We don't believe for a minute that casinos are a dead issue," she said. A group from CACG will present their case to officials at the Democratic state convention when it meets in June.

In the meantime, the group keeps up with the workings of the legislature.

Plante believes that proposals for off-track betting parlors are a back-door approach toward making way for casinos.

"We have a governor who has said he will veto any casino bill. I don't think this year will be a big push for the bill," Plante said.

"But that doesn't mean the issue will go away. We are fighting people with a great deal of money. They are able to be in the places they should be. We have to keep at it and remain visible."

Harling laughs as she talks about how the anti-casino groups began with "just a group of housewives."

Since that beginning, the group has picked up the support of some of the South Shore's leading citizens. Retired Supreme Judicial Court Justice Paul Reardon of Hingham is CACG chairman and realtor Jack Conway of Cohasset is active, too. Harling credits Conway with helping to win the anti-casino support of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Plante says one problem the fight against casinos has is growing acceptance of legalized gambling.

"The media focus on gambling is incredible," Plante said. "One night you'll turn on 'Love Boat' and see gambling. The next night 'Chronicle" will focus on off-track betting."

She tells of going into Hennessey's newstand not too long ago and getting in line behind a woman who bought $41 worth of Megabucks tickets.

Blizzard memoirs from 'General Patton'

By Lois Martin

There's something in us New Englanders that can't resist the pioneer flavor. Last week during the storm as flakes fought each other to be the first to land, I said to Terry, "Wouldn't it be fun if the lights went out for a little while?"

I expected from him that same spirit, that same temporary zeal for hardship that proves we are tough.

I forgot he was born in Virginia.

"Oh, no," he said, "Because you'd start doing General Patton again."

Now that's neither fair nor true. During the 1978 blizzard, Terry and I and his older brother, Andy, were home to ward off the starving, angry wolves that propagate during a blizzard. And it seems we have different memories about those days we were homebound.

His view: The first night, Monday, was fun. Andy and I took the dog out in the snow. We figured there'd be no school. Great.

My view: Sensing imminent danger for my young, I sought to dispel their fear by being as natural as possible. They frolicked in the snow while I took stock of goods.

His view: The next morning the power was off. She woke us up early to go shovel. No one was going anywhere. And it was still snowing. But we got dressed and started shoveling.

My view: At 4 a.m. I woke to a cold house and went down to start a fire in the old stove down cellar. No need to trouble the boys, I could handle that. I got a blaze going there and in the upstairs fireplace before alerting them to the reality: We were homebound. They had every right to know that, since all our instincts would be enlisted in the challenge for survival. I would remain calm.

His view: She started piling up stuff. There were candles in holders everywhere. And she would only let us play the battery radio every other hour for 10 minutes to save the battery. We live in a town near other people. We could see trucks go by. But, so far as she was concerned, we were 60 miles deep in the Maine woods and three months from a spring thaw.

My view: I assessed our stock. There were countless blankets and sleeping bags. Plenty of candles and holders that would insure no blaze erupted from them. There was one flashlight with a weak charge. The gas stove would insure the boys had plenty of hot nourishment. Our major problem: only one battery to be shared in the smoke alarm and the radio.

His view: She started cooking. She made three coffee cakes, two kinds of soup, a pot roast, bread and a roast chicken. There were only three of us there. So she kept trying to use the phone to get in touch with her friends to see if they were all right. We could have fed every snowplower in town, every resident on the street and all the people who had to leave homes where there were no stoves.

My view: The telephone service was erratic at best. Efforts to contact others at snowbound outposts had sporadic service. The wood supply, addressed during shoveling intervals, was kept at peak heights. The children were filled with hot food but I didn't allow them to doze since they needed to be aware of their danger.

His view: That night was the worst, Tuesday. By then she had decided that the snowbanks were filled with people she needed to save. She wouldn't lock any doors. She figured the cold and freezing people would stumble in all night and she could get rid of all that food that she was storing in a box outside the back door since the refrigerator wasn't working. That meant the milk was frozen. She wouldn't have let us have cold cereal anyway. She had to make a kettle of hot oatmeal.

My view: Still no power. I brought the children downstairs to sleep, Tuesday, assigning them spots on the floor in their sleeping bags, where I could check on them hourly when I arose to bank fires. One was on the living room floor near where I slept on the couch; the other was on the other side of the wall in the den. I made the decision to use the battery in the radio throughout the night rather than in the smoke alarm. So removed were we from the world, the troops needed contact of any kind to sustain their hopes for survival. Candles holding out. Kindling almost gone. Food supply steady and cooling on the sideboard.

His view: She wouldn't let us sleep in our beds. The pipes weren't going to freeze and explode like she kept promising because we had two fires going all the time, and she kept cooking - four burners and the oven. The house looked like "Little House on the Prairie." Her "provisions" were stacked all over the living room.

My view: With Wednesday's dawn came new hope. The roads were cleared. There were scattered reports that some vehicles had broken through the snow lines. A few more hours of shoveling, I told the little fellows, and we could break free. I encouraged them to peel off the layers of outerwear to have a shower for revitalization.

His view: Fortunately, she had to go to work or we'd still be there, lining up for rations and breaking bread for the birds. We shoveled one more time and got the car out. She left and kept calling from work until she learned the power had come back on. That was the Blizzard of '78. I learned than I would never like military life. But I'll never forget Gen. Patton.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

First to give up the ghost this month was our oldest son's washing machine -- then my brother's dryer. Now our fridge is making ominous sounds in the kitchen corner where it has reigned for many years. We've decided it must be catching. Anyway, when our refrigerator started chugging and gurgling, we began the search for our collection of service manuals which accompany the many pieces of machinery usually too complex to repair even with the manual. Tucked away among them was a booklet for the blender which I seldom use for anything but making creamed vegetable soups. Now I'm going to dust it off, for I'd forgotten you can make bread crumbs, grate cheese, shred carrots, chop cabbage and even make these

PERFECT POPOVERS

Into blender put
1 c. milk
2 eggs
1 c. sifted flour
1/4 tsp. salt

Cover and blend on high speed for 15 seconds. Pour into greased and heated muffin pans or custard cups and bake in a preheated 425 degree oven for 25 min. Makes 12.

James Beard, the noted cook and author, says whoever designed his dishwasher deserves to be thrown in and run through a three-cycle. He recalls his first such machine -- his bath tub!

"I simply piled in the dishes, drew the curtain and turned on the shower. I'm living in the hope that someone will design a dishwasher that will hold glasses without breaking them and good plates without chipping them," he writes. It's hard to imagine how our grandmothers got along without what we call our "moderr conveniences" and where they found the time to do needlework as suggested in Eleanor Magoon's grandmother's scrapbook. Directions are given for a blue satin holder for the whisk broom, cookbook covers made of brown canvas and moire ribbon, a holder for recipes made of white kid and silk puffing and a crocheted wastebasket trimmed with ribbon and a large bow. An artistic match receiver was adorned with yet more ribbons and made of China silk. A child's drawing slate with a frame painted in oil colors to harmonize with the room listed the contents as follows: "Petticoats, Corset Covers, Drawers, Undervests and Flannel Shirts." The author of the article, Mrs. S.T. Rover, then goes on to enter a plea for "a simpler method of living." Her menu for "small evening parties" includes 16 dishes, among them roast pigeons, boiled cod shoulder and head, salmi of small birds, little charlottes, sardine croquettes, baked potato snowballs and something we might try called

SNOWBALL PUDDING

Boil a quart of milk; thicken with 3T of cornstarch. Beat yolks of four eggs with 1/2 c. sugar and add to the milk. Pour into a pudding dish and set oven to bake for 10 min. Beat egg whites until stiff with 4T of sugar. Add 1/2 teacup of boiled rice; flavor with extract of lemon and drop in little balls over the pudding. Set in oven until a slight crust is formed. NOTE: These old recipes give no oven temp., baking time, or number of servings. I have used a 350 degree oven, for approx. 35 min., or until a slight crust is formed.

I guess it is still hard for some women to serve a simple meal of cold cuts and salad, to serve a birthday cake they haven't baked themselves, or a dessert of store-bought cookies. Grandmother's shopping list had to include: Carbolic Acid Disinfectant, Peterman's Rat Food, Milford Carpet Cleaner, Raven Stove Polish, a Pulverized Bath Brick, Wrigley's Scouring Soap and Pittsburg Concentrated Lye for the wash that was done in blackstone basement sinks with scrubbing boards. This recipe of Joyce Bruner's would have been easy for grandma to bake in her kitchen range which she had just brightened with her Raven Stove Polish.

Seahawk Youth Hockey report for the week

Peewees

The Peewee B's celebrated Sean Noonan's birthday by lighting the red lamp nine times in a 9-2 blasting of Hingham. Mark Resnick led the chargers with five and Sean Noonan contributed to his party with two goals and two assists of his own. In addition, Playmaker Patches (three assists) were earned by Matt Durango and Mike Dundon.

Rounding out the scoring were single markers by Dundon and Dennis Peacock and assists by Danny Kessinger and Chris Ventelleri.

The Peewee C's were.500 this weekend, beating Bridgewater-Taunton 3-2 and then dropping a game to Weymouth by a similar 3-2 margin.

In the Bridgewater game Beau Bousquette had two goals and David Flannigan one. David Smith was credited with an assist on one of Bousquette's goals. In the Weymouth game, Bousquette again lit the scoring lamp as did Peter Gates.

BANTAMS

The Bantam A team had no scheduled game this weekend.

The Bantam C team, however, played two games in Hobomock and chalked up two victories.

Thursday night, the Seahawks overpowered Pembroke, 3-1 with goals scored by Gilbert Rebello, John Murphy and Chris Gong. Assists were credited to Brendan Duffy, Paul Reidy (two), Kevin No on, Brian McGovern and Gilbert Rebello.

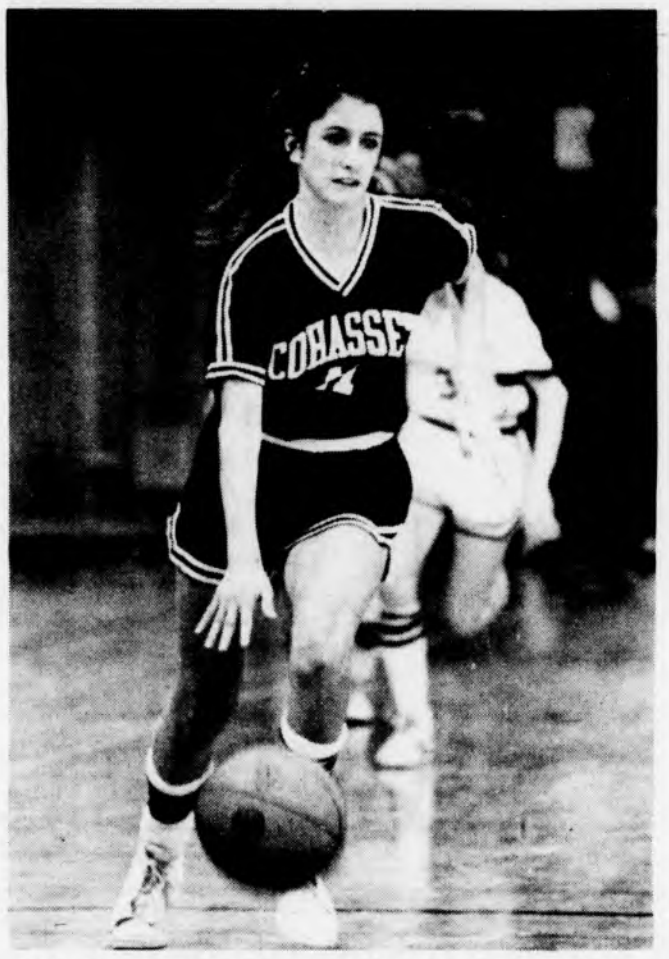
In a second match-up with Pembroke Saturday, the Seahawks scored a 1-0 shutout. Kevin Gibbons turned in a fine performance in net. He made some outstanding saves, especially in the last minutes of play.

Gilbert Rebello scored the only goal of the game on an assist from Paul Reidy.

SQUIRTS

The Squire "A" Seahawks, coached by Barry Resnick, battled to a 2-2 tie with Milton in weekend hockey action. The Hawks were led by Billy Tibbetts who scored an unassisted goal and added an assist on Tim Getto's goal.

The Squirt "C's" ran into a little stiffer opposition in dropping their contest to Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 7-0.



The Seahawk Peewee teams also had a successful weekend. The "A's" won two contests in beating Marshfield 9-2 and Hingham 3-2.

In Marshfield contest Mike Richardson led the chargers in turning in a hat trick. In the game against Hingham the "Hawks" were forced to dig a little deeper. Trailing 2-1 with less than two minutes to go, Billy Lincoln drilled a snap shot on a pass from Paul Norton and a minute later Pat Glennon got the game winner set up by some fine passes from Mike Richardson and Brian Pompeo. John Zimmer got an unassisted goal accounting for the other score.

Tom Hingston's Peewee "B's" also had a fine weekend. In what coach Hingston described as, "their finest effort of the year," the Hawks dropped a tough decision to Weymouth 1-0. Jamie Bridge was outstanding in net and deserved a better fate but the "Hawks" ran into some formidable opposition in the Weymouth goal tending.

Hingston's chargers came back with a vengeance on Sunday with a 15-1 romp over King Philip. Mike Dundon led the attack with five goals and Mark Resnick added three for his second hat trick in as many weeks. Sean Noonan contributed with a goal and five assists.

The scoring was rounded out with a pair of goals by Nickey Tibbetts and Danny Kessinger and single tallies by David Orpin and Chris Ventelleri.

On the run is Tracey Fitzpatrick, dribbling toward the Cohasset basket.

Last, but not least, the Peewee "C's" soundly defeated Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 7-2. Goal scorers were David Flannigan, Beau Bousquette, Peter Gates, David Petrello, Murphy, and Marks.

MITES

The Mite A team won again this weekend in Hobomock by shutting out Pembroke, 4-0. Shawn Russell, Joey Andrade (2), and Stephen Peacock all dented the nets assisted by Stephen Peacock and Mike Balista.

Frank Greenberg's Mite C team edged Braintree 3-2 this weekend. The offensive attack was led by Michael Foley (two) and Eric McLaughlin.

Credited with assists were Mike Foley, Billy Roberts (two), Eric McLaughlin (two), and Tim Leary.

Zack Rogers played an excellent game in net making some key saves at the end of the game when his team was playing short-handed.

Elementary class sizes bring out the crowds

By Theresa Sullivan

Some 120 to 130 parents crowded the School Committee meeting Monday night to show their dissatisfaction with possible elementary school student-teacher ratios of 30-1.

But school administrators and parents agreed they favored a maximum student-teacher ratio of 25-1.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell presented five options regarding 80-student class sizes in Grades 1 to 6, Jan. 23.

Monday night he presented two additional options. The question is whether to have three or four teachers per elementary grade.

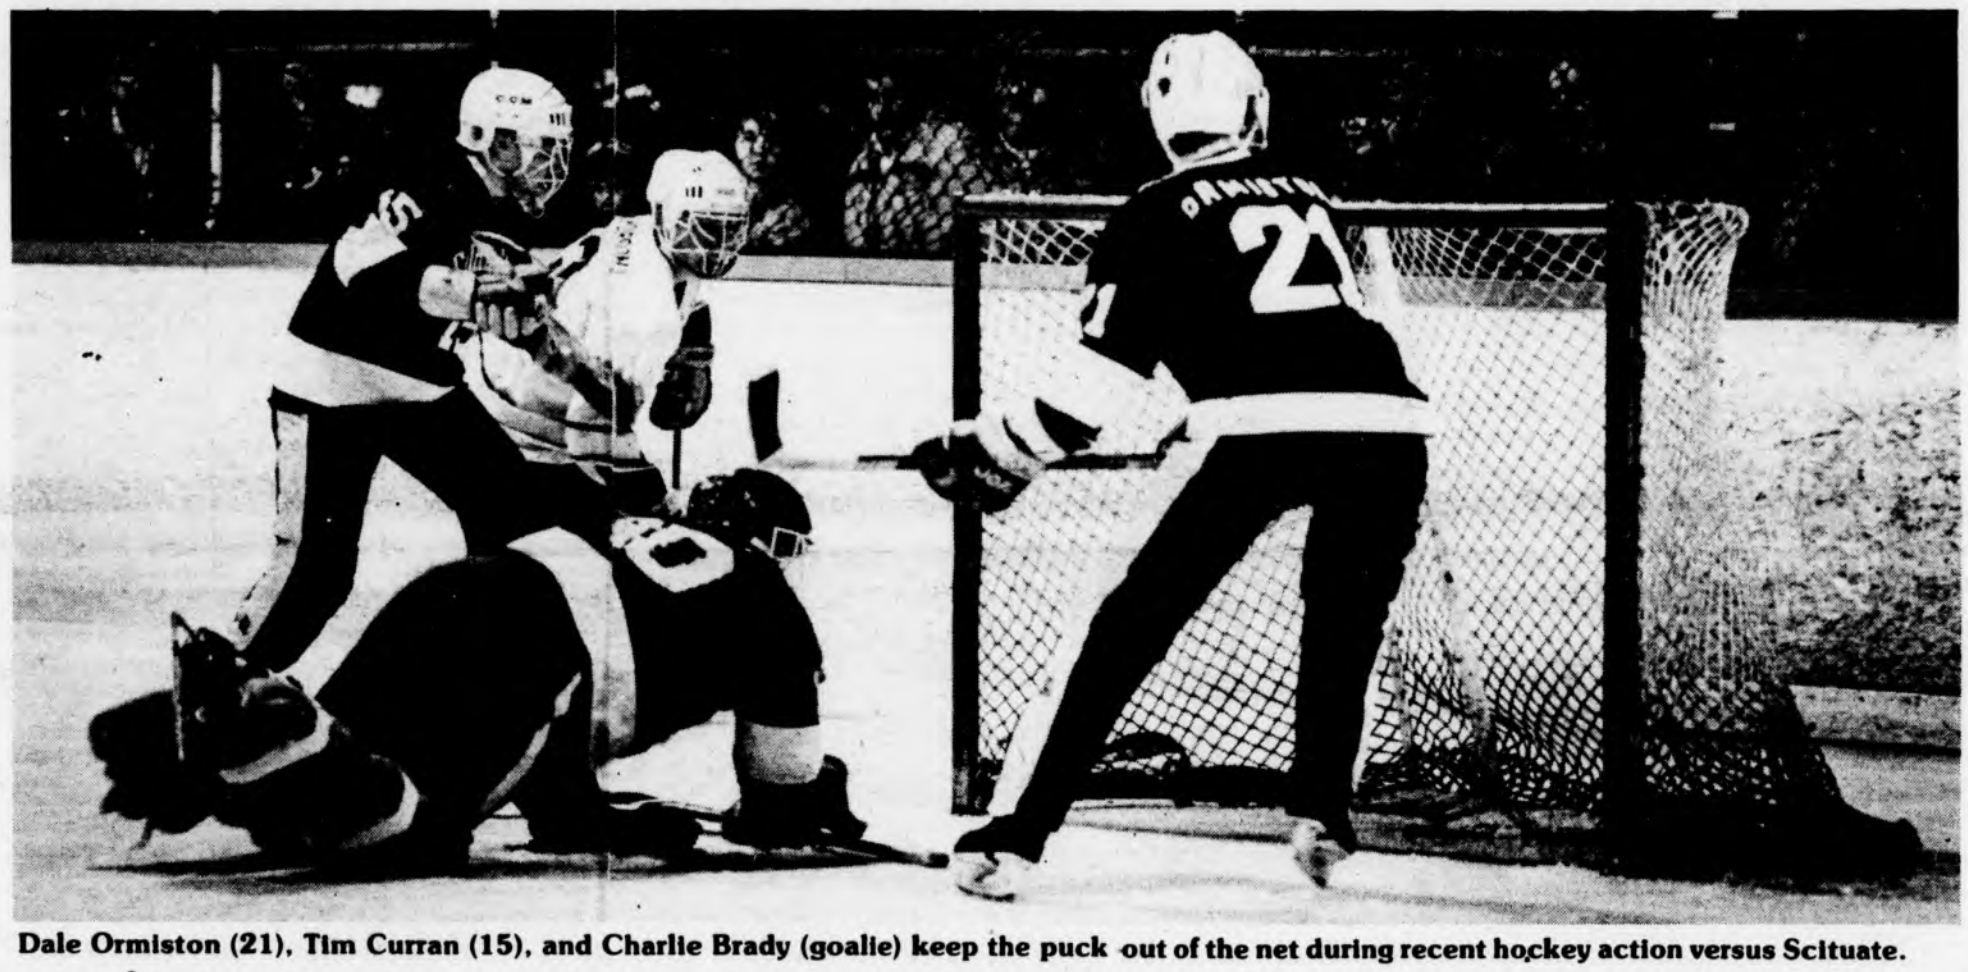
Under some of the options, Crowell suggested combining a section of Grade 2-3, Grade 4-5 and Grade 5-6. Most of the parents who spoke at the meeting questioned the educational quality of combined classes.

Ed Brennock, a parent, was educated in the Cohasset schools. He said putting a third grader in a class with second graders would be "traumatic." "It's great for the little kid, but not for the older kid who gets put back," he said.

Peer pressure can be damaging during the developmental years of Kindergarten to Grade 6, Brennock said. Teasing and ridicule could be damaging during the formative years, he said.

Committee member Diana Kornet said there is a wide range of abilities within one grade and putting a slower developer in a class with younger children could make that child feel like a leader.

Parents disagreed and one father said many parents may pull their children out of combined classes.



Thus far, one elementary school teacher from Deer Hill School has volunteered to teach a combination class. None has volunteered from Joseph Osgood School.

Parents also questioned whether the academic needs of students in a combined classroom were being met.

The parents of Grade 4 youngsters wrote a letter to the superintendent and committee asking them to establish a policy "on the ideal class size for each elementary grade based on educational criteria."

Committee member Jack Langmaid agreed. "Even if an ideal policy is not attainable, it should exist," he said. The audience responded in aggreement.

Fire Dept. budget: no layoffs, more overtime

By Jane Lane and Mike Berger

Fire Chief Martin Dooley had another turn at bat this week with his proposed budget. He was hoping selectmen wouldn't call the third strike.

But finally selectmen approved his final budget of $647,545 Tuesday night and now it's on to the Advisory Committee for review.

The budget is some $67,000 more than last year's budget of nearly $580,000.

Tuesday's budget review ended with $43,310 for overtime, $2500 for officer training and $58,000 for hydrant repair.

Chief Dooley came before the board Wednesday, Jan. 25 for a second time with the proposed Fiscal Year 1985 in hand.

Regarding that meeting, there were basically two areas within the budget which needed repeated revision. Selectmen noted it was not necessarily they opposed the requests but precise information is required to justify each budget item.

One area that has been a source of confusion for two weeks, is Chief Dooley's overtime account request. Two weeks ago he proposed the account be budgeted next year at $27,500. Selectmen couldn't believe such a low figure was included because of the record amount of overtime being expended this year. It is projected that overtime within the department this year will cost more than $70,000.

Based on the average amount of sick leave per shift, Chief Dooley said last week that account would more realistically amount to about $49,728. There is now a full compliment of personnel (6) per shift, he explained. Therefore, in the event one man per shift is on vacation, there is still an operational department, unless someone is out on sick leave.

Chief Dooley noted there were 3912 sick leave hours last year, which he used to project next year's budget figures.

When selectmen questioned the chief, it was explained that extra costs such as expenditures for three-blow fire calls , box calls, injury leaves or suspensions from duty, were not included within his budget estimations for overtime. The chief emphasized that although he knows how many three-blow calls there have been this past year, he can't project with any accuracy how many will occur next year.

Water Dept. rate hike proposed

Cohasset residents will be asked to review a Water Commission request which will increase a water customer's maximum annual bill by $21.

A new water bill proposal was unveiled by the commission recently which keeps the same quarterly rate of $27 but lowers the minimum cubic feet of water.

Now, on a quarterly basis, water customers are billed at $27 for 1500 cubic feet of water or a $1.80 per cubic foot of water.

The new proposal calls for $27 for 1200 cubic feet of water.

The proposal, said Water Supt. Ben Curley shouldn't impact the small water user but for those customers who use over 1200 cubic feet of water, they will be charged an additional $2 per cubic feet.

The new rate is part of the Water Commission's budget for Fiscal Year 1984-85 and will be enacted by April Town meeting voters.

The rate hike is an attempt to reduce the commission's budget deficits. Although the Water Dept. is supposed to be a self-sustaining department, the town must pick up any remaining deficits.

In a related matter, water commissioners want to remind consumers failing to pay their water bills may result in the shutting off of their service.

In a continuing effort to address delinquent accounts, the department will review all bills 30 days or more overdue. The law authorizes the department to shut off service to collect payment.

A $10 fee will be charged to have the service reinstated. The new billing format permits consumers accounts to be individually reviewed faster than the previous system, expediting the funds due the Water Dept.

Cohasset's week . . .

Selectmen's study

In an effort to begin the process of solving the internal strife within the fire department, selectman Frank England unveiled his proposed plan.

Three weeks ago town meeting refused toappropriate funds to hire a consultant to complete a management study of the fire department. Responsibility for ironing out the problems between the chief and his personnel must now fall to either the board of selectmen or a citizens committee.

England said he had proposed a six-point plan for selectmen to follow, with certain items to be completed by the board, and others to be performed by the chief.

Although all selectmen agreed they are eager to begin a thorough study of the department, it had best be accomplished after budget time. Currently selectmen will be meeting at least twice a week in effort to review and approve all proposed departmental budgets.

A management study of this proportion needs undivided and complete attention and would best be completed after budget reviews.

In the meantime, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza will be contacting other towns to review their fire department's rules and regulations. Selectmen requested that only towns which have updated their rules within the last two or three years be included in the review.

Among the other items suggested by selectman England to be included in the management study are: the development of an evaluation system for department heads; completion of updated rules and regulations; changes in contract; development of job descriptions for all positions; development of report forms; and review of the call firefighting force.

New mall proposed

Plans are preliminary but Donald Staszko of Cohasset has submitted tentative plans to Building Inspector Bob Dennis for a shopping plaza or mini-mall at the site of the former Cohasset Motors on Rte 3A.

The plans call for a supermarket, drug store, bank and restaurant. Dennis said the plans could include a new mall site on the property or leasing out the existing building.

The Cohasset Motors lot is on an eight-acre site. Approval will also be needed by the Planning Board and Conservation Commission because the area is environmentally sensitive and a parking lot could cause drainage issues.

Call firefighters payment

Two weeks ago during a review of the proposed fire department budget, selectman John DeBassio requested the chief review the option of paying call firefighters by the hour. Currently they are paid per call.

According to Chief Martin Dooley's calculations, the call firefighters earned $12.05 per call, and the cutoff date for this year is June 1. He noted that all indications are that the men like the present method of payment and don't want any changes.

There is $10,000 budgeted in that account this year, the chief noted, and $9500 was spent the previous year. His calculations are based on that $10,000 budget divided by the number of calls.

Selectman Rocky Laugelle suggested no changes be made to the payment schedule.

Fire hydrant repairs

During last week's selectmen's meeting, Fire Capt. Mark Trask noted there are fire hydrants in town which are not functional. Since the town pays rent for the hydrants, he wanted to know exactly how many could not supply water in a fire emergency.

Selectmen had just finished reviewing a $50,800 budget request for hydrants within the fire department budget when this question was posed. That budget request represents an $8000 increase from this year, because of the increase in rental fees charged to the town.

Cohasset will be charged $200 per hydrant by the Water Department next year. Twenty-four hydrants rented from the town of Hingham Water Department will cost $9726.

According to Chief Martin Dooley, whose department made a check of all hydrants during the most recent snowstorm, there are two hydrants which are non-functional. One is located on Jerusalem Road, and the other is at the town parking lot.

Chief Dooley was instructed to give the selectmen a list of all non-operational hydrants. Regardless of whether the town is required to pay for all hydrants, it is imperative for the town's safety they all be functional, selectman Rocky Laugelle emphasized.

Chamber logo contest

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced a contest, "Draw Our Logo." Any resident of Cohasset or member of a Cohasset organization is eligible with the grand prize of $100 in merchandise being the offered award.

The newly formed organization has set no design limitation. All finished drawings will become the sole exclusive property of the Chamber of Commerce and must be submitted to P.O. Box 336 before Feb. 29, 1984.

The winner will be announced at the regular monthly meeting March 14.

Studds announces re-election try

Congressman Gerry E. Studds this week announced his candidacy for reelection to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Studds, who has represented Southeastern Massachusetts since 1973, made his announcement in a newsletter sent to 20,000 of his supporters — many of whom have campaigned actively for him since he first ran for the Congress.

Studds, 46, said he was seeking a seventh term in office "because I believe the issues of 1984 are so critical and because I believe that with my experience and seniority I will be in a position to make a difference." Studds is currently the fifth ranking Democrat on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the fourth ranking Democrat on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"I do not recall any election year more important than the one about to begin," he said. "Voters this year will be asked to make choices which will reflect their most fundamental feelings about America and about its prospects for the future.

"There are those now high in government who have despaired of our ability to guarantee decent treatment to all Americans, including the old, the handicapped and the poor; those who believe that continuation of the nuclear arms race is inevitable; that substantially increased pollution of the environment is acceptable; and that limitations on our civil liberties are tolerable," Studds said.

"I do not believe Americans are cynical or selfish, or that they wish a government whose actions are prompted by hopelessness or fear Our country has vital interests to protect, but we also have principles to fulfill, and responsibilities which extend both to all our citizens and to those of other lands."

The Studds' newsletter, known as GESture, has been published regularly by the Studds for Congress Committee since 1970, the year Studds first sought election to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Although he was narrowly defeated in that, his first bid for elective office, that year's race proved to be the second closest in the nation. Studds was elected to the Congress in 1972, thus becoming the first Democrat to represent Southeastern Massachusetts in the House of Representatives since 1914, and only the second in history. Once again, the race was the second closest in the nation.

He won reelection in 1974 with 75 percent of the vote; in 1976 with 85 percent of the primary vote (he was unopposed in both the 1976 and 1978 general elections); and in 1980 by the largest plurality ever recorded in his Congressional district.

In 1982 Studds won a sixth term in office by capturing 68 percent of the vote — and carrying every town and precinct in the newly constituted 10th Congressional District.

A resident of Cohasset, Studds received his B.A. in American Studies and his M.A.T. in History from Yale University in 1959 and 1961, respectively. Prior to his election to the Congress, he served in the State Department, on the Kennedy White House staff, as a teacher of history, government and political science.

Barros set to oppose Studds

By Judy Gilman

Ricardo Barros is a second-generation Cape Verdean American fromm New Bedford who would like to be the next Congressman to represent the 10th District. And he's working toward that end as though he's never heard those familiar truisms: you have to lose before you win; you have to be older; you have to be more experienced; you have to be the choice of the party.

Barros is a contradiction to all those phrases: a 25-year-old law student at Boston College who will graduate in May who has never run for office before but has a seemingly unwiltable enthusiasm for going out and meeting people and talking about the issues of the day. And he fully expects a primary fight in order to become the GOP choice for the 10th District come November.

Perhaps most surprising to the person who meets him for the first time is to find that the former Marine sergeant, a high school drop-out who has 10 brothers and five sisters, is a lifelong Republican--a good starting point to ask: how do you feel about the charges that the Reagan administration is the most discriminatory since that of Herbert Hoover?

"My father always taught me to look to myself and depend on my own talents and skills," he answered last week in an interview in the Mariner office. "You have to try 100 percent. I believe in a combination of rugged individualism mixed with compassion. I always have a penchant for the underdog, which the Republican party is in Massachusetts. If I'd grown up in the Midwest, maybe I'd be a Democrat. But I think Republicans have a better vision. The Democrats have an arrogance of power. And money can't solve everything. It can't solve discrimination. Throwing money at minority deprivations doesn't solve the problem. The best social program is a job. And with a recovering economy, there is the opportunity to help yourself."

Saying he feels he has "something to offer" to the district, Barros expresses some opinions very like the incumbent Congressman, Gerry Studds, who announced this week he will seek re-election. Barros is opposed to more drilling on Georges Bank and feels not enough is being done to combat the problem of acid rain.

But there the road diverges. Ask him about the Marines and Lebanon and he cites a commitment to the Lebanese government. "We don't want to withdraw willy-nilly. I wouldn't look askance at redeploying our forces and consolidating the multinational group under one commander."

Barros has a strong feeling for those Marines in Beirut. The battalion that suffered the 258 casualties was the same he served in during his time as a leatherneck. "I'm not prepared to let them have died for nothing," he says, adding that he feels some progress is being made in negotiating over that war-torn country.

But he would "take a scalpel" to the defense budget and make a firmer commitment to economizing and keeping an accurate inventory. On the nuclear freeze: "I'd support it with on-site inspections on both sides."

On Central America, Barros thinks the recommendations of the Kissinger Commission should be accepted and implemented. "You'e got to accelerate economic growth with military assistance. But no regime should be given carte blanche."

He feels strongly that a Congressman should fulfill several roles: as a representative, voicing his own views; as a delegate, bringing the people's view to Congress, and as an educator. On an issue like abortion, "I'd poll the district and then take their answer back to Congress."

Though he won a straw poll of the party in Hyannis several months ago, several other, more experienced candidates have announced their intentions of seeking the GOP party blessing. But Barros thinks, "The party needs an aggressive candidate who's not afraid to say, 'Yes, I'm a Reublican.' "

He does not, however, see himself forever as a Congressman. "I want to be a politician. I've wanted to run for Congress for 10 years. There's the argument you get stale if you stay in Washington. There's also the argument that you learn the ropes and can be a more effective representative to your district after several terms."

In the meantime, he's finishing his last term at law school, specializing in tax law, and campaigning every day as well. ("You just have to manage your time. Don't waste it in front of the TV. It's amazing how much you can get done.") After being discharged from the Marines, Barros went on the major in political science and minor in East Asian studies and economics at UMass-Boston, graduating in three years with a magna cum laude degree. Debating has always been a favorite thing, and he and his partner came in third last year in the New England Moot Law competition. While at UMass-Boston, he organized that campus's first Republican Club.

What about that shadow of being too young? "I'll be 26 in June," he says, "and right now in Congress there are 30 members under 30." He's working hard to be the 31st.

Hunneman office opened

Hunneman & Co., Inc. Better Homes & Gardens recently opened their 19th real estate office in Cohasset. The location is 17 South Main St., in the heart of the Village.

Liz Murdy, manager of the Hingham office, was named manager of the new Cohasset office as well. Barbara Froio was appointed to be assistant manager in Cohasset, having previously been the manager of another real estate firm there.

The new office is staffed with five full-time and experienced associates: Barbara Froio, GRI, Alna Ekberg, Barbar Weisenflue GRI, Rosemary O'Connell and Barbar Hollander. All are involved in community activities and reside in Cohasset or Scituate.

Because the Hingham office has enjoyed another successful year in residential real estate, Hunneman looked to its neighbor Cohasset as a natural market to develop.

The new Cohasset associates were chosen because they exemplify these principles of cooperation and professionalism.

Fire budget . . .

Selectmen explained that budget proposals are estimations and are not carved in stone. Estimations about such accounts as overtime are vague at best, but they must be figured using sound judgement and past budgets as a starting point.

Selectmen noted that with the addition of expenditures for box calls, disciplinary actions and injury leave, this overtime account may more accurately balloon to about $90,000.

Not usually in the position of padding a budget, selectmen said an annual budget should, as accurately as possible, reflect true costs within a budget.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said he would review the budget again with the chief before another revised amount is brought before the board.

Another account which needed further revision was the officer's training expenses. Although selectmen said they were not necessarily opposed to the $2500 proposed budget amount, they needed further explanation for the $500 increase.

Selectman McArthur said she wanted a curriculum devised so they would know exactly what courses are offered firefighters throughout the year. "Document exactly what you want and what is needed next year," she explained.

The budget discussion concluded after about two hours of debate. Chief Dooley was requested to meet again with Lanza to make additional revisions to the two accounts. Selectmen will review it again after those changes are completed.

Sewer problems are 'all over town'

By Bill Hayward

The Waste Water Advisory Committee, the Sewer Commission and Ward Engineering met recently to discuss the progress of Ward's study.

Charles Dauchy of Ward Engineering told the group sewerage problems are about evenly distributed throughout the town. Dauchy said, "We are finding problems essentially all over the town."

The distribution and not the frequency of sewerage problems is widespread, the frequency is not. Less than 20 percent of those people who returned Ward's questionnaires reported problems.

A previous sewerage report targeted certain sections of Cohasset as having worse problems than others. This report labeled the various sections of town as "phases."

The state, in its bid to have Cohasset build a 13 million dollar treatment plant, assumed that the "phase 1" area of town was the worst trouble spot. The "phase 1" area includes Beechwood St., South Main St. and Rt. 3-A and the Bear Hill area.

Jeff Bates, a lawyer who participated in the debate between Cohasset and the State, described the nature of the agreement that was reached.

Bates said, "I think it is safest to call it an agreement to disagree."

The terms of the agreement were Ward Engineering would be given six months to complete their study. However, Bates said the State's primary focus is on the "phase 1" area. He added, "The only other option that interested the state was a connection to Hull (treatment plant)."

The Ward Engineering study indicates dividing the town into "phases" is pointless, since sewer problems are equally distributed throughout town.

To find the best solution to the sewerage problems, Cohasset may again run afoul of the state. As Jeff Bates said, "The litigation is not over; it is on hold."

It is possible that if the town finds a viable solution which is not acceptable to the State, then the town could appeal to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

If the EPA agreed with the town, it is possible they could overrule the state.

Ambulance Committee nears conclusion

By Bill Hayward

With their report to selectmen due Feb. 15, ambulance study committee members will be working overtime for the next two weeks.

Committee chairman Roy Fitzimmons said the committee will meet two or three times a week until the report is completed.

The committee, which has been meeting weekly since last October 15, has compiled a large amount of information that now must be edited into report form.

At Tuesday night's meeting, Fitzimmons gave each committee member a draft describing six of the options the committee has studied. Committee members will write their comments and opinions about each option.

The options include the establishment of a separate town ambulance dept.

Hiring a private ambulance service or leaving the current service as it is are also on the list.

Regionalized ambulance service, involving a network of nearby towns and hospitals, has also been studied.

Regarding regionalized service, Fitzimmons said, "It is something we should pursue regardless of our other recommendations."

Enhancing the current Fire dept. service is another option. This could include more emergency medical training for personnel and the installation of 911 emergency telephone service.

If the town decides to keep the Fire dept. service, Fitzimmons may recommend that ambulance fees be raised.

Currently the town charges 75 dollars for a trip to South Shore Hospital, and charges nothing for transport within Cohasset. There is no charge for oxygen.

Fitzimmons is proposing the fee be raised to 120 dollars for a trip to South Shore Hospital, with a $20 dollar fee for oxygen. This increase would bring the town service closer in price to private services.

Elementary class sizes . . .

When introducing his two new options, Crowell said they are based on the principle that it's more important that class sizes be small in the early elementary years than in the later years (given that the School Dept. doesn't have the money for small classes in all grades).

With Option 6, the student-teacher ratio in Grade 1 would be 21-1. The student-teacher ratio in Grade 2 would be 22-1 and in Grade 3, 21-1.

However, in Grade 4 the student-teacher ratio would be 27-1; in Grade 5 it would be 26-1; and in Grade 6 it would be 26-1.

With Option 6, there would be 21.5 teachers for Kindergarten to Grade 6. The budget proposal submitted by Crowell allowed for 21.5 teachers. Currently, there are 24.5 teachers at that level.

Option 7 proposes adding one teacher to the FY 1985 budget resulting in 22.5 elementary level teachers. The committee would have to request an additional $20,000 to fund this position at Town Meeting.

Under Option 7, as in all the options, the student-teacher ratio for Kindergarten would be 21-1.

Under Option 7, the student-teacher ratio for Grade 1 would be 21-1; Grade 2 would be 22-1; Grade 3 and Grade 4 would each be 21-1. Grades 5 and 6 would each have a student-teacher ratio of 26-1.

Committee members said there are other demands on the budget which are also important such as library books, text books and computers.

Crowell said the Advisory Board told the School Dept. to submit a $3,939,238 budget. Crowell's proposed budget for FY 1985 is $3,864,835. The margain allows for three contracts, including teacher contracts which are being negotiated, he said.

He said the committee would have to petition Town Meeting for money to pay the salaries of more than 21.5 teachers for the elementary grades..

Committee member Jack Langmaid stressed that even if the board was successful in obtaining more money through Town Meeting vote for the schools, the committee could not promise the money would be spent for an additional teacher.

Crowell said the committee has to make cuts somewhere. The percentage of the tax payers' dollar going toward the School Department has declined steadily in the last three years, he said.

Three years ago, 58.3 percent of the tax dollar was spent on the School Dept. and two years ago, 53.8 percent was spent on the schools, Crowell said. In the FY '84 budget, 48 percent of the tax dollar went to the School Dept.

Crowell said the board was looking at cuts in many areas and the committee is considering eliminating one foreign language teacher at the junior-senior high school.

"I'm getting really tired of high school parents getting pitted against elementary parents. I think it's absolutely shameful that a town like Cohasset is talking about getting rid of a foreign language teacher," parent Linda Henderson said.

"We're not a poor town," she said. "It seems to me that the answer is more money."

Crowell agreed and added the reduced foreign language position is "unpalpable to the committee."

He also said the schools can't rely on state aid to solve or help with financial constraints.

Gov. Michael Dukakis's proposed state aid to Cohasset for Fiscal Year 1984-85 is $1,024,042, a $69,595 increase over last year.

Crowell said of this figure, $533,818 is listed under educational aid. This is some $67,000 less than FY '84's amount, he said. The more affluent communities are getting less state aid in education to allow for more aid to poorer communities, he said.

This $533,818 is not earmarked marked for education. Therefore, all the state aid will go into the general fund and the School Dept. will request a portion of it.

Because of existing committments made by the town some of the anticipated state aid is already earmarked. Crowell estimated some $165,000 will be left in the general fund after allowing for the programs currently committed.

Cohasset will also receive a MBTA reimbursement of $93,216.

Monday, Feb. 6, the committee will hear budget presentations by the junior-senior high school administration, the art, health education, home economics, industrial arts and music departments.

Monday, Feb. 13, the committee will hear budget presentations by the athletic, guidance, special services and student activities areas.

Monday, Feb. 27, the total budget will be summarized and reviewed.

Vo-Tech assessment: $25,142

The South Shore Vocational School Committee unanimously approved a $2,618,447 budget for Fiscal Year 1985. The proposed figure represents close to a 10 percent increase over this year.

The vote followed a hearing with town directors, selectmen and financial advisors from the eight member towns. The budget needs approval of at least six of the eight member towns.

The biggest increase within the proposed budget was under salaries and wages, where the figure rose from $1,627,734 in fiscal 1984 to $1,918,277 proposed in FY '85.

Superintendent/Director Dr. Cliff Easton said there are five new teachers included who will teach in five of the seven new occupational programs the school initiated during 1983.

When those programs were initiated, one teacher was enough for the number of students involved, he said. Because more students are added to the program each year with a new freshman class, the student teacher ratio keeps increasing, he said.

"We need two teachers in each of those programs; we're asking for five new teachers, but we should be asking for seven," Easton said. As it currently exists, "People are cheated out of shop time," he said.

Seventy-three percent of the total budget goes toward salaries and wages and 13 percent is spent for general expenses. These include Blue Cross/Blue Shield insurance for $61,000, workmen's compensation, county retirement, telephones and legal fees and an audit to list some of the more costly items.

South Shore Vo-Tech operates an extension of its campus in Abington. The Abington lease for $183,000 was also listed under general expenses. General expenses appropriated for FY '84 totaled $314,950 and rose to $338,420 in FY '85.

When asked why utility costs declined from $125,000 in 1984 to $104,000 budgeted in FY '85, Easton attributed it to conservation measures. The school used grant money to buy a computer which regulates the heat. The acquisition of a new boiler also has helped cut down expenses, Easton said.

Bruce Young, selectmen chairman in Hanson, asked that whatever money Vo-Tech is given in state aid be used to reduce the local assessments. Easton and the Vo-Tech school committee agreed not to make any promises about where that money will go until they find out what if any restrictions the state places on it.

However, the committee is hesitant to count on this money because last year it overbudgeted when it included in its budget funds the state Dept. of Education predicted the school would receive.

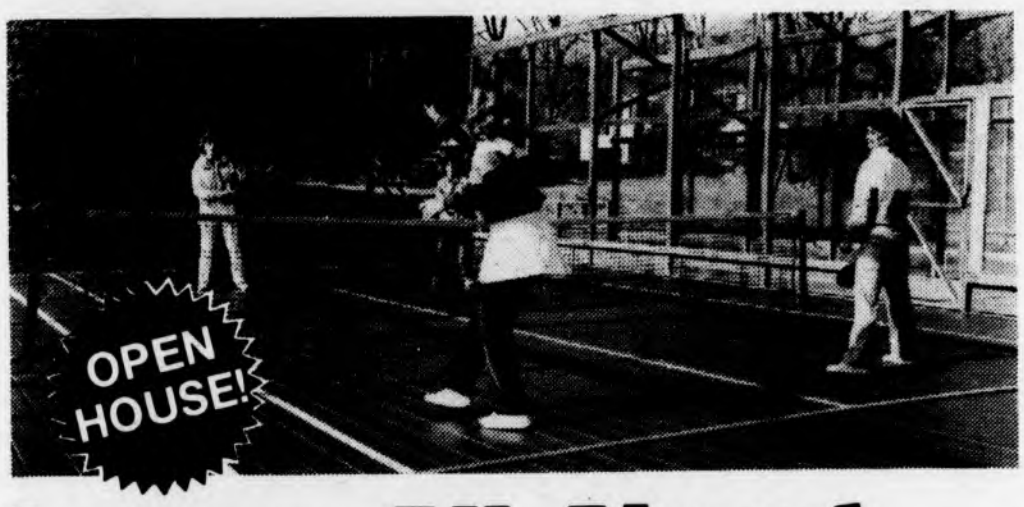
Easton said the state aid proposal announced by Gov. Michael Dukakis last week would give the school an additonal $200,000. Vo-Tech is eligible under the proposal because its per pupil cost is less than 85 percent of the state average.

Committee members said they'd like to spend some of the state aid to purchase equipment for the shops. "We have got some machinery that has almost got to the point of being dangerous," said Rockland representative John Doyle.

"I'm confident that your assessment will be reduced if we get the state aid," Easton said.

The proposed assessments to member towns are based on the number of students from each given town enrolled at the school. Also, Hanson and Whitman pay a surcharge of $400 per pupil in addition to the standard charge. The surcharge Hanson and Whitman pay reduced the assessment of each of the remaining six towns.

The assessment for FY '85 are: Abington, $226,573; Cohasset, $25,142; Hanover, $153,899; Hanson, $156,608; Norwell, $95,156; Rockland, $315,900; Scituate, $114,849; and Whitman, $262,933.



As of Oct. 1, 1983, there were 459 students enrolled at Vo-Tech.

☐ MAJ Dennis F. Buckley, a Cohasset resident, received the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service as officer-in-charge of logistics and administrative support for the Army Logistic System Program review presented to the Vice Chief of Staff of the Army. MAJ Buckley is a native of Cohasset and currently is assigned to the Logistics Center at Ft. Lee, VA as the Organizational Effectiveness Staff Officer.

MAJ Buckley also has received the distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, air medal and master Army aviation badge. Recently he was selected for promotion to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He is a graduate of William Carey College in Hattiesburg, MS and has a M.S. degree in counseling from American Technological University.

He is married to the former Susan Reidy of East Weymouth and has two daughters, Stacie and Jodie.

☐ Stephen F. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Brown of 53 Aaron River Road, Cohasset, has been named to the Dean's List at Babson College.

☐ Fire Chief Martin Dooley and his wife, Joyce, had a big surprise in store for them recently. In honor of their 25th wedding anniversary, a group of friends held an impromptu surprise party. The attire for the evening was very informal, as Chief Dooley was recovering from a week-long bout with the flu, but the entertainment was spectacular! Jim Drysdale, a bagpipe player from Edinboro, Scotland, was there to supply the music. Bagpipe playing and music is a real favorite with the Dooleys. The theme of the party was "health and happiness for many years."

☐ Anyone attending recent games has seen Rosee Duffy sporting a new Cohasset sweater. This year the Booster's Club is selling white sweaters with Cohasset in blue letters on the front. If you are interested, give Rosee a call at 383-0292 for details.

☐ Attention to all graduates of the class of 1959, watch your mailboxes. There are plans underway to form a 25th class reunion, which will be held sometime this summer. Keep your ear out for the telephone to ring, asking for telephone numbers or addresses of fellow classmates. The committee will be calling you.

☐ Now is the time of applications, watching, and waiting for the Senior Class. Among the graduates-to-be, three won't have to wait any longer! Kathy Corbett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Corbett of South Main Street, and Jim Rooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rooney of Lantern Lane, have both been offered and have accepted early decision at Dartmouth College. They will begin this fall in the class of 1988.

☐ "It's a boy" was the cry on Mill Lane Jan. 17. Congratulations to Andrew and Diane (O'Grandy) on the birth of their son.

Chief Martin Dooley (right) came down from his sick bed to hear the Scottish bagpipes.

☐The Thayer Academy Honor Roll for the first semester was announced by Headmaster Peter Benelli. Included on the honor roll are Cohasset students: With Honors, junior Gary Carlson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carlson and freshman Timothy Chamberlain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chamberlain.

☐Joseph F. Walsh of Cohasset, a teacher at Boston Latin School, has been chosen to attend Boston University's new Science Seminar Program for outstanding high school science teachers from the Greater Boston area.

Based on their academic background and experiences in teaching science, 60 high school science teachers have been selected to work with scientists at the University. These University scientists have both national and international reputations in their respective fields.

The seminars include six, one-day classes in Biology, Chemistry or Physics. The seminar discussions will be packaged so the teachers can share and use the materials with the faculty and students in their school systems.

☐ Just ask him . . . if you want to know the size, shape, weight, filling or cooking time, Brendan Mulcahy can tell you! He is working for the Donut Tree in Pembroke as part of his schooling, and has certainly learned a lot about the art of making donuts. One advantage that comes to mind would be eating the mistakes, but Brendan says there aren't any!

☐ Congratulations go to Diane Mullen also. She won her bid at Harvard University and was offered early decision there.

☐ Had a nice chat with Bill Enos last week, during the snow storms. Bill was remembering this time last year . . . he and his wife were out in balmy Honolulu, Hawaii, "the most beautiful place they have ever been to." Sure is a big contrast to the weather that they are experiencing this year, where standing over the heater is the only warm breeze that one can get!

☐ Mrs. Henry (Bunny) Kennedy held a luncheon in her home on James Lane last week. The luncheon was held Jan. 27, and the guest of honor was Julia Ellsworth, who was celebrating her 94th birthday. The luncheon was a grand success, and the guest of honor was extremely pleased. "Happy Birthday to You!"

☐ Herbert F. Crehan of Sohier Street, has been named a principal in the Boston office of William M. Merc., Inc., an employee benefit and compensation consulting firm. Prior to joining Mercer, he was a partner with an international human resource consulting firm.

☐ Mrs. Eva Black enjoyed her recent return for a visit to Cohasset and is now settled back in her home in New York. If the weather keeps up the way it has been all winter, Mrs. Black may be there until spring! We think we have snow, it's nothing like the outer limits of New York State!

☐The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced a contest, "Draw Our Logo." Any resident of Cohasset or member of a Cohasset organization is eligible with the grand prize of $100 in merchandise being the offered award.

The newly formed organization has set no design limitation. All finished drawings will become the sole exclusive property of the Chamber of Commerce and must be submitted to P.O. Box 336 before Feb. 29.

☐ Many adults would like to be back in grades 10-12, and able to enter the Essay Contest on "The Future of Democracy in Our Country." Especially with a week's trip to Washington, D.C. as a prize. For the students that are interested, contact Mr. Kite. He has the applications which are due March 1.

☐ Frank England always comes to mind this time of year, as he was responsible for reinstating the mid-terms that students have been taking recently. Many a college student is grateful that they had to learn how to study for them in high school, as they are a must in college. It was a great idea, indeed.

☐ Keep your news coming!

'Flex time' proposed for Expressway

By Karen Brown

Like it or not, Cohasset and Scituate commuters must soon decide how to deal with the monumental reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway beginning in March.

According to the state DPW, the project will last for two years, from March to Nov. 1984, and March to Nov. 1985, to complete.

Thursday night at the Cohasset Town Hall, the state DPW represented by Pam Wolf, along with Senator Allan McKinnon, held another in a series of hearings to discuss various transportation alternatives for commuters on the South Shore.

Ten people attended the meeting.

McKinnon described the ordeal ahead as "a tremendous challenge for commuters."

"Route 3," said the senator, "is taxed beyond its ability to handle cars."

McKinnon asked for "a collective effort of us...of the commuters" in tackling the difficulties imposed on South Shore residents by the Expressway reconstruction.

Alternative methods of transportation suggested by McKinnon and Wolf, included increased van pools and commuter boats, expanding the Park-Ride facilities in Rockland and Hingham along with increased usage of public transportation, the Red Line on the "T" in particular.

Wolf, a Hull resident, presented a slide show produced by the Massachusetts Area Planning Court and entitled "Southeast Expressway Reconstruction, 1984-1985. A Project That Can't Wait."

Cohasset resident and delegate Martha Gjesteby helped to organize the meeting.

Slides presented in detail the deterioration of Expressway bridges by salt water seeping through concrete.

The project has been called "a major bridge rehabilitation project."

Regarding the plan, construction work will proceed two lanes at a time, beginning with the northbound lanes.

During rush hour, four lanes will be open to traffic; two being "reversible."

This means at noon traffic flow will be reversed in two lanes on the Expressway to allow for the outbound motorists only.

Those still driving into and out of Boston during peak commuter hours, 6 to 9 a.m. and 3 to 6 p.m. will experience "extreme bumper to bumper traffic," said Wolf.

The area most adversely affected by reconstruction will be the Rte. 128 merger, she added.

The Red Line also will suffer substantial spillover effects from increased commuter usage.

"The optimum product of train juggling," said Wolf, would result "in one extra train during the crush load. The only possible answer is a flex-time arrangement."

Flex time refers to proposed staggered work shifts at metropolitan businesses such as John Hancock which employs one third of the commuting population.

Terry Murray, DPW flex time coordinator announced at the hearing there will be two flex time conferences in Boston, Feb. 16 and Feb. 23 to discuss planning and

Specu-weather

"Accu-weather" and other misnomers for flawless weather forecasting have outlived our patience. In fact Tuesday's wintry day was unanimously misconceived consistently by major meteorologists within the 24 hours prior to the storm.

Throughout the night as our snow plow fleet stood ready for ignition, no snow fell. When dawn approached, the rains ensued. And as commuters, school children and our sundry population readied for work, the snow, on its own schedule independent of science, fell and fell and fell.

We have options. There are, in our heritage, avenues by which our forebears availed themselves an understanding of the coming weather. Let us review those tried and true methods.

The most basic concept is the person portrayed as an ignoramus who holds a dampened finger to the wind to gauge its drying time.

That is not our favorite. But we would remind residents of this sage truth whose batting average for veracity outstrips Dicky, Don Kent and countless others on this last storm. "Red sky in the morning, sailors take warning; red sky at night, sailors delight."

Here are other means to forecast foul weather: (Some have been categorized as old wives tales or Yankee foolishness by those who have been playing with computers too long).

- Vegetables, particularly carrots and potatoes burn on.
- An old scar or arthritis assumes a chronic ache.
- There's a ring around the moon.
- Squirrels can't seem to stash away enough nuts to satisfy them.
- Leaves on trees are upside down.
- There are seagulls on the golf course.
- Cows face south while grazing .
- The cat sits with the tail toward the flame.

And there are non-scientific truisms forecasting good weather:

- It's too cold to snow.
- Big snowflakes mean a small snowfall.
- Animals resume natural feeding and sleeping habits.

What we are suggesting here is Specu-weather. During the month of January residents spent countless hours listening to weather reports on the radio, catching it on the evening televised news, pitting meterologist against forecaster, going to bed with the car turned outward at the edge of the driveway, putting stock in the strangers who tell us about the next day.

We could say it doesn't matter if they're wrong. But weather is important to New Englanders. We wouldn't be here if we didn't like a lot of it.

The confusion of January forecasting has left a fellow not knowing whether to buy an extra shovel or sell the one he's got.

Specu-weather means you pay strict attention to Thursday, Feb. 2, Ground Hog's Day. The fallacy with that as a means by which to foretell the winter is that most people can't remember which way that goes. Are there six more weeks if he sees his shadow or six more if he doesn't?

The answer is the former, we speculate.

It could be we are grouchy about weather forecasts we can't count on. The winter had edged in on us so as to cause folks to be fractious in the same way other animals grow restive when rotten weather's brewing.

This new month, condemned by many as the pits in the calendar, is yet another Yankee test for endurance. We like best the answer given by an inveterate forecaster to this question: Do you think it's gonna clear up? . . . It always has.

"...Now that!...That is absolutely the very last straw...!"

Does it apply to Cohasset?

(Cohasset resident Manny Salvador found the following article, "Property Taxes; The Whacky Factor" in the Wellfleet newspaper and thought Cohasset residents might be interested in reading it. Ed.)

The widespread dissatisfaction over the most recent real estate tax revaluation is yet another indication of a brewing crisis for local property owners. That crisis is over the difference between market value of property and what we would call its real value.

The state has ruled and is now enforcing the law that says real estate must be assessed at fair market value, which is a wise and just concept based on equity. It is the sound principle that everyone be taxed on the same basis, that there be no favoritism or discrimination.

The trouble is that there is a special factor at play in real estate that throws things out of whack. In fact, it might be called the whacky factor.

The town has become over the years a highly fashionable and desireable place to own real estate. As one of the more amiable pieces of geography in the world it has, to be sure, an inherent value; but it has something much more, too, a prestige element that makes it great to have, sort of like a Burberry coat.

There are a lot of people out there in the every day world awash in cash. They are different from the rest of us in that their money is so plentiful that, dollar for dollar, it is infinitley less valuable. While others are guided by value, they can afford to be guided by desire alone. If they want something badly enough they don't really care how much they have to pay for it. We see example after example of property just recently revalued which is sold within months for twice the new value put on it. The price paid then becomes the new fair market value and has a broad effect on all neighboring properties.

This is crazy! The jacked-up prices are whimsical and have nothing to do with real value. The great trouble is that such dippy economics sends the bill for kited values and higher taxes to local residents and tends to force them to sell what they had no intention of selling. The end of this process will be the supplanting of local people with profligates from the far corners of the earth.

Of what use is it to a family carefully settled into a $60,000 home for the rest of its days suddenly to have the value of that property increased to $200,000. Nothing but the illusion of sudden wealth and the effect of an increased tax bill on a delicately managed budget.

Simple justice and common sense would maintain that taxes in such cases be due and payable on the inflated amount when and if it is sold, while levies should be made on real value, the amount actually put into the property, plus allowance for inflation of the dollar.

Basically, the only real defense the town has is to rid itself of dependence on the property tax to pay for local services. It is a regressive tax to begin with, the rich and the poor paying at the same rate. What is needed is another more equitable way of raising revenues. Then we could without compunction let these people with a different sense of the value of money pay what they want for property without disrupting the social fabric of the community.

'We need the arts' has support

To the Editor,

It was gratifying to read Lisa Morse's article "We Need the Arts" (Dec. 22 Lamplight) in which she discusses the versatile assets of an arts education.

Her perceptions on art appreciation are, however, sadly true. Most students are not interested in the arts; many do take art "just for the credit."

But if students lack interest in the arts we can't blame them. In order for students to appreciate and value art at the junior/senior high school level, they have to experience "arts" before they get there.

The requirement that elementary students take one class per week in art and music is not enough. Nor is it enough that junior/senior high students take one semester of art, music, home economics and industrial arts.

Students must learn of and through a greater variety of arts to complete their education with a sense that these things are important.

Ironically, during this time of economic constraint, there is a growing effort at state and local levels to see that arts are sustained in our schools. When something valuable is in jeopardy, its importance is underscored.

And, happily for the arts, there are new and exciting ways of integrating them into education.

Artists as teachers, in-residence in schools, where students not only learn how to write poetry, make theatre, move creatively or interpret artistically, also serve as role models. In allowing artists to work in our schools, administrators and teachers send a message to students that says "art and artists are important to education and life."

Artists, too, are grearing their craft with education in mind. They are developing new ways of teaching what it is they do, and how they do it. They are also finding ways of showing what it is schools are teaching.

Art has been in the classroom, particularly at the

Joseph Kennedy II & the Citizens Energy Corp

By Lois Martin

"This is our fifth winter. And it's been a terrific education. I can see how the poor and the elderly get screwed. Not only do I see how they are personally hurt, I have seen how callous the well-to-do are about it. They have no idea how the poor are getting hurt."

Joseph Kennedy II, of Marshfield, president of the Citizens Energy Corporation, had that to say about his group's experience in getting fuel assistance to residents in the state since late 1979.

And if the energy coporation has found success, it has also met frustration. The frustration is borne, not in the process of getting heating oil to homes, but of not getting it to all the people who are eligible to get it free. . .

"There are 440,000 families eligible to get fuel assistance in Massachusetts," he said. "Of course only 165,000 get the assistance that's there for them."

The complexities of the windfall profit legislation and the ensuing distribution of some of that profit constitutes serious research.

More simply it is this. The federal government gets a percentage of the mammoth profit from the major oil companies. Of that, and it's the high numbers, 25 percent must go directly for fuel assistance. That's about $1.6 billion a year.

The state administers money for heating oil. But if people don't ask for it and use up what's there, the money goes back to the federal government, beyond being reclaimed for fuel assistance for poor people.

That failure to use what's available is an obstruction Joe Kennedy and his corporation would like most to overcome.

"Either they don't know about it or there's still a welfare stigma to getting fuel assistance," he said. "I want to say to people, 'Look, the money's there. Go get it. Go break the bank before they send it back to Congress. Nobody's using it.' "

Kennedy has fervor for his cause. Something he and his fellow workers have not had, however, was the need to approach their goal with bureaucratic calm. " . . . My staff, you should see them. They'll raise hell if they have to."

That staff is now in Citizens' Energy Corporation's headquarters on Atlantic Avenue, "an old warehouse." And it has come a long way since the evening Joe and a friend were watching the news in the midst of the oil crisis in 1979. That was when the price of oil per barrel shot from $9 to $30 then $40.

"It seemed poor people, the elderly, anybody on a fixed income," said Kennedy, "the blue collar worker, couldn't possibly pay one-quarter of his income for energy. The cost was up 1100 percent !"

That night Joe and his friend discussed a hypothetical question: What if you took the billions in oil profits going to the oil companies and used it to reduce the cost of oil. There was the motivation and the idea . . . Then it was just a question of using the phone.

Headquarters for the fledgling corporation was in the basement of Kennedy's house in Brighton.

He had been working for the Community Services Administration, part of the Office of Economic Opportunity, initiated in John Kennedy's administration as one of the anti-poverty moves.

But in the Nixon take-off of the OEO and its agency branches, Kennedy, who might in understatement be said to have shared John Kennedy's views rather than those of Richard Nixon, found dilution of intent and impact.

The fact is he got fed up with trying to get the money and aid where it was needed and the lack of desire of the agency to participate in meeting its original goal.

So . . . married and having "to find a job," Kennedy and three others started a six month research program that gave them the education they needed to get heating oil at wholesale prices.

They got shipping and refining costs, the dope on oil, beyond the emittances of OPEC and the oil company. "While all the oil companies were blaming OPEC there was a much greater increase in the price of gasoline and home heating oil in Boston than OPEC's increase . . . Something was amiss. And I figured if you could buy OPEC oil and didn't mark it up, you could end up serving people."

There was talk in Congress that '79 winter about fuel assistance but that was the extent of the program, talk.

The state had a program, said Kennedy, to use federal and state money to buy heating oil from a dealer. But that was at the marked up price.

The non-profit energy corporation negotiated delivery of the same heating oil at 40 percent below what the state had been paying. The state had had no negotiating process. It simply paid the bill from the oil man as it was received.

The state now contracts with the corporation and distributes the oil free to those as they qualify.

Here residents are to contact the South Shore Community Action Council in Plymouth. That's 746-6707. "If they just jerk you around," said Joe Kennedy, "Call the hotline." That's 1-800-632-8175.

"And if they jerk you around, call us," he says with finality. That's 338-6300.

That fuel assistance money is insured for the state through the windfall profit tax. But if the state doesn't use it, back it goes for Congress to dispense as it will. There's a different hitch.

The commercials we've been seeing on television about the Citizens' Energy Corporation are aired as a public service. It concludes with Joe Kennedy in Boston on the job.

He is not always there.

He and his wife Sheila have lived in Marshfield more than two years. Like others, he was delayed getting shoveled out to keep pace with the day's schedule last week. But that got accomplished.

He says it was Sheila who chose Marshfield for their home with twin sons Matthew and John.

"We love Marshfield," he said. "There's something a little bit more Massachusetts about Marshfield than other suburban communities. It is more of a town unto itself."

Asked as a fellow commuter and as one who likes the challenge of human problems, what he'll do about getting to work on the tornup expressway, he's already got plans.

Joe Kennedy drives to Hingham where his boat is docked in Bare Cove Boatyard. "It takes me about 20 minutes to get in by boat," he said.

He doesn't boat in now and won't until March 1. But he sees it as an expeditious and pleasant commute as an alternative to Rte. 3.

Joe Kennedy is 31. He wants to think his work is only beginning now that the vehicle for getting fuel oil is established.

The second hurdle, human rather than business or bureaucratic, is to get the money where it's needed.

He has in his heritage, a drive that includes energy spent on humanitarianism. That will not propell the University of Massachusetts (Boston) graduate to a sanctified status that would likely repell him. He is entirely, one might proffer, entirely human, a man who powers his own energy to find more of it.

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Although the Governor has chosen to increase certain taxes at various times during the year, perhaps the greatest Dukakis tax increase sought in 1983 was his unlimited fee raising tax measure.

The Republican Leadership's successful amendment to the Dukakis hidden tax plan stopped the 150 percent increases he was seeking and legislative approval is now required on every future fee tax hike.

Nevertheless, the Dukakis Administration almost perfected the practice of using fees as a revenue raising mechanism last year. $265 million was raised at the expense of plumbers, insurance brokers, hair dressers and thousands of other working people who must be licensed with the state. Broad based indeed:

Secretary Frank Keefe publicly stated the administration intends to use the revenues generated by these taxing measures to balance this year's budget — a clear violation of the constitution.

Since his inauguration, Governor Dukakis has raised over 100 fees, many of which involve the same fees increased by his predecessor, Governor King. As you remember, Dukakis criticized former Governor King's tax-raising fees in the 1982 Democratic primary for the corner office.

In the initial year of this term, Governor Dukakis took a pledge not to enact any new broad-based taxes in Massachusetts. In perhaps his most clever political coup, the Governor initiated and approved over $400 million in increased cigarette, gasoline and fee-based taxes last year.

Dukakis cleverly slipped the gasoline and cigarette tax in place so as not to be readily recognizable by the public: the gasoline tax became effective at the same time a federal gas measure was implemented and the cigarette tax was buried in his Revenue Enhancement and Protection plan, more commonly known as REAP.

As previously mentioned the Governor will attempt to raise the gas tax again this year to help finance MassBank.

Currently, we in Massachusetts have the dubious distinction of being the second most taxed people in the nation, at $3,364 for each person.

BONED INDEBTEDNESS

The citizens of the Commonwealth are now faced with two mammouth fiscal time bombs: the uncontrollable state debt and unfunded pension liabilities.

The bonded indebtedness of the state will be increased by a record $2 billion plus in Fiscal Year 1984. Whether they realize it or not, this Administration is on a collision elementary level, all along. Teachers' interest in art for 'art's sake' and as a powerful and stimulating teaching tool is growing.

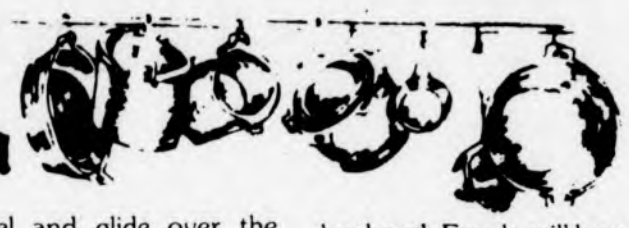
The PSO, the schools, through use of Mass. Dept. of Education block grant funds, the Cohasset Arts Council, the South Shore Art Center, local artists, and business are working together to increase arts programs in our schools.



The key to educating primary grade students to be arts appreciators when they reach the junior/senior high school level, will be a continued commitment to these programs.

The philosophy of the Institute for the Arts, founded last year by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities to support local schools that demonstrate a strong commitment to integrating arts in education, expresses best the purpose of our efforts.

"Children learn in many ways—through the heart, the hand and the imagination, as well as through the intellect. The arts join the language of imagination and creativity to the language of facts and numbers, expanding children's comprehension of the world and helping them to make sense of their experiences."

Sincerely,
Karin Bartow

Now, when the gulls wheel and glide over the desolate mud flats of our beaches, their solitary splendor is sometimes interrupted by an intrepid soul willing to brave the icy cold for a few native clams. For most of us our shores are more appealing on a sunny summer day when we can walk barefoot at low tide, stamping along to trigger those little jets of water spurting up into the air to reveal the secret hiding place of a juicy, white soft-shell clam. Instead of the mud flats, most of us haunt our local fish markets these winter days for the making of such dishes as this one suggested by Terri Long, a native of Louisiana and MARINER staff member. She tells us that fish and shellfish are everyday staples there, too and suggest we all try this.

LOUISIANA COURT BOUILLION

1 c. flour
1 c. oil
3 c. onions, chopped
1 c. each of chopped celery, bell peppers, onion tops
6 cloves garlic
1/2 c. parsley, chopped fine
1 can (16 oz.) whole tomatoes
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
3 qts. water
2 T. salt, 1/2 tsp. each red and black pepper
3½ lb. firm fish

Make roux by mixing flour and oil in large pot, preferably of cast iron. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is medium brown. Fry onion in roux until wilted and add celery, bell pepper, garlic, tomatoes and tomato sauce. Simmer 30 min., stirring often. Oil should be separating from the mixture. Add water, salt and peppers. Bring to a boil and simmer one hour. Add fish, again bringing to boil and simmer 30 min. Add onion tops and parsley five minutes before serving in soup bowls (over rice if desired). Serves 8.

For a number of years a little group of gourmands have been getting together for dinner parties. Now that they're all working, Joanne Chicko says: "When we first started out we were much more organized. Now we're all keeping our eyes open for recipes that look wonderful, taste delicious and are easy." She and her husband, Frank, will be preparing the main dish for this month's get-together and the guests who will all contribute a dish will include Sue and Dick Ade, John and Gail Hietla, Peg and Bill Christie. This Korean dish meets all the requirements for their kind of recipe and Joanna suggests a visit to an Oriental store if you want to get a Pul Koki pan to cook the dish over your habachi. However, you can cook this "Fire Beef" under your broiler. In Korean it's called

It was back in '71 that Shirley Hagg first joined Diet Workshop and now dieting has become her hobby. "Some people knit, some people sew, but for me, it's a game feeding my husband and three children." The ground rules she has developed over the years include those they observe when dining out, a favorite way they have of enjoying an evening. "We don't eat the rolls or butter and order the salad dressing served on the side to be used as a dip. Fish or chicken is eaten baked or broiled, with vegetables, black coffee and fresh fruit or sherbert for dessert." Here is one of Shirley's favorite Diet Workshop recipes called

CHICKEN POLYNESIAN

1 lb. boneless breast of chicken
2 c. green pepper, cut in strips
1 c. fresh mushrooms, sliced (optional)
1 c. unsweetened pineapple chunks
1 T cornstarch
1/2 c. chicken broth
1 T soy sauce
1/4 tsp. ginger

Cut chicken into small cubes. Saute in "Pam"-sprayed skillet. When white, remove from pan. Saute peppers and mushrooms for 2 min. Add pineapple chunks and cook 2 min. In small bowl combine last four ingredients and place in skillet. Stir and cook for 1 min. until thickened. Serves 3. 282 calories.

Spinners' Guild to hold contest

The South Shore Spinners' Guild will host two upcoming meetings which should be of particular interest to area spinners.

For the February meeting, the SSSG has planned an in-guild mock spinning bee. The contest lasts half an hour during which spinners compete to see who can spin the longest continuous thread. All participants must use hand-carded fleece. This informal bee will give spinners an enjoyable taste of what competition is like without any pressure. Both winners and losers will be awarded prizes.

Meetings of the SSSG are held on the first Thursday of each month at Second Parish Church, Hingham, from 7 to 10 p.m. New members are always welcome! For more information about the guild and its activities, contact Donna Avila, president, 545-6884.

course with an even poorer credit rating. The only previous fiscal year our new borrowing exceeded this year was in 1976 – a bleak year in the first Dukakis Administration.

The 1990's will find us faced with a whopping $10 billion plus in unfunded liabilities. We must halt in fact (not in rhetorical promises) the practice of borrowing from state employee and teacher pension funds to balance the state operting budget.

Our method of funding the pension obligation must be brought into the 20th century. Whether by set-aside methods or a pay-as-you-go plan, the problem must be dealt with how to avoid burgeoning obligations in the future, or worse, a collapse of the entire pension system.

The 1984 Legislative Session opened recently with a "new look," but a continuing purpose.

"NEW LOOK"

Opening Day Ceremonies for this year's session marked the debut of the Massachusetts House of Representatives on live public television. To my recollection, no other state legislative body is hooked up for television to date, making Massachusetts the first.

In addition, several committee hearing rooms will be wired for live viewing in the near future. Hearings will begin during the month of February.

All telecasting through March will be done by Channel 44, with Channel 2 taking over afterwards.

CONTINUING PURPOSE:

The first day of the session also marked the reaffirmation of the fight for rules reform. The continuation of this major initiative was referred to in opening day speeches as a cornerstone of this new session. I have filed legislation for further reform of House rules and Joint rules.

We must continue to deal with the issue of rules reform, because it's not going to go away. In addition, it will prove to be the most overriding issue in the 1984 elections.

A COMPELLING STATISTIC

The House collectively worked a total of 49 8-hour days during the 1983 Legislative Session. This is outrageous! It is a tremendous waste of taxpayers' time and money considering the amount of time the House actually spent in session—most of the year.

GUIDE TO FAIR HEARINGS

My office has received copies of the pamphlet "Guide to Fair Hearings and Grievances" for D.S.S. Consumers and Foster Parents with a Statement of Consumer Rights.

Its major purpose is to let D.S.S. consumers know about their rights to a fair hearing or grievance. If a D.S.S. consumer has a complaint about the services he has or has not received, this pamphlet will help explain what he can do.

Call or write to my office for a copy.

Who should be 'Person of the Year'?

Now that 1983 is history, who in town should be Cohasset's man or woman of the year?

Who has done or accomplished the most for the public good without fanfare or without much public recognition?

There are no requirements except the person should either be a resident or own a business in Cohasset.

Please send nominations and a brief reason for selection to the Mariner through Box 71, Cohasset, or the drop spots at Hennessey's News or Colonial Pharmacy.

The top three winners will be interviewed and photographed.

'Flex time' proposed . . .

implementation of staggered work shifts at federal and state agencies in Boston as well as city businesses.

Another alternative discussed concerned upgrading the dock facilities and expanding parking areas to hold 450 cars at the Hingham Shipyard, described by Louis Eaton as "completely unrealistic."

Eaton, who serves on the Advisory Board of the MBTA for Cohasset, said five additional boats "at least" would be needed to transport the influx of an estimated 1,000 boat commuters.

The hovercraft, Eaton referred to as "financially...ridiculous."

"Flex time is the answer," he agreed with Wolf.

One woman suggested the possibility of "caravan pools to drive people to T stations" since parking is already now a major problem even before reconstruction.

"In the planning effort, we hope we will have covered a wide variety of options," said Wolf.

When construction is finally complete, there will be a brand new skid resistant surface on the Expressway, better on-off ramps and emergency exits, a new median with central lighting and a breakdown lane northbound, known as "a traffic management lane."

School report: . . . short stories

For six consecutive weeks during January and February, the sixth grade students at Deer Hill School will be involved in a creative writing contest.

Each week the students submit a story on a topic designated by the sixth grade language arts teachers.

Students earn points in the contest in two ways. Each class reads stories submitted by another sixth grade class, and without knowing who wrote each story, votes on its favorite. Points are also awarded to students who have been given a grade of "A" by the language arts teacher.

At the end of the six weeks, prizes will be awarded to those students who have accumulated the most points.

(The following stories were written by Grade 6 students at Deer Hill school as part of a creative writing contest. —Ed. note)

Trapped

The house was empty, over one hundred years old, with creaking floors and broken windows. No one lived there, or did they?

Scott and Lisa passed this house every day on the way to school. It scared them when they walked by. They imagined it was very creepy.

One rainy day on the way home they dared to go inside to explore, even though the sign said, "Keep Out."

It was very dark and cold inside. They were suddenly aware that something was crawling awkwardly toward them from the dark corner of the abandoned building. They screamed in fear!

It was Cujo, the mad dog. So much for Scott and Lisa.

By Sean Bishop

Caught

I had started walking. The road was absolutely still. The big, brick library was far in the distance.

I had gone to the library at six o'clock and expected to be going home at seven. Obviously that was an incorrect estimation, because now it was approximately eight o'clock.

My mom and dad were at Angie's house. Joyce was at Linda's and was planning on spending the night. So that left me no other alternative but to trudge home in the pitch darkness.

It was rather scary watching the gloomy trees stare with melancholy expressions. The tall grass was swaying in the wind, and there was a cool breeze.

The night was silent except for the echoing of my feet hitting the hard pavement. I thought that I heard something else off in the distance, but I couldn't quite figure out what it was.

My heart started beating faster and faster until it felt like it was just about to jump out of my chest. I tried reassuring myself that it was simply a figment of my imagination. After all, what could possibly happen? Deep inside my conscience a voice was telling me I was in danger. I ignored it for a while.

Soon I realized it was a person. I could see the outline of the figure. It looked as if it were a man.

Horrible thoughts rushed into my head. I could take the path through the woods. Or maybe I would be safer if I stayed on the road and took the long route.

I went into a dark alley by mistake. Soon the figure started getting closer and closer. I felt faint.

There was no escape and I knew it. I was caught in the narrow alley. The big, muscular figure got closer. Before I could do anything he had a tight grip on my right arm.

"What do you want?" I asked trying to pronounce each word without cracking my voice.

"I want your purse," grumbled a deep, masculine voice.

Of course, I thought, my purse. After all I just had some lipgloss, tissues and five dollars in it. I handed him my purse. He ran off into the woods. He would soon realize how unnecessary that was.

I quickly ran home. I scurried up the front walk. Thank goodness! My parents were home. I explained everything in full detail. My mom made a phone call and came back and said there was not much the police could do.

Fatigue had taken over my body. My weary body felt like moving no more. I was still trembling from the previous happening. I had a cup of tea and my mom and I talked over what happened. She thought I had done the correct thing.

At ten o'clock I turned in. Luckily the next day was Saturday, I would go to the police station and try to identify the robber.

I was glad to be warm and secure and snug at home. I was so tired I fell asleep quickly. I was glad to be safe and secure at home.

The Weird Things That Can Happen In Rain Storms

One Saturday afternoon two friends, Eric and Harry, decided to go to a movie. They decided to see Friday the 13th Part III, which was supposed to be the scariest movie ever made. Eric and Harry agreed it was.

After the movie was over, they decided to stop and buy some ice cream. When they had finally got their cones they went to the corner to catch a bus home, but they missed it. While they were waiting for the next bus, it started to rain.

They ran into an old abandoned apartment building to wait for the next bus. The room was dark and very gloomy. While they waited Harry thought he heard a noise coming from the back of the room. But Eric said, "Don't be such a chicken!"

Then Eric heard a noise but he didn't want to be called a chicken so he tried to ignore it. Then they both heard it again. They both jumped so high when they landed they broke through the very rotted floorboards. They had finally pulled themselves out of the dark, musty cellar and started running out of the building, but the rain was coming down so hard they didn't dare.

The thunder sounded like a train passing by and the lightning lit up the sky. The rain pounded everything so hard it sounded like the beating of drums. As they came back into the building a huge flash of lightning lit up the sky and the room.

Then they saw it! Something was crawling awkwardly toward them from the corner of the abandoned building. Then Harry decided to be brave and capture the thing.

When he had grabbed it, he pulled it up and saw it was their friend Joey. He had been running from the movie when he twisted his ankle. He was four rows in front of them and was just as scared as they were. When the bus finally came, they all boarded and went home.

Shaped like the head of a fawn in profile, Maui with its 120-mile shoreline, is a beautifully endowed island. Not surprisingly it has a little bit of everything that one associates with Hawaii. History comes alive in a one time whaling town. Natural splendor manifests itself in the gargantuan crater of a dormant volcano. None of the other Hawaiian islands has a wider choice of hotels, as many interesting restaurants or more amusing after-dark haunts. Sports facilities, golf and tennis especially, are superb. The look of Maui is what we seek in the Pacific tropics: wide white-sand beaches contrasting with green-to-purple mountain slopes.

. . . parent-teen guidelines

Cohasset Proposed Parent-Teen Guidelines

Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, there will be a workshop for parents and other citizens interested in serving with a subcommittee from the Parent SchoolOrganization and the Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee.

The purpose of the workshop is to initiate the development of the proposed "Parent-Teen Guidelines" discussed at the forum on Teens and Alcohol Dec. 1, 1983.

The ultimate goal of the committee is to develop a set of guidelines or "covenant" which would set forth across-the-board ground rules for young teenagers and to some extent, their parents.

The guidelines will be concerned primarily with what is and what is not "accepted behavior" in regard to alcohol use, unsupervised parties, curfews, etc. This project will also aid in the effort to get more of the parents involved in the school system's alcohol education program.

Anyone interested in working on this project must contact Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill before Feb. 15 at the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, 143 Pond Street, 383-6107 or 6100.

Math bee

Thursday Feb. , at 1 p.m. in the Deer Hill School a new kind of bee will take place.

This bee will be a math bee instead of the usual spelling bee. Mr. Becker and all of the other 6th grade teachers are responsible for this math bee.

A test was taken on Monday to determine the four contestants from each sixth grade class.

Mrs. Cisneros is in charge of getting this organized. Mr. Becker will play the roll of the moderator. Mr. Deakin will be responsible for the scoring, and Mr. Shultz will form the equations.

During the contest each contestant will be given a problem. They will then solve it over a course of one minute.

No contestant will be eliminated, but there will be a prize for the student with the most points. A class will also have the honor of acquiring the highest score. Remember that everyone is a winner. May the best student win!

We recently forwarded a check for $2,014.50 to DOVE representing the proceeds from our benefit Christmas Concert, and the following is the reply we received from them:

Dear Rev. Atkins and Members:

Congratulations on the outstanding success of your Christmas Concert again this year. On behalf of all of us here at the DOVE shelter, I would like to thank you and express our deep gratitude for your generosity in donating the proceeds of your concert.

As you are aware, the problem of domestic violence is one that has received a great deal of attention lately. However, the numbers of clients we service continue to rise dramatically. The shelter is usually occupied to capacity and the facilities undergo a lot of heavy usage. Your donation will go a long way in providing our residents with some badly needed renovations, particularly in the area of furniture.

The continued support of your congregation is gratifying in that our work is recognized and valued. We also hope that we will begin to see a reduction in the incidents of domestic violence. Your contribution helps to assure that services will continue to be provided until necessary.

Again, thanks to all of you for your efforts on behalf of DOVE and for the very real concern and caring shown by your members.

May you and your families enjoy a New Year filled with health, happiness and peace.

Sincerely,
Sandra J. Baler, Planning Director

The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon — any day between 9 and 5 — and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000

GIRLS BASKETBALL

. The Cohasset Girls Basketball team powered over Hanover 43-36 during a South Shore League contest.

"We did an excellent job handling Hanover's defensive pressure," remarked coach Fallon, and we played with poise down the stretch."

Janet DiGirolamo had 11 points while Tracy Fitzpatrick added 9.

With another victory over Hull, 42-32, Cohasset improved their record to 11-3.

"It was a strong defensive effort in the third and the beginning of the fourth quarter that blew the game open into an 18 point lead," commented coach Fallon. "We played excellent team defense and overall it was a very good team effort, everyone contributed."

Janet DiGirolamo and Carla Lucas each scored 10 points.

"Right now we are in a tremendous position to make the tournament," concluded coach Fallon. "We have progressed as a team and we are now starting to play well as a team." "We are peaking at just the right time."

The Skippers will be home on Friday against Abington at 6 p.m.

HOCKEY

The hockey team met the strong, second place Scituate team this past week and lost 8-1. Alex Ghetto avoided a shutout with a tip in of Timmy Curran's shot from the point.

Ode to the serious ironer

By Lois Martin

There may be a dozen left on the South Shore, only because some people hold on to things.

But it's been a good generation (not bad, really) since I've seen a mangle. And why they called it that I never understood. I always thought "to mangle" was "to alter, rearrange," so as to mess up.

But the Bendix mangle in our kitchen was for serious ironing. It was a relatively large appliance at which the 'mangler' sat as she put through basket after basket of 'flatwork.' Clever manglers did shirts.

This came to mind last week when a woman was decrying an electric bill of more than $90 (no heat). And she concluded the conversation by quipping that the bill was because of all her ironing.

PATCHES

Irons aren't as threatened by extinction as the mangle. There was a time we stood at the board for long sessions of free thinking . . . ironing. My last such project was when Lyndon Johnson was reaffirming the OEO.

We did dishtowels back then, certainly sheets and tee shirts. Of course the fabric was different, fully muslin and cotton. And that's where the mangle came in.

My mother was quite a hand at mangling. She did it during the afternoon radio soaps. Those started about 2 or so, bringing "Old Ma Perkins" to bear about 2:30, running through Stella Dallas and Lollie an hour later and topping off the afternoon with "Pepper Young's Family."

Now that's a lot of flatwork. And among the goods to be run around that hot circle were the tablecloths. Those are now used more 'for good.' We've taken to pieces of sturdy tablecloths, called placemats as an alternative.

In the 50s you clothed your kitchen table routinely. All your all-whites were of linen and strictly dining room until they went downhill and could be used in the kitchen. They'd last a few days if you were careful. There was always the option of turning it over to get another meal out of it if the pattern were not offended by that move. And there were limitless opportunities to cover jam smudges with the sugar bowl or even a plate if you shifted the cloth. Birdfeeding was accomplished by the shaking of the cloth out the back door.

And there were real napkins de rigueur. Those got mangled with countless cloth handkerchiefs.

For me the woman's handkerchief was a revealing indicator. There was hardly a woman who'd use a hanky that didn't have handwork on it. I never thought of them as being of value on a nose that was fraught with dreadful congestion. You borrowed a man's hanky for an honest cold.

But other than that the woman's little hanky was a charming nose-dabber. And I learned early that it could tell me the approximate age of my teacher.

A young teacher was already into Kleenex, a new product. One that was in her early 30s had her cloth nose-wiper and she kept it in her pocket or in her purse, fetching as needed. Your grammar or high school teacher who was in her 40s stashed her hanky up her sleeve. . . . However, the experienced/advanced older teacher whose retirement party would be rumored in the corridors within a few years, tucked her lovely handkerchief in her bosom. Honest, 'course she did, you remember.

Her hanky was more edging than fabric. It was used intermittently in blackboard erasures and ruler tappings. The swift move of inserting or removing that hanky allowed that brief second in which to replace the slipping undergarment strap as well.

School was instructive in so many ways.

All that as an unconnected train of thought from a mangle.

There may be a few who have a mangle somewhere, probably with its own protective cover. There were even homes where the mangle had its fringe or ruffled skirt.

But history tends to repeat. And with the nostalgic return of cottons and linens as being more desirable than the polyester knits, we may resume mangling. Personally, I plan to continue pressing between books overnight.

Seahawks hockey league report . . .

BANTAMS

The Bantam A team was defeated by Brockton, 6-3. Danny Pompeo, Andy Thomas and Ned Flaherty accounted for the scoring. They were assisted by Thomas, Flaherty, (each with two assists), and Pompeo.

Chris Brennan's Bantam C team was outplayed by a determined Hanover squad as they went down in defeat. The final score was 5-2. The two "Hawk" goals were scored by Larry Ditullio and John Murphy, assisted by John Nyland and Brian McGovern.

MITES

Coach Frank Greenberg's Mite C team skated to a 2-2 tie Saturday with first place Hingham. Mike Reynolds and Eric McLaughlin were the "puck-poppers" for the Seahawks.

Assists were metered out to Billy Roberts, Michael Foley, and Jason Zimmer. An outstanding performance was turned in by Zachery Rogers in net.

In a second game this weekend, the Mites were victorious against Bourne, 4-1. Providing the offense were Michael Reynolds who scored two goals and Michael Foley and Mike Shields who each scored one goal. Billy Roberts registered two assists to round out the scoring.

SQUIRTS

Coaching a sports team at any level can be a frustrating and thankless endeavor. Coaches keep coming back with "hope springing eternal" that their charges will play the next game as it should be played, perhaps even utilizing some of the techniques practiced between bouts with Pac Man.

Such was the fulfillment for Squirt "A" coach, Barry Resnick, not once, but twice this past week. The "Hawks" enjoyed truly their finest hours, beating second place Plymouth 4-3 and coming back a couple of days later to defeat the league leader, Avon-Holbrook 2-1.

In the Plymouth game Jon Mahoney was "awesome" turning in a "hat trick" with Fred Rogers scoring the other goal.

Assists were credited to Billy Tibbetts (two), John Resnick, and Matt DiFiore. The game against Avon-Holbrook was more of a nail biter.

Matt DiFiore and Billy Tibbetts scored the goals with assists from Tim Getto, Jon Mahoney, and Matt McGuirk.

Although hockey dictates scores and assists be distributed as the above credits indicate, Coach Resnick stressed it was truly a team effort and he was extremely proud of all his skaters.

In other Seahawk action this weekend, the Peewee "B's" coached by Tom Hingston turned in a super effort defeating Brockton 2-1. The attack was spearheaded by Chris Ventolieri and Mike Dundon who both beat the Brockton goalie.

Assists on Chris' goal were credited to William Hingston and Dennis Dundon while Mike's goal was unassisted.

Scott MacKay turned in an outstanding performane in net, keeping the Brockton sharp shooters at bay.

"CONWAY COUNTRY" UPDATE

NEW LOOK! Starting this week "Conway Country" will have new look in the Mariner papers. Our Mariner sales rep., Susan Reed and Publisher David Cutler, think the association is long overdue, and we agree. After all, "Conway Country" has offices in most of the towns covered by the Mariner...Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Hanover and soon to open in Norwell. The only town left is Pembroke which is well served by our surrounding offices of Duxbury, Hanson, Hanover and Marshfield.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY STUDENTS from Hanover High School used our Hanover office telephones last week for a telethon to help raise funds for the Heart Fund. Nice to see the students participating....glad we could help in a small way.

30 "CONWAY COUNTRY" MANAGERS have started an intensive 7 week Executive Management Series held in conjunction with Dale Carnegie Courses. The series is part of our ongoing education program that involves everyone in the company from the Chairman of the Board to the new sales associate. More later about the financing seminar in February for our associates.

Conversation with the Building Inspector

Cohasset's Building Boom

By Mike Berger

Three sure signs of a community building boom are stricter building laws, fee increase and more and more building permits.

Such is the case in Cohasset as selectmen approved new permit rates last week in an effort to keep permit fees in line with area towns.

Building Inspector Bob Dennis has been a busy man during 1983. He issued 592 permits, almost 200 more than 1982 records and the estimated value of all construction increased by $1 million to over $5 million by Dec. 31.

In an interview before Dennis met with selectmen last week, the young but knowledgeable inspector reviewed the past year and the need for tighter building laws.

These are the new building permit rates approved by selectmen.

Residential fees will remain the same, $10 for the first $1,000 worth of construction or repair. Ten dollars is the minimum cost for a building permit. Additional charges will be $3 per $1,000 worth of construction.

The change involves commercial construction only. Charges will be $10 for the first $1,000 of construction value and $5 for every additional

Fire Dept. sparks mark Town Hall hearing

By Jane Lane

Sparks ignited Tuesday night, and a few verbal explosions might have been heard from town hall as the firefighters' union became embroiled in yet another battle against Fire Chief Martin Dooley.

The auditorium of the Town Hall was the battleground for this exchange, as the union charged the chief with misuse of town property, and endangering the lives of the Cohasset firefighters.

More than fifty spectators gathered in the auditorium to attend the selectmen's investigative hearing concerning the allegations leveled against the chief by the union.

Chief Dooley requested the hearing be open to the public.

The charges were made in a letter written Dec. 7, 1983 by union president William Protulis to the board of selectmen. In the letter to the board, Protulis alleged that on Nov. 25, 1983, Chief Dooley misused a five-year old aerial ladder by ordering his men to puncture a window boarded with plywood in a vacant Hull building. He also stated Chief Dooley endangered the firefighters' lives by ordering two men onto the ladder while a hose was operating from the extension.

Protulis, who is also the fire department's master mechanic, warned selectmen in the December letter to restrict further use of the ladder truck until tests could be conducted to determine any damage. He also noted that ordering a firefighter atop of the aerial ladder in wind gusts of 30 m.p.h. "further diminished" the firefighters confidence in Chief Dooley.

During the meeting, Protulis said the letter had been "sanctioned" by the union members, although a formal vote had never been taken regarding the issue.

Upon receipt of the letter in December, selectmen had two independent companies complete tests of the ladder truck, and it was determined there was no structural damage to the truck or apparatus.

But selectmen decided to conduct an investigation into the charges made by the union against the fire chief.

Things got heated during the hearing, specifically when firefighter Eric Winslow, a witness called to testify, was brought under cross examination by Chief Dooley's attorney, Louis Cassis of Quincy. Protulis and other union members objected to the line of questioning. Then Paul Lesgate, secretary-treasurer of the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts, requested permission to act as counsel to the union members.

When selectmen denied the request, Protulis and many other firefighters and audience members walked from the hall. "Let's go," the union president declared. "If this is the way you are conducting this hearing, we're leaving. I'd like this hearing rescheduled."

Someone from the audience shouted at selectmen,

Murray answers a young reporter's questions

By Patricia Desmond

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, always available to talk with her constituents, sat in the living room of her Cohasset home recently fielding questions prepared for a school report.

Corey DeSantis wanted to know about Murray's position on Proposition 2½. Corey, a student at Deer Hill School in Cohasset, needed the information for her enrichment class.

Corey began her interview by plugging in her tape recorder and testing it.

"My directive is to support 2½ now," Murray replied to the first question. "Having been a selectman (in Cohasset) and knowing how hard we tried to prune the budget - they weren't padded - I wasn't in favor of it at first."

Murray added that 2½ hasn't hurt Cohasset. Just before Corey arrived for her appointment, the representative had been saying that the surprising thing is the polls show people still favor 2½ by the same percentage as when it passed.

Murray explained that the way she operates in the legislature is to vote the way her constituents want her to vote.

So she now backs 2½.

In response to another question from Corey, she said the measure has not worked as well in some of the larger cities. She said the towns don't have patronage.

"We work with a sharp pencil (on the budgets)," Murray said.

Corey wanted to know what good 2½ had accomplished.

Murray said reassessment went well with 2½ and that the reduction in the excise tax, mandated by 2½, was a good thing.

"Most of my constituents objected to that tax," she said. She had filed legislation in the past to abolish the excise tax system.

Murray went on to say that many voters thought Proposition 2½ would limit state spending.

Cohasset's week . . .

Salt storage sheds

Senator Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk & Plymouth) said today Cohasset will be one of twenty communities to recieve funding for the construction of municipal salt storage sheds. The Transportation Bond Bill (Chapter 637 of the Acts 1983) contains $2,000,000 for the construction of approximately 60 sheds in 20 communities.

The Department of Public Works plans to advertise them in 1984 so they will be completed in the 1984 construction season.

Studds protests toxic waste

Senator Edward M. Kennedy and Congressman Gerry Studds formally protested any planned, large scale incineration of toxic waste at sea until the Environmental Protection Agency issues regulations controlling such facilities.

Plans for a large scale, ocean facility have been proposed in the Gulf of Mexico. Plans have been proposed for a similar ocean facility in the north Atlantic in the future.

TB test

The Board of Health wishes to advise all individuals who work in food related businesses that a TB test is required every three (3) years for food handlers. Managers and owners should make sure that all employees have had a test prior to their employment.

The tests are given at the Social Service League. To make an appointment for such a test, please call Ms. Loud, Public Health Nurse at 383-0771.

The procedure is fast and painless and is mandatory for any individuals who work in a restaurant, retail food store, school kitchen, or nursing home.

Chamber logo contest

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced a contest, "Draw Our Logo." Any resident of Cohasset or member of a Cohasset organization is eligible with the grand prize of $100 in merchandise being the offered award.

The newly formed organization has set no design limitation. All finished drawings will become the sole exclusive property of the Chamber of Commerce and must be submitted to P.O. Box 336 before Feb. 29, 1984.

The winner will be announced at the regular monthly meeting March 14.

Saturday's caucus

The Democratic Caucus to elect Delegates to the June 9 Massachusetts Democratic State Nominating Convention will be held Saturday, Feb. 11, at 2 p.m. in the Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

The caucus has been moved from the original location, the Cushing Room, to the Town Hall, because of the interest in the event generated by the race for U.S. Senate.

The main order of business at the convention, to be held in Worcester this year, will be to nominate a candidate for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Paul Tsongas.

Cohasset Democrats will be able to elect two male delegates and two female delegates at this caucus. Local Democratic Party officials are expecting a large turnout.

Cox estate plans

Selectmen will wait before firming any plans for the portion of property given to the town by the new owners of the former Cox estate.

The board decided that with budget preparations and the town's mandate to settle things quickly within the fire department, there is not enough time to decide land use now.

The Yankee Oil and Gas Co., owners of the property, have agreed to lease a 100-foot portion of the harborfront land to the town at no cost.

The planning board is anxious to begin preparation to convert the land into a harbor parking area, with access for boaters and fishermen.

Because the land is regulated by coastal environmental statutes, the process will be complicated. There is no penalty for delaying future plans for the land development, since the lease will remain in effect, regardless of whether the property is used this summer, selectmen said.

There is not enough time now to properly prepare plans for the land, they determined.

Pond Street condo update

The first residents will be moving into the Pond Street housing development this week.

Fred Thayer, the developer for the Pond Street project, asked the Board of Health on Monday night to issue four occupancy permits.

The board was reluctant to issue the premits because the sewerage system for the development is not finished. The ventilation system has not been installed, and there is no warning alarm system in case the system should fail.

However, the board agreed to issue the four occupancy permits on the condition Thayer finish the sewer facility within the next few weeks.

Normally the board does not issue occupancy permits on a conditional basis. In this case, however, the board feels that the requirements for occupancy will be met.

If the requirements are not met, the board can withhold future occupancy permits from the development.

Board member Dr. Michael Bliss said, "I think we have more control here than we would in a single family dwelling."

The Pond Street development will include 39 single family units. The development will be completed in three years.

In other business, Frank Tarzia appeared before the board with questions about developing on Rt. 3A, near the entrance to the Cohasset heights landfill. He plans to build a bank and several stores.

Tarzia has already performed a perk test on the site, but the board told him he would have to wait until March or April to take a reading of the ground water level. This is because ground water is at its highest level during those months. The board will review Tarzia's case at that time.

Ambulance Oversight Board proposed

The ambulance study committee may recommend to selectmen that an emergency medical services oversight board be formed.

The oversight board will consist of at least three members: a physician, a nurse RN, and an experienced emergency medical technician (EMT).

The oversight board will be responsible for supervising ambulance service in Cohasset.

The ambulance study committee will recommend the oversight board be formed regardless of whether the current Fire Dept. ambulance service is kept or a private service hired.

The first duty of the oversight board will be the establishment of patient care standards.

The board will receive feedback from South Shore hospital regarding the quality and effectiveness of treatment received by patients while en-route to the hospital.

Any complaints about ambulance service or unusual emergencies will be investigated by the oversight board.

The committee also discussed some recommendations which would apply only if public ambulance service were retained.

One recommendation is the purchase of a two-way radio crystal for the ambulance. This would allow direct communication between the ambulance and the hospital. Currently the ambulance communicates with the fire station by radio, and the fire station communicates with the hospital by telephone.

Another recommendation discussed is the installation of 911 emergency telephone service and the hiring of dispatchers. By hiring dispatchers, one policeman and one fireman would be freed for other duty.

Next week on Friday the study committee will make their final decision concerning which recommendations will be included in their final report.

"Give the kid (Winslow) a chance."

At that point in the proceedings, selectmen chairman Mary Jane McArthur called a recess. Board member John DeBassio rushed from the auditorium to the front foyer.

"Come back in or all charges are dismissed," DeBassio warned.

During intense questioning from Atty. Cassis, Winslow explained that he was operating the aerial ladder at the time of the Hull fire. He described in detail how the chief ordered him to "take out or hit the plywood" covering a window on the second floor of the vacant building. Twice the ladder was maneuvered and punched against the wood, but only a small puncture was made into the window, Winslow said.

He told the attorney he did not feel any movement on the truck below when the ladder hit against the boarded window.

A second line of questioning by the attorney centered on whether Winslow actually thought Chief Dooley was endangering lives by sending firefighters up the ladder while it was being utilized as a "water tower." That term means a hose was extended up the length of the ladder to direct a spray onto the fire. During the Nov. 25 blaze, two men, Peter Trask, and David Marks, were ordered at different intervals to stand near the end of the ladder while it was used as a water tower.

Winslow answered he did not feel any lives were in danger. Atty. Cassis then asked if he agreed with Protulis' charge against Chief Dooley that the firefighters were in danger. Winslow answered, "at that time, no." He added he agreed with the charge now, saying men should not have been stationed high on the ladder while fighting a fire in a vacant building.

Firefighter David Marks was next to testify. A call fireman for ten years, Marks remained adamant that it was too dangerous to place men on top of the ladder, to about 35 feet above the ground, while the wind gusted to about 40 m.p.h., he estimated.

Marks said he would refuse a similar order in the future, and added he would "never get up there again."

During his training with the newly-purchased ladder truck in 1978, Marks stated the previous fire chief said men should never be sent up a ladder during a water tower.

When asked why safety steps are constructed at the end of the ladder for firefighting, Marks said he did not know the reason. And when shown a photo in the latest edition of Fire House magazine showing two firefighters atop a water tower extinguishing a blaze in a vacant building, Marks answered, "if he orders me (to get atop the ladder) I would not go. I would not go up there again, regardless of the wind."

The attorney also noted that two Hingham firefighters had been placed upon a water tower set up with a ladder truck during the same blaze.

The hearing was resumed to 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 13 in Town Hall.

Following Tuesday night's session, union president Protulis said his membership had not agreed to the guidelines established for the hearing. He said he received a call Monday night from selectman McArthur, informing him that an attorney would be present for the defendant (Dooley), but that no attorney would be necessary for the persons called as witnesses, including the firefighters. He said he intended to have an attorney for the union during Monday night's open hearing.

Cohasset's Christopher Kyricos is an inventor

By Judy Gilman

How often do you look at a light fixture and wonder, 'Who had the original idea for that and how?' Or consider the lines of an automobile or a surfboard. Why is a glass made in a particular shape and of a particular thickness of glass or plastic?

Christopher Kyricos of Cohasset thinks about things like that every day. 'Designer' seems too simple a term to describe the problems and solutions he mulls over; 'inventor,' on the other hand, conjures up images of Rube Goldberg devices and endless lines waiting in the patent office.

What Kyricos, whose office is in Hingham, does, is a combination of both of those pictures. As a consultant to industries, he may be asked to come in with a bright idea to straighten out the boggles in an assembly line or a molding operation whose products aren't working properly. At the other end of the spectrum, he's worked on devices that enable people with artificial limbs to be able to actually feel what they're handling.

He's had a varied background, including a sociology degree from UMass-Amherst, lecturing at MIT, and working with the state Department of Mental Health. The last included designing devices to help patients modify their behavior through a non-restrictive form of training--wearing a device, for instance, programmed to tell the patient, by means of a beep, when his head is in line with his spine. Rather than wearing a static brace, this sort of device rewards the wearer and allows him to work at his own rate on improving his condition.

Christopher Kyricos

That area, of biomedicine and bioengineering, is one of Kyricos' favorite areas, but one he labels "high risk." The more common sort of consulting job, taking a look at a product that is giving trouble in either production or out in the field, is the bread and butter of the field.

"When you look at a particular product and try to figure out what's wrong with it, how it can be changed to be improved, it's like playing with Legos in your head," Kyricos said. "Perhaps a different shape would work better. How about a different material? What are the particular stresses and needs of this product? What elements can be tinkered with and what has to remain the same?"

Once the problem has been considered and the mental Legos have been moved around and rearranged, then it's often time to turn to the drawing board or to the test lab. "But people tend to rely too heavily on labs, testing a whole range of materials rather than narrowing down the viable choice in the beginning," Kyricos said.

But while the rest of us are churning along in our daily lives, taking products pretty much as we find them, Kyricos is constantly saying, "What if...?"

By now, most travelers are aware of the benefits of charter flights in monetary savings and the choice of popular destinations. However, not all charters are equal and the traveler should book through a travel agent. It is in the agent's interest to see that the customer is satisfied. Most agents spend a fair amount of time researching charter operators. As a result, the chances are that he/she will know who is reliable. Since all travel agents work on commission, the traveler will not save any money by making his own arrangments. In fact, he stands to lose a vacation's worth of relaxation. Today, the CAB requires that all charter operators file dates and destinations, bonding agreements and evidence of escrow accounts for passenger refunds.

$1,000 of construction.

Estimating the increased revenue based on a $100,000 commercial building, Dennis said the total cost of a building permit would rise from $307 to $505.

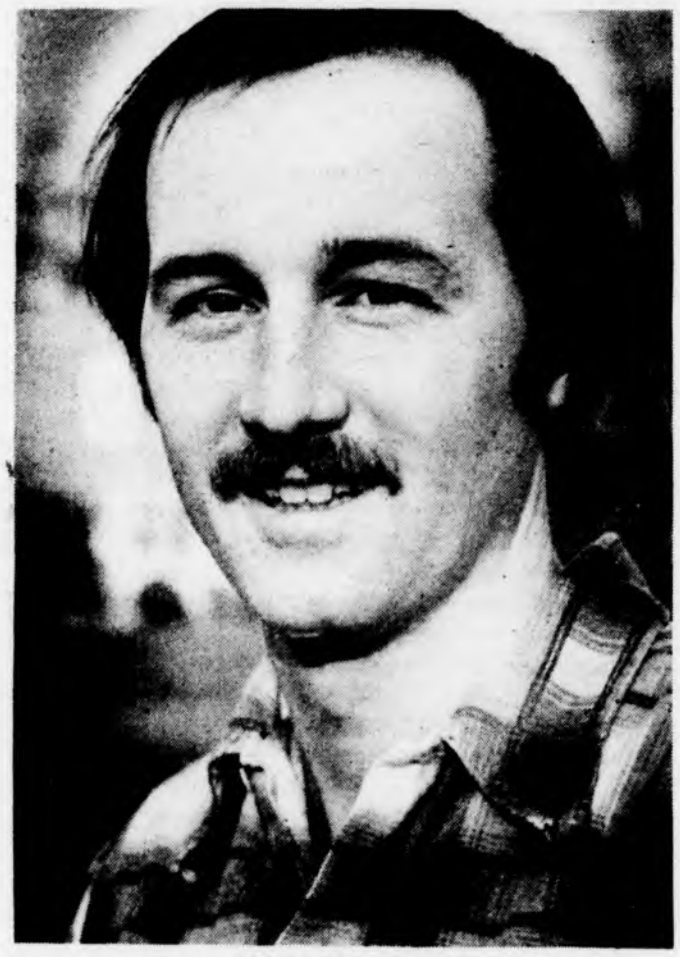
Selectmen agreed with Dennis's request that permit costs be doubled if he finds construction work is completed without the necessary permits. He singled out roofers, although there are many contractors who fail to obtain permits.

Dennis said they work quickly and leave the job site without paying the town. He hopes doubling the fees will serve as a deterrent.

The board also allowed Dennis to charge $10 for every visit he makes to a construction site to reinspect work. He complained builders frequently request his appearance at a site and the work has yet to be correctly completed.

The gas inspection fee was raised last week from $10 to $12 for the first fixture inspected. Each additional fixture will cost $6.

Another reoccurring problem is anyone who constructs a home addition or remodels isn't reporting it.



Dennis added anyone who reshingles, resides, changes window sizes, or adds rooms, dormers, garages, or remodels the interior, builds a fence or flagpole, builds a swimming pool, driveway or buys a woodstove should report it to the building inspector.

Dennis also wants a new signoff system for final occupancy permits. The final paperwork should be submitted to Dennis at least 14 days prior to the granting of the final permit.

The work must be approved by the Board of Health, Fire Dept. and Planning Board, if the projects warrants these departments' attention.

For any kind of building permit, addition or major alteration, the application will take two weeks to a month to receive a permit. A permit to reshingle or to build a fence may be issued the day the permit is filed.

Dennis said it is important for town departments to communicate. "We had a problem in the past that there was no internal communication between the boards. No one knew."

Developers who are filing a major addition or subdivision must file three sets of plans which must show existing structures, driveways, turnarounds, water lines and septic systems.

One set of plans will be kept on file by Dennis, another will be stored by the Fire Dept. and another will be returned to the owner or contractor with a stamp of approval.

Plot plans must accompany deck and fence plans. Any plan which has a structure over 3,200 feet must have an engineering stamp.

Contractors must have wooden forms certified before pouring cement. Dennis has found foundation elevations different from the plans and certifying the foundation forms will alleviate this problem.

For new homes, before a final occupancy permit is approved, a driveway must be constructed of metacomb, crushed stone or hardtopped. Dennis said this is to protect future homeowners and to avoid drainage problems.

In addition, new homes must display house numbers so in case of emergency, the Fire Dept. will be able to locate the home.

All plumbing and electrical work must be completed for a new house. No one will be allowed to move in without the proper inspections.

Anyone applying for a permit must be licensed or the homeowner must sign the permit application. Any building permit requiring the Board of Health approval should submit the plans to the Health Board office first.

Building Boom

Since Dennis first assumed his position in October of 1982, Cohasset, he said, has "really come into a heavy building period."

This building includes new construction, remodeling, additions, new homes, subdivision and foundation pouring. The best lots, he said, are taken and whats's left is irregular, has ledge, needs blasting, is damp or needs Appeals Board or Conservation Commission approval.

Overall, the public has been receptive to his enforcement of the rules. Dennis advises builders come to see him first before beginning construction.

"My first priority is to enforce the rules fairly and make sure construction is done properly to protect the homeowner," he said.

Dennis said the increased workload necessitates the need for a full-time secretary and a town owned car. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said Dennis needs a secretary for a maximum of 25 hours.

For the calendar year Dennis figures he traveled 12,000 miles as building inspector in his own car.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two-stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Alternate van service proposed

By Jane Lane

A proposal to continue a vanpool service through Scituate, Cohasset, and Hingham into Boston has received rave reviews from its participants, but has raised the ire of a competitive bus company.

Hugh Drummond, a Boston insurance executive, initiated a caravan-type vanpool service from Scituate last summer. He currently owns and operates nine commuter vans, with one originating in Scituate, traveling through Cohasset and Hingham, and into Boston.

But three months ago, a protest by the Plymouth and Brockton Bus Co. to the state Department of Public Utilities and the MBTA somewhat stalled the service.

Until Drummond's vans pass state safety inspections, and his nine drivers meet all state requirements, he will be unable to operate the vanpool as a profit-making business.

Until he receives all necessary approvals and permits, Drummond will allow his fifteen riders from Scituate, Cohasset, and Hingham to board the bus to Boston with a minimal charge for gas and expenses.

He received approval from Scituate selectmen Tuesday night.

Prior to the Plymouth and Brockton protest, Drummond had been charging the 135 riders from throughout the South Shore $16 per week for the commute, while the bus company charges $26 for the same destination.

Drummond appeared before Cohasset selectmen last week with his attorney Jay Lupica, to request permission to drive the van through Cohasset and to pick up two passengers on Ripley Road. He must follow this same procedure in all towns in which the van travels.

In the meantime, the Halifax resident is awaiting approval from the DPU and MBTA to reinstate the pay commuter service through several South Shore communities into Boston.

John McDonough, director of operations for Plymouth and Brockton Bus. Co., objected strongly last week to the Cohasset van service. "We're (P and B) here, and we're capable of taking everyone into Boston," he told Cohasset selectmen.

"We're working very closely with the state Office of Transportation to create additional routes throughout the South Shore during the expressway reconstruction."

He reasoned that since this is Drummond's part-time occupation, it would not be correct for the Town of Cohasset to allow direct competition to the state-approved bus service. He also noted that Drummond's nine vans do not meet state safety requirements and his drivers are not state-approved.

Atty. Lupica argued the vanpool and its continued success has proved that "innovation is necessary in such situations." He also added that it was a matter of time before the state grants the go-ahead for the vanpool.

Cohasset selectmen's concern revolved around whether, as a direct success of the vanpool, there would eventually be an increase in the number of vans entering the town on a daily basis. "Will one van eventually turn into 10?" questioned Clifford Mitman. "If that's the case, maybe we ought to specify they stop on Route 3A, rather than on (residential) Ripley Road."

Executive secretary Mark Lanza noted Police Chief Joseph Kealey has reported no safety problems associated with the present van route. He has also never received any complaints about van service or the route it travels.

Cohasset selectmen will wait until Lanza checks with the state regarding the van's inspection status before they make a decision whether to approve the route. As attorney Lupica noted, if the vans are not approved by the state, the subsequent approval by each municipality is mute.

Currently the vans travel through the towns of Pembroke, Hanover, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Randolph. Drummond said he and his attorney hope to meet with all selectmen by mid-February. He should know by that time whether the vans and drivers have passed state safety inspections.

According to the Halifax resident, the vanpool formed four years ago as an alternative to the daily commute by car to Boston. Primarily through word of mouth, many employees of the Boston insurance firm where he works expressed an interest in riding the van. Many employees of a neighboring insurance company heard about the vans and contacted him, Drummond said.

In Scituate, the van is driven by Bob Abell of 21 Marilyn Road.

The van leaves Scituate at 6:50 a.m. and returns at 5:40 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Sewer public meeting

Thursday, Feb. 16, the Sewer Commission and the Citizens Sewer Advisory Committee, Chartis Langmaid, Chairman, will sponsor a Public Meeting at the Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.

The town's engineer for the Supplementary Waste Water Facilities plan, Ward Engineering Associates, will give a progress report.

Preliminary data will be provided concerning the resident's questionaire returns and the results of on site surveys.

This information will indicate those areas of Cohasset where on site solutions will be more cost effective and those areas of the town where extended sewer service will be more cost effective.

In addition, the most promising alternative plans will be summarized, and preliminary cost information will be presented.

All citizens are urged to attend so the Citizens Advisory Committee and the Board of Sewer Commissioners may leave the benefit of their comments, suggestions and criticisms.

Ample time will be allowed for questions and answers.

around town

☐If you want to talk about a grandfather who is going around town preening like a peacock, be sure to take a look at Ed Tower! Ed's grandson, Jim Campbell, is a Worcester resident, and is a defenseman on the Worcester Crusaders. In the Squirt Wrap-up newsletter, Jim was praised for his ability for "his freewheeling offensive style of play that makes him capable of leading the Crusaders past any opponent on any given day." Jim's ability must come in part from his father's athletic prowess. Jim, Sr., was a great football star for Cohasset High School. His Mom is Eleanor Tower.

☐Stephanie Martin called last week to let all young mothers know about her new idea. It seems that Stephanie has started a play group and/or Mother's support group. It is a great way to meet other mothers, as well as finding a playmate for their youngsters. New residents should benefit nicely too. She also wants to start a babysitting co-op. Stephanie has a lot of nifty ideas and would love any of you moms to give her a call at 383-9864 for further information.

☐Two 1983 Cohasset High grads have made the Dean's List at their colleges: Beth Ann Cogill, daughter of Brian and Joanne Cogill of Church Street, earned the privilege of being on the Dean's List at Fisher Jr. College for the first term; and, Brenda Kehoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kehoe of Bayberry Lane, made the honors at Johnson and Wales College, where she is majoring in travel and tourism.

☐If the weather had not been so horrible, it's a sure thing that Summer Street would have been decked out in pink a few weeks ago. That is when Debbie (Shadd) and Bill Grimm welcomed their daughter, Katharine Marie Grimm. Katharine was born Jan. 19 at South Shore Hospital.

☐Torin Sweeney and Doug Bell, both CHS grads, are back on the wrestling circuit, but this time they are opposing coaches. Doug coaches the Hingham High Squad, and Torin our own Skippers. They will use their abilities against one another Friday night in the big gym at 6 p.m., where there is to be a tri-meet. Xaverian is the third school competing...should be a real "battle" to watch, and there is no admission fee, so be sure that you don't miss it!

In the "Lincoln's Birthday Parade" at the Osgood Kindergarten are Joel Puorro carrying the flag and Megan Fahey beating the drum.

☐Bob Pape is a patient at Mass. General and it is a safe bet that he is an extremely unique one. He checked himself out for one day, to come home and plow for the day, and then returned to his patient status.

☐Another Cohasset grad makes a name for himself...Ed Sorrentino is a member of the group that is appearing at Hugo's, and everyone enjoys his music. He has just the right blend of fast and slow, old and new, and appears every weekend. Be sure to catch his act.

☐Best wishes to Joe Becker, who is a patient at South Shore Hospital, and recovering splendidly. Hope you are home very soon, Joe.

☐Had a nice chat with Dick Ainslie recently, who reports that his new job is a good one but that he still misses working for the Cohasset schools. The schools miss him, too!

☐Local residents were named to the dean's list for scholastic achivement during the first semester at Wentworth Institute of Technology. The localites include Kyle Jacobs, 120 Kent St., Electronic Maintenance Technology, and William Spear, 36 Hawley Rd., Architectural Technology.

☐The challenge that the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced is a good one. They want residents to draw their logo, and there is no design limitation. The prize is $100 worth of merchandise, a good incentive...be inventive, then see if you have won March 14.

☐It will seem funny to have Bergson's Ice Cream shop on the other side of the street. They will be able to serve twice as many people.

☐The students in Grades 7-9 will be able to celebrate Valentine's Day with a dance to be held at the Town Hall Friday, Feb. 10. The dance is to be put on by the PSO, a hard-working group that is out to make things better for our students.

☐Two members of the Class of 1959 are "among the missing;" that is, no one seems to know their whereabouts. If you can give any information about Sandra Hitt or John Hathaway, please call Clark Chatterton, 383-0560.

☐Please call with your news items. That is what makes "Around Town" a success.

Drainage Advisory report

4 WOODLAND DRIVE

An inspection was made in December/Sections of pipe along Woodland Drive have been replaced periodically. Neighbors question if the last section was ever replaced. The 20-inch pipe running between two properties perhaps has been clogged because a willow tree planted above it may have infiltrated the pipe.

Harold Litchfield told the neighbors, according to them, that he would remove that pipe from the ground until it could be replaced. Walter Ross will discuss this area with Harold Litchfield. We could make no determination at this time without Harold's input.

SELECTMEN

Selectmen wish to have us draw up regulations for drainage in town. they discussed strengthening our charge. We are to formulate and meet with Selectmen.

They will handle putting the regulations into legal language.

We discussed with them having Robert Dennis advise us when potential drainage problems present themselves to him in the course of his work. They will so advise him.

We also reminded the Selectmen that we can advise action on drainage matters, but their office communicates officially with the landowner. This is the procedure, we believe.

BOARD OF APPEALS

The matters before the Board that evening were a garage conversion to a guest house on Atlantic Ave., a junk car business being conducted on North Main Street, Cedarledge Condominium Development's septic system relative to the flood plain. It would be wise to look at the North Main Street location. We have previously reviewed the Cedar Street landfill and Cedarledge Condominiums relative to drainage.

Community Center registrations

The Cohasset Community Center is accepting registrations this week for a new course, "Creative Movement," scheduled for Saturday mornings, from 10 to 11 a.m.

This program is designed to be an enjoyable way for children three to five years old to begin dance movements and experience the idea of rhythm and balance.

Older children, up th 10 years old, can enroll in "Classical Ballet." This course is offered Wednesday evening, from 6 to 7 p.m., and is designed to teach the discipline and grace of the classical dancer.

Registrations are still welcome in the Pre-natal exercise class Monday and Wednesday evenings. This course emphasizes the muscles of the abdomen and back, which are important for a comfortable pregnancy and delivery."

"Aerobic Dance," with Joanne Wido Lehr, begins the week of Feb. 14, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Sign up for this excellent cardiovascular fitness program. Both men and women are encouraged to join the class and learn the vigorous workouts.

Laila Roukonakis offers a six week workshop, beginning Thursday, Feb. 16, from noon to 2 p.m. She will show you how to create one of those beautiful and warm Icelandic Sweaters. The sweaters will be ready to wear at the end of the course.

Sign-ups are now being accepted for "Stenciling," with Nancy Clapp. This four week workshop is available either on Tuesday evenings or Thursday mornings, beginning March 6 and 8. Learn this unique and personalized decorating technique in time for Spring redecorating.

"Not Just Spaghetti," a cooking workshop to prepare and indulge in homemade pasta, has been rescheduled to March 13, Tuesday evening, form 7 to 9 p.m. Join Ann Abbruzzese and Carol Walls in an epicurean evening which should be fun and educational.

All classes must be pre-registered; call the Center at 383-0088 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to register and for further class information.

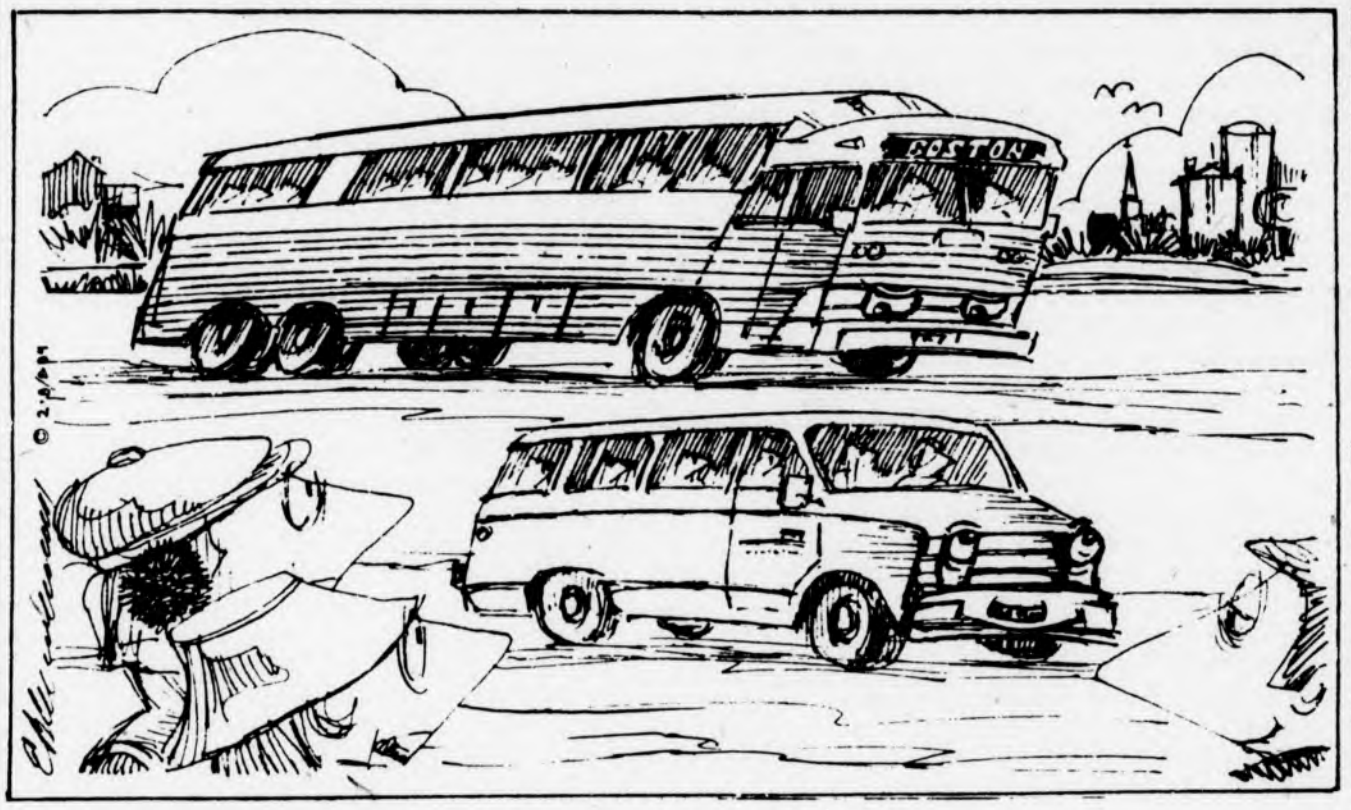
Another spending look

It's true listening to every school department request for money taking into consideration a tight money purse is tough for school committee members.

It's also hard when you agree 28 or 29 Kindergarten or Grade 1 students is too much and therefore, another teacher is needed.

But we don't agree with an argument by School Supt Eugene Crowell that the department should get more money because the percentage of taxpayers dollars going toward the School Dept. has declined steadily in the last three years.

Three years ago, 58.3 percent of the tax dollar was spent on the School Dept. and two years ago, 53.8 percent was spent on the schools. For the next fiscal year, 48 percent is slated for the School Dept.



A steady argument in the quality of education is directly correlated with spending. We don't agree.

If one listens to the SAT and Achievement scores reported by school administrators this year and also listens towhere Cohasset students are accepted to school, the argument of quality versus spending isn't valid.

A recent article in the Boston Sunday Globe about New Hampshire students, the level of spending and SAT scores, also supports our theory.

Money, money and more money isn't always the answer. More often it is how we spend our money that tells the story.

Cable license postponed

Selectmen were expected to sign the 15-year final cable television license with American Cablesystems Inc. at their meeting Wednesday night.

During last week's meeting, officials from the Massachusetts firm were ready and anxious to settle the matter, but a couple of questions by the board delayed any definitive action.

A few technicalities within the contract will be ironed out by Wednesday night, selectmen expected.

In the meantime, General Manager Stephen Farquhar said cable should reach Cohasset in three months.

Within six months, the entire town will be wired and capable of handling the cable system, he said. The area west of Main Street will be wired and have access to the system within three months. The remaining portion of town will be cable-ready in six months, he said.

Trials of baking a healthy cake

By Claire McDonough

Breida reached into the grocery bag and pulled out a package of cake mix.

"You can't feed us that," she gasped. "It's full of EDB."

"So what's wrong with edible dietetic baking powder?" I asked.

"Motherrr. Don't you realize that EDB is a pesticide and it's been known to be harmful to laboratory animals even in small doses?"

"No problem," I assured her. "I know it takes longer, and I don't have a lot of time, but I can go back to making cakes from scratch."

"That's what you think. Most flour contains EDB too."

I sighed. "O.K. we won't have a cake for Daddy's birthday. He's not supposed to eat anything with sugar in it anyway, and we have some diet carrot cake in the freezer. We'll just put a candle in that."

"Right," Skipper interjected. "But what do you suppose they used for flour in the carrot cake?"

"There must be something," I moaned. "After all, if they're still selling the stuff it can't be too bad. Wouldn't the government make them take it off the market if it was harmful?"

Patrick pointed to an item in the newspaper.

"Nope. It says here that it would be disastrous to the economy if they removed the products from the shelves. If we just continue to buy it at our present rate, we'll use it all up in five years and they won't make any more. They say you have to eat it all your lives for it to do you any harm."

"Great," Larry said. "Only we have been eating it all our lives. Five more years and we're in deep trouble."

"I understand dog food has to be fit for human consumption," Skipper suggested. "How about sticking a candle in a can of Calo?"

"Very funny," Maureen told him. "Ma, have you considered planting a garden?"

"Great idea," I agreed, "but we might have trouble harvesting and milling the wheat in time to make a cake for your father's birthday party today."

They looked at each other glumly. "I suppose molded mashed potato is out?" Breida suggested.

"You know, remember how that guy in 'Close Encounters of the Third Kind' sculptured a mountain out of his mashed potatoes? Could we make a birthday cake...I suppose not," she trailed off.

"Here's a thought," Larry offered. "By the time the contaminated grain gets eaten by a cow and processed through her system and made into milk it's probably pretty well diluted. We could cover dietetic ice cream with lots of tinted whipped cream. It would look like a cake, Daddy would like it, and we could put candles in it."

"It might work," I agreed, "as long as we stay away from any red dye whatever it is. I hope he appreciates all the trouble we're going to for the sake of his health. What's he doing now, anyway?"

"Sitting at his desk," Breida reported, "smoking a cigarette."

Bring back the trains

To the Editor:

On any given day I can go from my house on S. Main St. Cohasset to Boston by car, providing my car is working and the roads permit.

However, if I want to go by Commuter Boat to Rowe's Wharf near South Station, there is a limit on the times I can go—they've knocked off the mid-day runs and sometimes there are problems that prevent them from going at all.

Then there is the P & B option (Plymouth & Brockton Bus) which would perhaps be the most appealing as it stops so close to my door.

They often change their schedules, sometimes three times in a year, so you can wait for a 9:25 bus and find that it left at 9:10 a.m.

Also they take forever and a day, stopping all along the route and just wait til March!

The fares have gone up so that it's almost as expensive to go by bus as by commuter boat.

Then there is the matter of waiting in the rain or in 10 degree weather with children in tow.

Letters

Unless you have a ride down town to the bus shack you will be wet or cold or both.

The subway would be an option if there were parking. Often there is none and let's face it, who wants to walk back to your car at 11 p.m. in a lonely parking lot or a side street in Quincy?

You can park in Hingham and take a bus but unless you live in Hingham that's more than an hour getting there because of the three laps to the trip.

Why is there not a train?

Why did those planners vote in the MBTA while voting out the trains? As I understand it people who live near rail lines do not want to see trains passing over the old beds near their homes because of the noise and coal dust. Isn't there some other way of restoring trains?

Everyone knowledgable about these things tells me

Murray's Memos

FROM THE STATE HOUSE

By Mary Jeanette Murray

TWO VASTLY DIFFERENT MESSAGES

Recently our national and state leaders gave their constituencies two vastly different messages.

On the national front we were told of an "America that was back, standing tall." President Reagan's State of the Union message provided us with guidance for a strong, prosperous and peaceful 1980's.

The picture wasn't as rosy stateside.Governor Dukakis dealt the citizens of the Commonwealth with a massive $8.2 Billion state budget proposal for Fiscal Year 1985, a full $825 Million more than last year's. The Governor said this budget, and its 10.5 percent increase in spending, was "an investment in the future," implying that we are in trouble now.

THE PRESIDENT

In his third State of the Union address, the President recounted the nation's strong recovery and his sincere prospects for worldwide peace. He set a course for a strong tomorrow with the Four Great Goals of: steady economic growth, developing America's next frontier, strengthening our traditional values and building a meaningful peace.

Optimistic chords ran througout the President's Address. As he said, the heart of America is good, strong and true. I look forward to the continued good fortune of this great country under the leadership of President Reagan.

THE GOVERNOR

The Governor has classifed his massive budget as the best offering ever submitted. Instead, it is one whopping budget predicated on the thought that more government is better. This is supposed to be a maintenance budget, not a budget to hire an additional 1500 new employees. The budget's rise in administrative costs is a mechanism by the Governor to spend more money and employ more people—especially those who are members of his much vaunted coalitions.

Furthermore, the budget is way out of line with national trends. The Dukakis budget increase is three times more than 3.8 percent rate of inflation. How can the Governor substantiate a double-digit spending increase in the budget when the inflation rate is so low?

Given the size of the spending increase, there is the likelihood of substantial changes in the House and Senate versions of the budget. More about the state budget in later weeks.

SOUTHEAST EXPRESSWAY

With March closing in quickly and the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway set to begin, we are offering a brochure by the Department of Public Works to help ease the adjustment period. Entitled, "The Southeast Expressway Reconstruction Project," the brochure describes improvements made to the various alternative routes to the Southeast Expressway and discuss the "what," "why" and "how" of the reconstruction.

If you would like a copy, please call my office at 722-2400 or write Room 134, State House, Boston, Mass. 02133.

SAFE DRIVER INSURANCE PLAN

If the current car insurance rating system didn't confuse you enough, a new auto insurance reform law has been implemented for Bay State drivers An important part of the new law is the Safe Driving Insurance Plan. Basically, the plan penalizes unsafe drivers who demonstrate an unsafe driving record and credits safe drivers who have neither moving violations nor at-fault accidents. It is based on a "point" system.

Here are the plan's specifics:

UNSAFE DRIVERS: Drivers who are found to be at fault in major and minor accidents, convicted of moving violations, or who in the future submit more than four comprehensive claims totalling $2,000 in a three year period will be assessed unsafe driver points which will increase the cost of their auto insurance.

SAFE DRIVERS: Drivers who are free from all incidents for a three year period will receive a safe driver credit.

DOLLAR VALUE OR POINTS AND SAFE DRIVER CREDITS: The first three points will be $50 each. All points above this will be $75 each. The amount of the credits received by the two-thirds of all Massachusetts drivers who had a clean record in the past three years will range from $24 to $40 in 1984 - $4 to $20 more than was awarded to safe drivers in 1983 under the new defunct Merit Rating System.

Since credits are a percentage of the property damage liability (PDL) premium, they vary, depending on PDL rates in each territory. This means that Boston drivers, who pay the highest rates already, will get the largest credits ($40) and rural drivers who pay lower rates will get smaller credits.

HOW THE POINTS ARE ASSESSED: The number of points assessed will depend on the nature and seriousness of the incident. In all cases except the four major moving violations described below, points assessed to a driver will be reduced at the rate of one per year, provided that the driver has no new moving violations or at-fault accidents in that year. For example:

Trains . . .

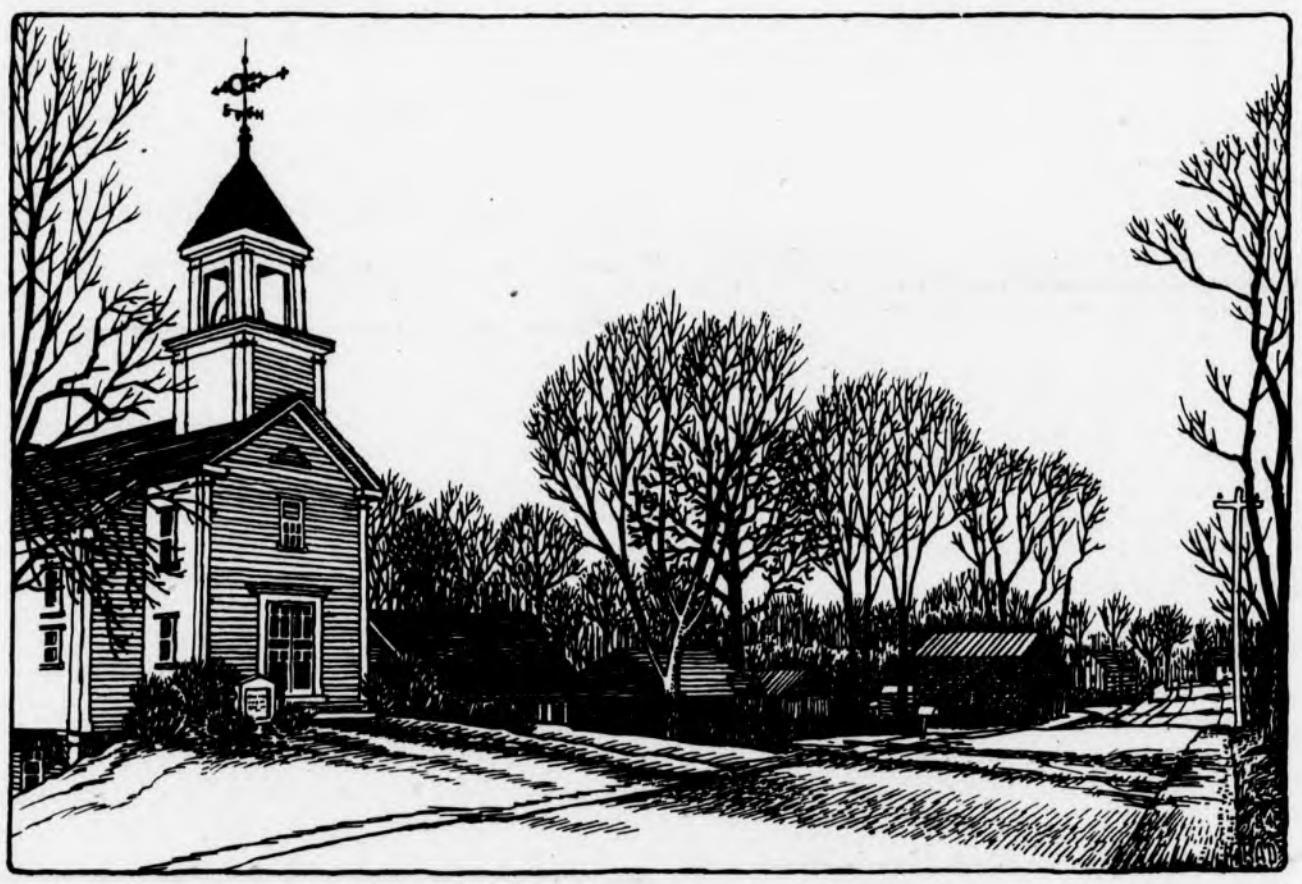
that it just isn't "feasible." Well if they have to commute every day starting in March, let's see how feasible it really is. I'm no scientist or engineer but I know that almost anything can be done if you really want to do it.

Where are the engineers and scientific minds on this issue? How hard is it to construct tracks and put on some kind of trains that do not pollute or make noise?

More importantly where are the politicians and of paramount importance, where is the voice of the people on this issue?

Why doesn't someone get a petition going and see how many people would like to see trains to Cohasset?



Of course, one should wait til everyone has been suffering a while when they begin the construction on Rt. 3.

Just think of it, 1987 or 1988 (would we have to wait any longer), about the time I get that ideal job in Boston that I've been commuting to school for all this time, we could board the train by the Town Parking lot and settle back for a 30 to 40 minute ride to So. Station, with stewardesses offering us libations like the commuter boat does.

Think of all the hours left to spend with our families or in various pursuits we fancy and all the stress we have avoided. So that we may live longer to enjoy our pursuit of happiness.

Long life the Railroads!

Sincerely,
Marylou Clark

from the kitchen

Whether the stock market drops, you lose again in the weekly lottery, or the garage mechanic sends chills down your spine with his latest estimate, one is never too jaded to enjoy Valentine's Day. It's good to know that being sentimental is still in vogue and even the most sophisticated of grown-ups, takes a childish delight in the frilliest, mushiest valentine. So, when it comes to "sweets-to-the-sweets," Dotty Greene's offerings make wonderful nibbles in a heart-shaped box filled with

TOFFEE SQUARES

1 c. margarine
1 c. brown sugar, packed
1 egg yolk
1 tsp. vanilla
2 c. flour
1 pkg. semi-sweet chocolate morsels, melted
1/2 c. chopped nuts

Cream margarine and sugar. Blend in egg yolk and vanilla. Add flour and mix well. Spread in a greased 15½ x 10½ jelly roll pan. Bake at 350 for 15 to 20 min. Remove from oven and spread immediately with melted chocolate. Sprinkle with nuts. Cool and cut into 24 squares.

"Simplify, simplify" was how Thoreau coped with life at Walden Pond, far less complex than today. When he lived in solitary existence, he was far from today's steady barrage of ads designed to create severe guilt pangs should we forget Valentine's Day next Wednesday. It takes on all the air of a mini-Christmas when we are urged to remember our sweetheart with sexy leotards, flying lessons, a weekend at a country inn, cassettes and tapes, or a dozen long stemmed roses which are advertised in New York for one hundred dollars a dozen! Hopefully, your Valentine will settle for red candles and napkins and a dessert topped with bright red strawberries such as Janet Christensen's

STRAWBERRY WHIPPED CREAM PIE

2 pts. fresh strawberries, or frozen berries
2 c. sweetened whipped cream, or dessert topping
9" baked pie shell
2 or 3T honey
Slivered toasted almonds

Slice one pint of berries and fold into whipped cream. Turn into pie shell and spread evenly. Decorate top with halved, remaining berries and arrange, cut side down. Drizzle honey over fresh berries, if desired and sprinkle with almonds.

If nothing else, February was made for partying. For those who delight in snow weekends, there's a steady exodus of ski-topped cars headed north on Fridays. If you're invited for a weekend and are helping out with the food, Sally Carr's nibbles should calm a few hunger pangs and go like this:

BAKED CHEESE PUFFS

Trim crusts from a 1-pound loaf of unsliced white bread and cut the loaf into 1" cubes. In a heavy saucepan combine 1 stick (1/2 c.) butter and 3 oz. cream cheese, both softened, 1/4 pd. sharp Cheddar cheese, grated, 1/4 tsp. dry mustard and cayenne and salt to taste. Heat the mixture over low heat, stirring until cheese is just melted and ingredients are well combined. Transfer the mixture to a bowl and fold in 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten. Dip bread cubes into cheese mixture to coat them, letting the excess drip back into the bowl and put them on buttered baking sheets. Chill, loosely covered with foil, overnight. Bake the puffs in a preheated 400 degree oven for 8 to 10 min., or until they are golden. Makes about 70 puffs.

To all our readers: Happy Valentine's Day. To all our new subscribers, a reminder that some snowy day when you are tidying that kitchen drawer where you have been storing those recipes you've been meaning to try, think of sharing them with us.

'41 entry for the Ellsworth Grand Prix

By Lois Martin

It was a '41 Ford called "MaryLo."

We grew up in a succession of Plymouths. But in the mid 1950s my father acquiesced, as so many do, to purchase a little Ford to be used by my sister and me in our pursuit of college money.

Her name is Marilyn, mine Lois, thereby MaryLo, though I lobbied ineffectually for LoieMar. When you're the baby of the family, you gotta know your place. And it's on the tail end, especially in supercilious names of cars.

MaryLo was a two-door coupe. That's probably redundant, but I never got the hang on words for car models.

In the rear of it were two fold-down seats, one of the luxurious options. It wasn't a rumble seat because the extras were inside. A person could scrunch up enough to get in back, put down the little seat holder with its mini cushion and have a unique window seat.

For all her age and faded nobility, MaryLo was entirely serviceable. Oh, little things would go wrong, like the windshield wipers dying during a deluge. But if you reached around and pushed them manually you could get to your destination.

Naturally she shifted. We were brought up on shifting back then, never dreaming the car would do that for us. And it was always a challenge to shift down on a hill.

MaryLo had become familiar to other motorists in Ellsworth, Maine. It certainly couldn't have been viewed as a threat but it was seen as a vehicle that had possibilities of aberrating from normal traffic patterns.

There was that morning I stopped properly at a red light and rolled back, or rather MaryLo did. That was in the process of shifting to start again on green.

Unfortunately, I rolled into the car behind me. I looked in my rear view mirror to see a State Trooper tapping his fingers on his steering wheel. Left with earnest apology as the best of my options, I gave him a little wave in the mirror, revved MaryLo out of her stop and hurtled on through my right turn on green.

The car was given to wheezes if she were not warmed up. And her choking sounds intermittently caught the attention of officers by the roadside who liked a quieter traffic flow in Ellsworth.

It was, of course, only a matter of time before MaryLo and I were beckoned over to the roadside by one of those men with high boots and guns at their sides. He had been attracted (or rather his attention had been) to my car as MaryLo and I, warmed up to the day, headed down the Bar Harbor Road. Incidentally, anyone headed toward me from Bar Harbor would have said he was on the Ellsworth Road, the name is adaptable to one's direction.

Anyway, I lurched snug to the side of the law enforcement person who had signaled he'd like to see me a minute.

Darned if it wasn't the same person into whose vehicle MaryLo had rolled at the traffic light hill a few weeks earlier.

He walked around the car while I tried to see in or on it, what he was seeing. I couldn't, to save my life. There was only to be seen a swell little green car with erratic wipers and a driver who was in tune with those wipers.

He, having circled full 'round my vehicle, stopped in front of me with his gun still in his holster, I noticed. That seemed a hopeful sign.

"Why don't you," he said, "take that car and drive it right out into that field so it's off the road safely!"

I decided he had a wonderful sense of humor, one that I'd share with him as an alternative to assuming a joint put-down for MaryLo and me.

That car was sold when it was no longer needed in our college stage. And that was a loss. Second cars in families have more character than primary ones, not class but character.

Now and then I've seen movies where cars of that vintage are paraded through sets as highlights of authenticity. None of them compares with the likes of MaryLo. And if I'd never had a chance to drive her, I probably wouldn't have known our local law enforcement people on a first name basis.

Skippers clinch tie for title

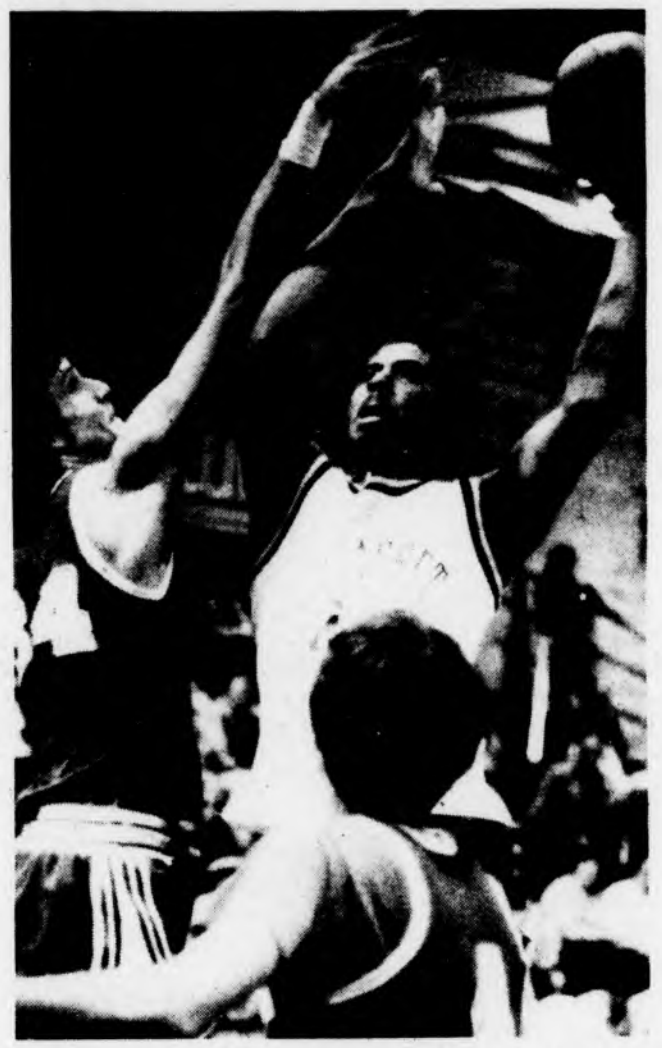
This year's version of the Cohasset Boys Basketball team became the first Skipper team to clinch a tie for a league title.

The honor came Tuesday night as the Skippers won in overtime against Duxbury, 73-66. Coach Ed Minelli said he was especially proud of his team and senior players, Peter Caruso, John O'Connell, Chris Kuhn and Dave Barcomb.

Cohasset was leading by eight points with two minutes to go but according to Minelli, play became ragged.

Dave Barcomb led all scorers with 22 points and ten rebounds. Brian Edwards scored 18 points, James Creed added 16 points and nine blocked shots and an injured Tony Bogarty (sprained ankle) chipped in with 14 points.

Cohasset is now 14-2 and 11-1 in the South Shore League.



In earlier play, Cohasset beat Whitman-Hanson 88-51 and beat Abington 58-46.

Against Whitman-Hanson, Bogarty led the winners with 22 points and Brian Edwards and Floyd Hardwick contributed 12 points each. Bob Shultz netted 11 and Barcomb scored ten points. All twelve players scored and played.

Against Abington, the defense won the game for the Skippers as Dave McDonald held Abington's leading scorer to 0 points and Barcomb held another Abington scorer to five points in the first half.

Minelli said the team didn't play well offensively but Creed had 14 rebounds and five blocked shots and nine points. Bogarty scored 17 points and handed out six assists and Barcomb had 11 points and 12 rebounds.

Saturday, Cohasset will play Norwell at 5 p.m. at the Case Center at Boston University. Admission (including transportation) is $3.

James Creed drives for two points and draws the foul from a Hanover opponent.

Suzuki students learn by using their ears

By Cyndee Moore

Wouldn't it be wonderful if learning to play a musical instrument came as naturally to young children as learning to speak?

For some beginning piano students at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham and at the Duxbury branch, too, this just happens to be the case.

Barbara Lyons of Cohasset, whose nine-year-old daughter Heather began Suzuki piano at the Conservatory this fall, says she and her daughter try for the required two hours of daily listening to the Suzuki tapes.

Since they have busy schedules, they often begin the morning with 10 to 15 minutes of practice at the piano. After-school hours find the two reunited at the piano for the day's remaining practice time.

As is evident, Lyons says, "The hardest thing to it (Suzuki 'parenting') is finding the time."

These students join the many music students around the world who learned to play an instrument by the Suzuki approach.

Under the directon of education philosopher and master violin teacher Dr.Shinichi Suzuki, traditional music interpretation is being replaced or accompanied by the Suzuki method of instruction.

This method postpones traditional note reading until the student has developed aural and instrumental (i.e., digital, posture and technique) skills. Originally used for violin and other stringed instruments, the Suzuki method has expanded to include piano instruction.

Dr. Suzuki insists that everyone has the talent (or ability) to develop musically. If young children can understand and speak their native language as early as the age of three, then absorbing a musical language should be equally natural if music is part of a child's everyday world.

For optimum success, that absorption should take place from birth. Suzuki teachers advocate playing classical music, like Vivaldi and Mozart, repeatedly as part of an infant's background noise. This repeated playing builds the foundation for mastering a musical language like a mother's one-way conversations with her baby forms the basis of the child's native language acquisition.

Listening is the nucleus of the Suzuki concept of instruction. Daily listening to good music and to recordings of the Suzuki repertoire is a practice common to piano students at the Conservatory.

Those parents whose children take Suzuki piano here do not read novels, balance checkbooks, or make out grocery lists while their children become accomplished pianists behind closed doors. Instead, they sit right by their child during each lesson and at-home practices. At lessons, parents take notes, sometimes on the sheet music itself, while the teacher instructs the child. The parent then becomes teacher during home practices.

"It is not the students' fault if they fail, only the parents' and teachers' fault," says Marilyn Smith, one of two Suzuki instructors at the Conservatory. "Parents (of Suzuki students) have the hardest job."

The parent as home-teacher masters the correct playing posture and the beginning steps of playing for each lesson. Creating a supportive and positive learning environment is also the parent's (or, even better, parents') responsibility.

Here are Nicole Van Meter, 5 and instructor Marilyn Smith, learning the piano, Suzuki method.

Unlike students of traditional instruction, who begin their first lesson reading and locating the notes in songs from favorites like the John Thompson Modern Course for the Piano, First Grade Book, Suzuki piano students learn by imitation or the "mother-tongue" method.

In the Suzuki approach, Smith explains, students "hear it, play it, see it;" whereas, in traditional instruction, they "see it, play it, hear it."

Like those who play by ear, beginning Suzuki piano students are not concerned with translating what is on paper to the proper piano key and sound.

Gary Fisher, director of the piano program at the Conservatory, who, incidentally, teaches the tradtional method, says Suzuki students "deal more with the physical and aural aspects of playing." Different from the traditional piano student, who first learns how to use eyes on the printed page, the Suzuki student first develops the ear. These students "involve themselves directly with what music sounds and feels like," Fisher says.

Eventually Suzuki students do learn to read music, as do children who learn to read words they have spoken daily for two or three yeras. Although note reading may not begin until the second book of the seven-book piano repertoire, students learn to note-read at a quick pace if they have mastered playing the variety of notes in the first book.

The result is actually the same. The Suzuki repertoire, which ends with a Mozart sonata in book seven, would prepare any music student for college, Smith says.

Dr. Suzuki seems to promise and even accomplish more than mastery of a musical instrument through his methods.

Our society does not often stress finishing something, explains Smith. However, her students never stop playing when a piece is "pretty;" they continue until the piece is "great."

All pieces in the Suzuki repertoire are meant to be played over and over. At lessons, at home practice, at group lessons, pieces are repeated with variation.

The likely boredom which results from this repetition is offset with musical games. For example, Smith may use a game board and dice with her students. A roll of the dice may have a student playing a piece while holding his breath, while another student may have to play the same piece with his eyes closed.

Lyons has translated Suzuki's theory of education involving repetition to her daughter's schoolwork. Heather, who has a learning disability, chose to learn to play the piano with the Suzuki method because note reading would have been difficult for her.

The success that Heather has experienced since she began her lessons this fall made her mother realize that repetition may help Heather in her schoolwork as well.

Heather now listens to tapes of her spelling words in addition to the Suzuki tapes each day. "Her once poor grades in spelling are now all 100s," Lyons says.

Even given the likely success that a Suzuki student will have, it still takes work. Like traditional instruction, the Suzuki method takes commitment. Yes, as Smith paraphrased Suzuki's educational philosophy, "all students are born with the ability to learn," but the Suzuki method is not fail-proof if a student does not practice

Murray answers a young reporter's questions

"It has nothing to do with that," she said, pointing out that there are 1,532 new jobs in Gov. Michael Dukakis' latest budget.

"Do they know yet how many state workers there are?" the Mariner asked.

"No, I file that bill every year," Murray said. "The number of full time state workers, consultants and part time employes is a mystery due to the way the budget is put together. There are some workers whose money is allocated in more than one place, for instance, so merely counting the number of checks issued doesn't provide the answer."

Corey finished her interview, thanked the representative and asked how she did as an interviewer. The Mariner and the representative gave her high points for organization.

After Corey left, Murray said the majority of her constituents object to the way the state handles human services.

"Too many slip through the cracks," she said.

She's not thrilled with the way the Dukakis administration is doing things. Murray said there is a plan underway to do away with the MDC and replace it with a new department.

"That's like what they were trying to do with counties," Murray said. "If you have an agency in place, you should use it."

She also criticized the Dukakis team for failing to move quickly to get federal funds for a new fleet of commuter boats.

"The money's there in Washington. The Southeast Expressway is ready to be torn up and every time I ask, they say they're going to apply for the money soon."

If Murray had her way, the secretaries would be wiped out.

"It's just one more layer," she said. "The salaries are enormous. You know, the average state employee makes $15,000 a year. Those are the ones they fire."

On the reconstruction of Route 3A, Murray believes something will happen once the Southeast Expressway work is out of the way.

"How they're going to get people in and out of Boston is a grave concern," she said.

On casinos, Murray finds herself sitting with the forces who oppose the idea. The majority of her constituents in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset oppose the bill which she and Sen. Allan R. McKinnon file every year at the request of Hull officials. (McKinnon has also said he opposes the casino bill.)

Murray works seriously against the legislature. There was a while when she brown—bagged her dinner to make sure the bill wasn't slipped through during a late session.

While we were talking, Murray spent a few minutes trying to get a bed for one of her constituents at South Shore Hospital. She thinks the hospital should have gotten the certificate of determination of need, for which they were recently turned down.

"There aren't enough beds," she said.

Among the varied pieces of legislation Murray is backing this year are:

- a bill to provide penalties for fraudulently signing petitions to the legislation;
- the perennial attempt to return control of the clam flats from the state to local communities;
- a requirement that anyone with income over $15,000 a year pay his or her own tuition and transportation to vocational school (now the bill is picked up by the local schools);
- an exclusion to allow lower and middle income people over 70 to avoid paying state income tax;
- a bill to set up public projects as penalties for juvenile offenses and some other minor crimes as a way of relieving pressure on the jails.

"My father, (Nate Hurwitz, who, like his daughter, was both a Cohasset selectman and a state representative) always used to say, you have to make a decision and every time you do, somebody is going to be upset," Murray said. "I make decisions and do the best I can."

Is she thinking about running for Congress against Gerry Studds?

"No, I wouldn't want to go to Washington," she said. "All my friends and family are here."

Indeed, they are. Murray lives in the house on Margin Street that she and her husband, Philip, built after there were married. The harbor is across the street from their living room. Next door, Philip Murray Jr., the oldest of her three children, lives with his family in the house that had been Murray's childhood home.

But back to criticism of the Dukakis administration: Murray thinks the idea of Mass Bank, a new agency proposed to lend money to cities and towns, is a wasteful idea.

"The only reason they're doing it is to give someone a new job," she said. Joseph Driscoll is now head of the Turnpike Authority and Murray thinks he's doing fine there.

There have been rumors flying around for months that McKinnon would get the Turnpike job. When that was pointed out to Murray, she said, "I like Allan. I always have. But creating a new agency . . . "

Valentine's concert

Last year the Senior High Chorus decided that a romantic, "Pops" style concert around Valentine's Day would be a nice change of pace and a lot of fun.

Most of the entertainment will be of the small group or solo variety and the goal is to provide a special, romantic evening for young and old alike at a modest price.

The Dinner Theatre will be held Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Dining Hall.

At the South Shore Art Center

The South Shore Art Center has received partial funding for its February Children's Vacation Drop-in from the Hingham and Cohasset Arts Lottery Councils.

The funding allows the Center to keep the cost to each student down to a minimum.

The Children's Vacation Drop-in, at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, offers a week of daily art activities on a non-structured basis. No pre-enrollment is required.

The program begins Feb. 20 and runs through Feb. 24 from 10:30 a.m. to noon and is geared for children, seven to twelve years old.

Art Center instructors will have a different art activity daily—painting, drawing, printing, clay and sculpture. The teachers are Serena Brundige, Syma, Lisbeth Wyman and Susan Rodgerson.

The vacation drop-in offers kids a chance to experiment with many different forms of art, to possibly learn new skill or to just work on existing artistic skills. The cost is $1 per day per child and includes supplies.

Parents wishing additional information on this or any other Center activity for children, cal l383-9548.

Visions of Spring—a nice thought for the cold winter months—is the South Shore Art Center's annual All New England Juried Show in painting, drawing, pastels, prints, 3-dimensional and mixed media.

Opening in the invitational gallery at the Center on Sunday, Feb. 12 from 5 to 7 p.m., Visions of Spring brings together some of the best work in New England. Awards will be given for Best of Show, the Marion Huse Award, best in each category and the Grumbacher Gold Medallion for Painting.

Prior to the opening, artist Yasuko Yabe will demonstrate her silk painting technique "Roketsu-zome." This is the first of four Sunday at the Center programs and is scheduled for 3 to 5 p.m. in the Center. The other three programs occur the first three Sundays in March.

Yabe's work "Roketsy-zome" is a textile design art made by a wax and dyeing process which she mastered as an apprentice in Kyoto, the center of traditional arts and crafts in Japan. Her works include hand-painting on silk and large scale wall hangings.

As explained by Yabe, modern "roketsu" is common in Japanese daily life in such diverse items as clothing, folding screens, framed pictures, Noren curtains and pillow covers. The process, which combines wax-resist and dye, gives a highly original effect to the material.

The public is invited to view Visions of Spring, which continues through March 8, Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information please call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

CENTER MEMBERSHIP

The South Shore Art Center's gallery selection committee invites professional artists, photographers and fine craftspeople to submit their work for consideration for membership in the Center.

Original work must be delivered to the Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, Friday, Feb. 10 between noon and 4 p.m. The gallery selection jury will then make its selection for membership in the Center. Work must be picked up on Tuesday, Feb. 14, between noon and 4 p.m.

Five works of art must be submitted by those working in painting, drawing or pastel and 10 pieces in photography, sculpture and crafts. Slides are not acceptable for gallery selection.

Artists who are selected for gallery membership are eligible to exhibit one work each month in the Center's gallery and to have five small works in the bins.

Serving on the gallery selection jury for this consideration are:

Jim Ann Howard, a graduate of the University of North Carolina and resident artist at the Kennedy Center, Peabody College, Tennessee. One woman show, Newton Free Library and two-person shows, South Shore Art Center and Helen Schlien Gallery, Boston.

Norman Baer, teacher of illustration, drawing and painting and chairman of the i llustration department, Art Institute of Boston. Exhibited at Jordan Marsh and MacIvor Reddie Gallery, Hingham.

Claffy Williams, watercolorist and abstract stain painter, educational instructor in Egyptian, Classical, American and Asiatic Departments, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Awards from Copley Society, Plymouth Art Association and Cambridge Art Association.

Betty Kohlberg, visiting professor, Mass. College of Art, exhibits extensively in Boston and New York galleries and is represented in major corporate collections. Exhibited recently at the Danforth Museum.

Stan Grossfeld, Boston Globe photographer, winner of many press photography awards, most recently for general news pictures from Boston Press Photographers Association.

Myrna Nathan, sculptor, member of Boston Painters and Sculptors, recently exhibited at the Danforth Museum.

For additional information regarding gallery selection, call the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Attending the St. Anthony's Sweetheart Dance held last weekend at Cohasset-By the Sea were Rene and Maria Rancourt, Father John Keohane and Kathy and Dan Bonetzky.

Suzuki method uses the ears

and listen to the recordings daily.

Smith says this method is not just for kids, either. If an adult has had no training in note reading, the Suzuki piano would be a suitable way to begin instruction. Though she has never taught an adult Suzuki piano, she did teach a 14-year-old boy with the method. She feels, however, that the best age for the Suzuki method is six to seven. But children under three could be successful students, especially if they have heard an older sibling play the songs from the repertoire.

An added benefit to the Suzuki method is the bond that often grows between the parent and the child who are sharing this intimate form of piano instruction. Smith says many relationships have changed between parent and child through the Suzuki technique.

Through the course of instruction, parents who are initially quick to criticize learn patience. They learn to correct their child's mistakes by repeating the correct notes over and over until the child is playing those correct notes. Parents are also forced to learn patience by virtue of the method's non-competitive philosophy. Students learn at their own pace—no matter how long that may take.

When asked if she would have her own children learn piano through the Suzuki method, Smith responded with a definite "Absolutely."

'Forty Carats' is set for Friday, March 2

Cohasset's Town Hall stage will be the setting of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's presentation of the popular two-act comedy "Forty Carats."

Originally written in french by the team of Barilet & Grady, who also gave the theater world the smash hit "Cactus Flower," this comedy originally was called "Quarante Carats," on the Paris stage.

Adapted for American theater-goers by Jay Presson Allen, the author of the classic "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," "Forty Carats" premiered in New York Dec. 28, 1968, and ran for 780 performances at the famous old Morosco Theater.

That production was produced by the eminent David Merrick and featured Julie Harris and Glenda Farrell.

The theme of "Forty Carats" is Age, and the question posed is; what happens when an unmarried lady of forty years finds her true love to be a 22-year old lad.

That's the problem faced by Ann Stanley, the play's central character.

Along the way, one of the other characters remarks, when it comes to a question of age, "think like a diamond; not years, carats."

"Forty Carats" treats with sparkling humor the working out of the generation gap in this particular case, and portrays the often humorous incidents that occur between Ann herself and her circle of family and friends. Actress Jan Higbee plays Ann Stanley.

Ann is returning to the Cohasset Dramatic Club for the first time in several years, having previously been seen at the Town Hall in performances of "Play It Again, Sam" and "The Pleasure of His Company."

A graduate of Middlebury College, she has been a member of the Dartmouth Players Repertory Company and has been active in theater in the U.S. Virgin Islands. Ann's suitor, the young Peter Latham, is played by Ed Lappen, a newcomer to the Cohasset Club.

He studied the theater arts at Holy Cross, and Ed's stage credits include "Anything Goes" and "Turn back the Clock."

Playing Maud will be Alice Daunt, a Cohasset stage veteran who has appeared in "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Chamber Music," "Picnic" and "The Matchmaker," among others, and has worked for the Eire Society and the Brattle Theatre.

John Kuhn, portraying the character Billy Boylan, was seen recently in the Dramatic Club's production of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and returns to play Ann's gregarious ex-husband in "Forty Carats."

Jim McLeod-Warrick, another newcomer to the Cohasset Club, plays the visitor Eddie. His stage career includes roles in "As You Like It" and "Taming of the Shrew," for the Elizabethan Companie of Hingham.

Peter Tolman, appearing as Mr. Latham, frequently works behind the scenes for the Cohasset Club, and has appeared in numerous shows at the Town Hall, including the hilarious "Sly Fox."

Jacqui Fahey, playing the teen-age Trina, is active in Cohasset High School dramatics, and appeared in the Club's production of "Strange Bedfellows."

Peg Maeder, another Cohasset actress, has been seen in several local shows and plays Mrs. Margolin.

The cast of "Forty Carats" is rounded out by newcomers Alice King, Aliceman Kreeb and David Sweeney, as Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Latham, and Pat the golfer, repectively.

Playdates for "Forty Carats" are Friday, March 2 and Saturday March 3 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 4 at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $4, available at the door on days of performance and in advance at Fleming's Hardware, Cohasset.

Remember Rudolph Valentino

February, the traditional month of love, has been chosen by the Friends of the Scituate Town Library for a repeat of their highly-successful "Nostalgia Night at the Movies."

Sunday, Feb. 12 at 2:30 p.m., the all-time favorite matinee idol, Rudolph Valentino will be seen in "The Son of the Sheik."

Valentino came to this country from Italy at 18 years old. After working as a gardener, window washer and dancer, he headed to Hollywood and a date with destiny. At 31 years old, he died an untimely death after an operation, but left a rich legacy to the screen world. "The Son of the Sheik" was his last film. It was released after his death and contains some scenes from his earlier film, "The Sheik."

The other star of this event will be Scituate's own Martin Waters. Martin, a librarian at the Boston Public Library, will again provide the background piano music to enhance the mood of the film. With rapidity and skill he displays a wide repertoire of classical music and music from the Roaring Twenties.

The World of Weather

The year 1983 proved to be one of weather records. The coldest December on record for the United States ended 1983 as a year of record weather extremes, according to the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

Reliable records for the United States, as a whole, began in 1931, when NOAA's National Weather Service first established a national climate data base. Many locations, however, have records dating to the 1870's, according to the Weather Service's Climate Analysis Center.

Thirty-nine U.S. cities reported their coldest December of this century. Eleven are in Texas. At San Antonio and Amarillo December was the coldest month ever on record. December's arctic weather resulted from dry, sub-zero air masses flowing into the central portion of the nation from Northwest Canada. The weather was especially severe in the Great Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley states. Only the far Southwest escaped the cold.

The National Environmental Satellite Data and Information Service reported the greatest extent of snow cover over North America since it began snowmapping by satellite in 1966. Nearly 73 percent of the nation was blanketed.

Last summer's weather resulted in the hottest August on record topping even the Dust Bowl years of the mid-1930's.

Spring, for the country as a whole, was the second coldest on record. Colder than normal temperatures were concentrated in the Central and Southeastern states, with only New England and the Pacific Northwest enjoying warmer than normal temperatures.

The winter of 1982-83 (December through February) was the warmest nationwide in the past 30 years. Omaha, Nebraska, reported the first January on record during which the thermometer stayed above zero.

The winter's precipitation, coupled with one of the wettest springs on record, resulted in some flooding in every state. California reported double its normal precipitation. The rain and sudden melt of near-record snowpack in the Rocky Mountains caused major flooding in the Colorado River, Utah Lake, and the Great Salt Lake. Record floods were reported in Pheonix and the Tucson area of Arizona.

Elsewhere across the U.S. last spring, the Pearl River at Jackson, Mississippi, crested near 40 feet, well above normal flood stage of 28 feet in its second worst flood.

The normally dry desert area of Edwards Air Force Base, California, reported a record 15 inches of rain, three times its normal annual rate. And Vermont had its wettest spring on record with nearly double its normal 10 inches of spring rain.

In other weather news, the Associaton of American Weather Observers held their first meeting on October 22, 1983, at Westwood, New Jersey. The purpose of this new society is to serve those who follow the weather as a hobby. A monthly publication, the American Weather Observer, appeared for the first time in January. For further details you may write to: President, Association of American Weather Observers, 401 Whitney Boulevard, Belvidere, Illinois 61008.

South Shore. Snowfall last month, at my station, totalled 18.75 inches and was the most in January since I recorded 28.8 inches in 1978. Ed Maree recorded 17.6 inches for a monthly total in Pembroke, while Hingham measured 24.1 inches.

An interesting highlight of January's weather came in a report from Issaquah, Washington on the 25th. Snow was not their problem, flooding was. Residents of that town, which is located 25 miles east of Seattle, said one man caught an 8-pound steelhead trout with a net in front of his own driveway. That offers some consolation to the discomforts we encountered.

A seige of Arctic cold settled in on January 10th with the mercury remaining below freezing until the 24th. Record low readings were recorded on the 22nd when the temperature plunged to 23 degrees below zero in Marshfield. This surpassed the previous all time low reading of 22 degrees below zero set on January 21, 1981. Other low readings on that date were: Pembroke, minus 12; Hanover, minus 18; and Hingham, minus 16 degrees.

Total melted preciptation for January, at my station in Marshfield, was 2.85 inches, .80 inches below normal. There were 18.75 inches of snow, 6.15 inches above normal. The maximum 24-hour precipitation (melted) was .92 inches on the 31st. Maximum 24-hour snowfall was eight inches on the 11th. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on 15 days with a trace on one day. Snow, 1.0 inch or more, occurred on five days with a lesser amount on nine days. The total precipitation this year has been 8.26 inches, .99 inches above normal.

The mean temperature in January was 22 degrees, 7.8 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 31.2 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 12.6 degrees. The low temperature was 23 degrees below zero on the 22nd, with a high of 54 degrees on the 27th.

There were five clear days, seven partly cloudy days, and 19 cloudy days. The average wind speed was 9.6 MPH; normal is 14 MPH. The highest was 35 MPH on the 11th. Note: My wind cups were covered with wet snow and ice on the 31st and stopped rotating. Undoubtedly higher peak wind speed occurred on that date.

The normal heating season is from September 1 to May 23. Some 39 percent of the heating year remains.

FEBRUARY OUTLOOK

The best way to describe February is a month of frequently changing weather patterns. It should offer a challenge for meteorologists. Precipitation should be normal or slightly below average with below average snowfall. The average monthly temperature should be above normal. From the 9th to 15th it should be mostly fair and cold, with blustery winds. The 16th to 22nd will be unsettled with the possibility of significant storm activity. From the 23rd to 29th a major storm is indicated, most likely about the 26th to 28th.

WEATHER Q AND A

Q. Did the American Indian understand the weather?

A. In order to survive, it was necessary for the Indian to have a keen understanding of the elements. Unfortunately, they had no means of presserving their weather lore, except by oral tradition. Because of this, a treasure of observational forecasting has been lost of history. One method they employed to foretell an approaching storm utilized a human scalp. The scalp acted like a hygrometer, and the wetness or dryness of the hair was a result of moisture in the atmosphere and foretold the coming of rain. Blond hair responds the best and a golden scalp was a prize. So, if you think blonds have more fun, think about that.

Have a good day and nice forever.

Seahawk youth hockey report

BANTAMS

The Bantam A team battled to a 2-2 tie with Milton this weekend. Goals were scored by Craig Mulcahy, unassisted and by Jeff Hartwell assisted by Danny Pompeo and Darren Gold. Peter Sandblom had a fine day in net for the Seahawks.

Assisted by Brian McGovern and John Nyland, John Murphy hit the "bullseye" for the Bantam C team in the first minute of play.

But, the Hawks could only come up with one more goal scored by Gilbert Rebello, on an assist by Brendan Duffy. They were defeated 4-2 by Whitman-Hanson-Kingston.

SQUIRTS

The Seahawk Squirt "A" hockey team continued its recent "hot streak" with a 4-2 victory over King Phillip. Going into this contest, King Phillip had only lost twice this season but they proved to be no match for the high flying "Hawks."

Jon Mahoney, once again, led the charge scoring a "hat trick" and Billy Tibbetts added another goal.

Assists were credited to Dan Cohen, Kevin Mulcahey and John Resnick. Ariel Shockett turned in a very solid performance in net keeping the King Phillip sharp shooters well under control.

PEEWEES

The Peewee "A's" ran into stiff competition this weekend in two encounters with neighboring Pembroke. Pembroke, undefeated in League play this year, managed a 5-3 win and a 3-3 tie with the Seahawks.

In the first game the "Hawks" spotted Pembroke a 5-0 lead before they managed their comeback. The Seahawks came back very strong in the final period and came close to pulling the game out.

In the second contest, the "Hawks" had to settle for a 3-3 tie. Brian Pompeo got the first goal on an assist from Mike Richardson. Richardson scored the second goal with help from Pompeo and Pat Glennon. Billy Lincoln got the final score tying the game in the last few minutes.

In retrospect, both games were close and the match-up should provide a good contest if the two teams meet in the upcoming district playdowns.

Health Ed. meeting

Wednesday, February 15, at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, there will be a workshop for parents and other citizens interested in serving with a subcommittee from the Parent School Organization and the Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee.

The purpose of the workshop is to initiate the development of the proposed "Parent—Teen Guidelines" discussed at the forum on "Teens and Alcohol" Dec. 1.

The ultimate goal of the committee is to develop a set of guidelines or "covenant" which would set forth across-the-board ground rules for young teenagers and to some extent, their parents.

The guidelines will be concerned primarily with what is and what is not accepted behavior in regard to alcohol use, unsupervised parties, curfews, etc.

This project will also aid in the effort to get more of the parents involved in the school system's alcohol education program.

Anyone interested in working on this project call Health Education Coordinator, Michael Gill, before Feb. 15, 1984 at the Cohasset Jr. Sr. High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, 383-6107 or 6100.

Attention bird-watchers

If you find yourself eye to eye with a cardinal, a mockingbird or a tufted titmouse Feb. 11 and 12, the Massachusetts Audubon Society would like to know about it.

Birds of this species appearing at backyard feeders in New England will be counted as part of the Society's annual census.

Mockingbirds, cardinals and titmice are usually found in southern climates. Recently cardinals and mockingbirds became year-round residents of New England. Previously, few titmice entered this region. However, since 1957 the numbers of both cardinals and tufted titmice have increased sharply and the number of mockingbirds has almost doubled over the last several years.

The population shift to the Northeast by these birds has been explained by the popularity of backyard feeders, the planting of fruit-bearing trees in suburban areas, and the warming trend in the region's climate.

How are these species of birds identified? Male cardinals are bright red and females are a warm orange-brown with a red bill. Tufted titmice are all grey, and both titmice and cardinals have crests. Mockingbirds are grey, robin-sized birds with long tails edged in white. They flash prominent white wing spots when they fly.

To participate in the bird count, you can receive an official census card by sending a large self-addressed stamped envelope to: Census, Massachusetts Audubon Society, Lincoln, MA 01773, or call 259-9500.

EMT training

Beginning Feb. 13, Laboure Junior College in Boston will offer Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) program, which to date has prepared nearly 500 area residents with basic life-saving skills used in medical emergencies.

Classes will be Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the College. Instructing the intensive 96-hour course will be Jack MacNeill, R.E.M.T., past President of the Massachusetts Association of Registered EMT's.

The 16-week program will cover the basics of emergency care; including standard first aid practices; cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR); emergency childbirth; medical and environmental emergenies; skull, brain and back injuries and transportation of emergency patients.

In addition to scheduled in-class sessions, students will spend a portion of the program in laboratory practicum and in clinical observation in the Ambulatory Care department of Carney Hospital.

Graduates will be eligible to take the Registry Examination for Registered Emergency Medical Technicians.

The course conforms with the requirements issued by the U.S. Department of Transportation's course in Emergency Technology for Ambulance Drivers and is approved by the Massachusetts Office of Emergency Medical Services.

The course is available on a credit or non-credit basis. For registration information, contact the Office of Continuing Professional Education, (617) 296-8300, ext. 4023.

Laboure is located at 2120 Dorchester Avenue, next to Carney Hospital near the Milton line.

Expressway project begun

Removal of the median area on the West Street bridge in Quincy began Feb. 6 by the M. DeMatteo Co., contractor for the Southeast Expressway Reconstruction project.

"The removal of the medians, along with the installation of temporary lighting, is part of the work being done by the contractor to get the road ready for reconstruction," DPW Commissioner Robert Tierney said. Removal of the median, which will take place on all of the Expressway's 15 bridges, will be completed in abut two weeks, he said.

The work will extend from 7 a.m. until 2 p.m. and will require closing the highspeed lane on the southbound side of the roadway. Removal of the medians is necessary to increase road width and operate reversible lanes, which will be in effect when reconstruction begins after March 19.

"Commuters coming into Boston from the south will not be affected by this work since all four northbound lanes will remain open during peak hours," Tierney said.

Reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway will run from March to November, 1984 and March to November, 1985.

Three of these came in the final period, one into an empty net. Joe Hoffman and Alex Ghetto were the scorers for the Skippers.

Cohasset bounced back from that loss with an outstanding effort, tying a strong Duxbury team 3-3.

Joe Hoffman paced the Skippers with a pair of goals, while defenseman Timmy Curran fired home the tying goal. Goalie Peter Sandblom had a strong game in net for the Skippers.

GIRL'S BASKETBALL

The Cohasset Girls Basketball team lost to Whitman-Hanson in a fast pace league contest.

"Whitman-Hanson's depth was too much to handle," said coach Fallon, "we lost to a better team." "Yet, we played fairly well defensively but we were unable to pull it out."

Janet DiGirolamo had 12 points for Cohasset.

Against arch-rivals, Abington, Cohasset marked a victory 41-30 to improve their record to 12-4.

At the half, Cohasset was down 17-13, but they came back in the second half to outscore Abington 28-13.

"We held the league's top scorer to four points in 3 quarters and that was the key to the game," said Coach Fallon. "Yet, I feel that overall it was a very good team effort."

Janet DiGirolamo had 11 points while teammate Vicky Spooner added eight points and played very well defensively.

WRESTLING

The Cohasset Wrestling team won their second match over Cape Cod Tech.

It was a great effort by all, but the deciding match came down to Jim Stanton, who pulled out a key victory over his opponent to push Cohasset ahead for the win.

During a makeup match vs· Scituate, the Skippers fell short 42-23.

But they came back against the league champs, Whitman-Hanson, to an excellent showing losing by only one match, 42-30.

Brian Leary (5-4) and Ricky Rourke (4-4) each won, while Mike Curly, Liam Standford, Bill Sargent, and Jim Stanton all pinned their men during the close race.

Great goaltending by Zack Rogers together with a strong team effort in penalty killing, led the Mite C team to an outstanding victory over first place Hingham this weekend.

The Clergy speaks

By the Rev. Edward Atkinson

Rarely do we have the opportunity to hear directly of how a charitable gift for work overseas has been expended. What a pleasure it was therefore to meet with David Karoff last Sunday morning and learn how a gift of $800 raised by our high school age youth had been expended to construct fifteen clean water sources in Cameroon, West Africa.

David, who spent three years working for the Peace Corps in Cameroon, spoke of both the adventure and the difficulties of being a helper among people of a distant land and a different culture. He confirmed the wisdom of our Unitarian Universalist Service Committee philosophy of helping people to help themselves through the development of local leadership and commitment to projects which address the root causes of poverty and disease. David observed that it required a year and a half of careful and patient listening on his part merely to begin to understand where and how he might be helpful.

Though not everyone of us can meet the challenge of spending three years in West Africa, David emphasized the continuing need for support from the home front for such groups as the Service Committee. He also urged us to be well informed with regard to the needs of people throughout the world and to involve ourselves in local projects of social concern where we can be directly involved in services to others.

There is free income tax help available for low-income, elderly and handicapped persons, sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons, on Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning February 1 through April 14, 1984 at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St.

Please call 383-1561, 383-1100 or 383-0216 for an appointment. Betty Van Slyck or Mildred Harrington will assist you in preparing your Federal and State income tax returns free of charge.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom

The Social Concerns Committee of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, continues its Film Festival with its third feature film, "The Chosen." An outstanding adaptation of Chaim Potok's best-selling novel, the movie explores the friendship between two Jewish youths — Reuven, the son of a scholar (played by Barry Miller) and Danny, the son of a rabbi (played by Robby Benson) — growing up in Brooklyn during World War II.

Rod Steiger and Maximilian Schell also star as the two fathers of these youths, one an Hasidic rabbi of strong fundamental religious convictions, the other a professor passionately devoted to the Zionist movement.

"The Chosen" will be shown Sunday, Feb. 12 at 4 p.m. at the Loring Hall Cinema, 65 Main Street, Hingham. For those who have not purchased a family subscription, tickets will be sold at the door for $4, adults, and $2, children under 12.

The youth group will sponsor a salad bar at the Temple for moviegoers after the film, at 6 p.m.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, will lead a Family Shabbat Service Friday, Feb. 10, starting at 7:30 p.m.

During the service, members' children whose birthdays fall in the month of Febraury will receive a special blessing from the rabbi and a small gift from the Temple.

Parents are asked to call the Temple, 749-8103, in advance to arrange for their child to be included.

This service will also be attended by students from St. Francis Xavier Church of South Weymouth. An oneg shabbat (refreshments) will follow.

Math Department News

Senior Diane Mullen received a Certificate of Merit for placing in the top 10 percent of the Olympiad Math Competition. There are 25 students taking advantage of S.A.T. Math review during study hall. They are supervised by Mrs. Laluminere.

Arthur Mecham, Grade 7, received a perfect score on the Jr. High Continental Math League competition. Steven Perry placed second, Mason Sandell, third.

Three math teachers are taking Advanced Computer Programming Techniques at Rockland High School - Mr. Hogan, Mr. Dunn, and Mr. Anderson.

DEBATING TEAM WINS

A Cohasset High School Debating Team won a significant victory Tuesday, Feb. 1. The team of Bob Corkery and Mike Greiner defeated a previously unbeaten Somerset team composed of Paul Scarar and Karen Nash.

Corkery and Greiner, both sophomores, edged the veteran Cape team by a score of 55 to 54. The highest score a team can amass in one of these contests is 60. The debate was held at Dartmouth High School.

Another Cohasset team, that of Patrick Walsh and Meg McCullough, lost a tight five-point decision to a Dartmouth team.

The winning Cohasset team ably defended its plan to revise the jury system of the United States. It advocates a uniform plan of jury selection throughout the nation.

Because of illness, two other Cohasset teams were unable to participate. Edward Sheehan, the Cohasset Debate Coach, accompanied his teams to the debate.

The sixth graders at Deer Hill School had a "Math Mosquito," similar to a spelling bee, Feb. 2. Four people from each classroom participated in this event.

They decided who the contestants would be by taking a math test. Kerri Anglin was the winner, followed by Jonathan Delima, who was close behind.

At first Kerri had confidence in herself but as soon as she got a few problems wrong, and Jonathan jumped ahead, it began to die out.

"I was nervous at first because I was afraid I was going to do bad," said Kerri Anglin.

Soon Kerri caught up to Jonathan and it was a sudden death battle. She received the tie-breaker question.

Kerri knew that she would get it right because of previous math work in the subject.

Everyone liked the idea of having a "Math Mosquito" that the teachers feel they should do it again.

School report for the week . . .

The following are short stories written by Deer Hill School students.

THE OLYMPIC STAR

If I could do anything I wanted to do today, I would love to be the world champion figure skater. Lots of times when I skate here in Cohasset, I wonder what it would be like to be a champion figure skater.

I know the hours and hours of practice it takes. I have read that to become a champion you have to skate for at least four hours every day. You have to learn certain jumps and turns, such as the double axle.

The skaters make it look very easy, but the jumps and turns have to be exactly right. Just one slip and you can lose all concentration, and lose the whole competition.

When I'm skating at the pond in Cohasset, I try to be like a champion figure skater. I concentrate really hard and I try to do every move perfectly.

I can't do every move, but I do know how to do some fancy jumps and turns. I can also skate backwards. Lots of time I fall down, and it's very embarrassing, even when no one else is there. Sometimes when I begin to think how easy it is, I fall down.

There's lots of things I love in life and would hate to give up, for all the hours of practice you need to become a champion. So I'll just keep on skating the way I always have because I love it and it brings a lot of fun into my life.

MY DREAM

If I could do anything I wanted to today, I would hangglide because it is just like flying.

As you soar through the air you can see miles in front and on the sides of you. You can see some glorious sights as you exhilaratingly glide through the open, breezy sky. You feel the wind rippling through your coat as you look upon the open ground.

The frame of the glider slopes up and down in the shifty wind of the open sky. You hear the whistling sound of the wind in your face as you gently maneuver through the sky.

As you slowly tilt the glider toward the ground in the shifting wind, you feel the gravity pull as you reach the ground.

You hear the slight pitter patter of your feet as you gracefully try to stop. When it's finally all over you feel so good and free that you want to do it again. That's my dream and what I would really like to do, if I could this very day.

Brian Pompeo
Grade 6

One night I suddenly woke up with a jump. I knew why. It was because I had just landed on Earth in the space shuttle in my dream.

That sounds strange, doesn't it? You see, in school that day we talked about historic events, so my dream was based on history. Anyway, before I went to bed, I started thinking and talking to myself like this:

If I could have been present at an historic event, I would have loved to be there with Neil Armstrong when he landed on the moon, on July 20, 1969. If you are wondering why, it's because I think that would be a fascinating experience and I would be the first woman in space. Imagine all that excitement and adventure.

So in my dream, there I was on the moon coming out of our spacecraft, taking pictures and enjoying myself immensely. I snapped a tremendous amount of photographs in order that scientists could ascertain good information about the unfamiliar moon.

Neil and I obtained samples of various objects on the moon. We walked on the lunar surface for a long time and it was fascinating.

The gravity was different from Earth's and quite strange. After accumulating necessary information we departed and headed homeward.

When we landed, the shuttle gave us a little bump, and so, as I said, I woke with a jump.

Kerri Anglin
Grade 6

As I stood shaking with fright at the top of the race course, I desperately wished that I was Ingamar Stenmark, the famous alpine skier.

Within the fifty-one seconds of my run, his mind and body had taken over mine. Full force I thrust out of the starting gate. Around each gate I pushed with all my might.

As I came towards the toughest part in the course, my skis had completely taken over, my tight GS suit cut through the breeze as I sailed down the course.

As the finish came into view, my form changed from an upright position into a tuck. Barrelling through the finish, I could see my competition waiting anxiously to hear my time.

A cheer arose. The numbers were bellowed out of the shack. It was an amazing fifty-one seconds flat. I had beaten my entire age group. The closest time to me was fifty-three seconds. Photographers and TV cameras came rushing over asking me questions and taking my picture.

Suddenly I awoke from my undisturbed sleep. Beads of sweat trickled down my warm face. It had all been a dream.

Senior citizens news ...

Edythe Donkin is the president of the Board of Directors of South Shore Elder Services for the coming year.

Edythe was one of the founders and the first president of South Shore Elder Services in its formative years. Since that time, she has been on the executive committee, serving as treasurer and, most recently, as vice-president.

Mrs. Donkin is a mother of four and a grandmother of three. She lives with her husband in Scituate.

She was an executive secretary for Fisher Business College for many years. She returned to school, and in 1977 received a degree with high honors in Sociology with a minor in Gerontology from Northeastern University.

An active and involved community member, Mrs. Donkin has unselfishly served as past Chairperson of the Scituate Youth Concerts at Symphony Hall.

The new directors are: Edythe B. Donkin, President; Ruth Spencer, Vice-President; Frank Kearns, Treasurer and Adele Frazier, Secretary.

VOLUNTEER THANKS

South Shore Elder Services, Inc. wishes to thank all of the numerous volunteers who contributed to this year's packaging of 1,000 emergency food packages at the First Congregational Church of Scituate.

Each year the Nutrition Department staff and volunteers assemble emergency packages containing enough canned and shelf foods for three meals. These are distributed to the homebound clients to be used in the event of a storm which prevents ordinary distribution of daily meals to the homebound.

South Shore Elder Services provides over 20,000 meals a month to elderly in this area. Volunteer drivers are needed.

For more information about the Nutrition Program and/or volunteer opportunities, call Marge Hall or Kathleen Bryanton at 383-9790.

Merle and Anne Bowden met in Boston in the early 30's. He had come from Bucksport, Me. to work for the Boston Edison at the L St. plant. She had come from a small town near Manchester, England with her widowed father. They were introduced by mutual friends and were married March 4, 1934. They recently celebrated their 50th anniversary at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Minor Moving Violation: A driver convicted of any traffic violation other than the four major violations mentioned below will be assigned one point ($50), which will not be repeated in the second year unless the driver has an at-fault accident or violation that year.

Major Moving Violation: A driver convicted of one of the four major moving violations— driving to endanger or reckless driving, operating under the influence of liquor or narcotics, vehicular homicide, operating after revocation of license—will be assigned 4 points for each of the three years for a total of twelve. If point values stay the same, this means $225 added to your bill for each of the three years.

Minor Accidents: Two points ($100) are given in the first year and one point in the second year for a minor accident. A minor accident is defined as one in which an insurance company pays out more than $200 but not more than $500 over a driver's deductible and in which the driver is more than 50 percent at fault.

Major Accidents: Three points are given for a major accident. A major accident is defined as one in which an insurance company pays out more than $500 over a driver's deductible and in which the driver is more than 50 percent at fault. Only accidents which occur after Jan. 1, 1984 count. In that case, a driver would pay $150 in points the first year, $100 the second, and $50 the third. The number of points do not decrease in any year in which a driver has a moving violation or an at-fault accident.

EFFECT ON PREVIOUSLY PAID MERIT RATING SURCHARGES: No one who has fully paid any Merit Rating surcharges will be assigned any points under the Safe Driver Insurance Plan.

In the near future, a detailed explanation of the plan will be mailed to the over three million insured in the state.

Dooley on the hotseat, more coming next week . . .

By Jane Lane

The continuing saga of Fire Chief Martin Dooley will resume next week when selectmen hear a third night of testimony in their investigation of charges against the department official.

The second portion of the investigative hearing was held Monday night before a packed house at Town Hall. More than 100 persons sat through the three-hour session, and one woman was heard to say, "too bad it takes something like this to get everyone here to Town Hall."

The hearing stems from a letter received Dec. 7 from Cohasset firefighters union president William Protulis. In the communication, he alleged Chief Dooley misused Cohasset Ladder Truck 1, and he endangered the lives of two firefighters by ordering them to climb atop the ladder after it had been operated improperly as a "battering ram."

The incident occurred during a Hull fire Nov. 25, in which Cohasset responded to a mutual aid call. During the fire, according to Protulis, the chief ordered firefighter Eric Wenzlow to "take the window out" - a second-story window boarded with plywood. According to Protulis's letter, the function of the ladder as a "battering ram" is improper in accordance with the truck's maintenance manual.

Then, Protulis wrote, after that incident, Chief Dooley ordered firefighter Peter Trask to scale the extension ladder while it was being utilized as a water pipe - directing the water flow onto the flames on the roof of the building.

Protulis noted in the letter, this action directly endangered the safety and life of the firefighter.

It was explained several times during the course of this week's hearing, that no charges have been brought against the chief by the selectmen. This hearing was scheduled to determine what, if any, charges should be brought against the department's administrator.

There were a few differences between this and last week's open hearings. Last week's session was marred by outbursts and a walk-out by union members, who disagreed with the guidelines established for the hearing.

This week, although not officially sanctioned by

Cohasset Plazza developer aims high

An enigneer's rendering of the proposed "Cohasset Plaza", to be located on the site of the former Cohasset Motors property, was presented to selectmen last week.

Cohasset attorney Charles Humphreys, representing developer Donald Staszlo, explained the detailed engineering plans to the board.

Although the shopping plaza is still in the preliminary discussion stages, Humphreys told selectmen the developer has heard from numerous retailers who have expressed interest in locating their business along the Route 3A site.

In fact, he added, a large supermarket chain, Shaw's, has relayed a strong interest in the property, along with Osco Drug store. The shopping mall, as proposed by the developer, would hopefully be opened in stages, beginning next fall, and be in full operation by Christmas, the busiest retail season, Humphreys added.

If all necessary permits are attained and negotiations with interested businesses are completed soon, construction may commence this spring.

According to the attorney, among the other businesses expressing an interest in the area, is a 24-hour medical center, along with several auto dealerships.

Although selectmen indicated no formal opinion regarding the plans, they were specifically concerned

School board cool to student fees

By Theresa Sullivan

The School Committee agreed the School Dept. would not resort to charging users' fees for student athletes unless there is no alternative.

At Monday night's meeting, the board reviewed the Athletic Dept. budget and discussed athletic-related matters.

These included users' fees, the status of the South Shore League, boosters clubs and sports equipment.

The proposed athletic budget for Fiscal Year 1985 is $82,000 and includes maintenance to athletic facilities and equipment which has been postponed over the past few years.

The committee did not discuss individual line items in detail.

Board members suggested the various boosters clubs for individual sports and extra-curricular activities combine forces and form one unified boosters club.

Members said fundraising efforts may prove more successful if merchants and residents were approached once rather than numerous times each year.

Athletic Dept. Chairman Clark Chatterton said he has met with the overall Boosters Club recently. "They're all looking for ways to help the total program. They're all well-meaning, very busy people."

In addition to coaches' salaries and standard equipment, the proposed budget includes requests for repair

First time in history

Basketball boys are league champs

For the first time in the school's history, the Cohasset High School Boys Basketball team clinched a league championship.

Except for Hanover, Cohasset is considered a powerhouse basketball team on the South Shore.

Behind the play of Tony Bogarty and James Creed, Cohassset beat Norwell 73-56 to win the South Shore League Small Schools Division Championship.

Norwell trailed by a point at halftime as Cohasset missed 16 foul shots. Players complained about the rim of the basket being too high.

Officials measured the basket and found it two inches too high and adjusted it.

Cohasset used a strong man-to-man defense to pull away in the second half.

Bogarty scored 21 points, dished out 11 assists and totalled 12 rebounds and four steals.

Creed had 17 points, 12 rebounds and blocked six shots.

Senior David Barcomb grabbed 13 rebounds and scored ten points. Eighth grader Brian Edwards chipped in with ten points while David MacDonald played his best game of the year, scoring 10 points, and adding five steals and assists.

Coach Ed Minelli said he was extremely proud of all his players and assistant coach Matt Salerno.

The other team players are Bob Shultz, Floyd Hardwick, Phil Bernstein, Peter Caruso, John O'Connell and Chris Kuhn.

Cohasset increased its record to 14-1 in the league and 16-2 overall with a 67-60 win over Holbrook Monday.

Edwards led the scoring attack with 20 points and nine rebounds; and Creed had 14 points, 17 rebounds and four blocked shots.

Bogarty scored 12 points, and added 8 rebounds, assists and six steals.

Barcomb had 12 points and 12 rebounds and David MacDonald had seven points and four steals.

Cohasset outscored Holbrook 23-6 in the first 5 minutes and led 38-23 at halftime.

Cohasset's week . . .

Washington's Birthday

Monday, Feb. 20 we celebrate the birthday of George Washington.

But people who wish to get information and advertisements in next week's paper should make sure copy arrives at the Mariner as soon as possible. Since there is no mail delivery Monday early or first hand delivery insures it gets published next week.

Democratic delegates elected

The Cohasset Democratic Caucus elected four uncommitted delegates to the state convention.

All four delegates have had experience as delegates to The Democratic State Conventions.

Cohasset developer aims high

with the possible traffic congestion caused by the proposed entrance and exit on Sohier Street. Particularly in the summer, with the heavy traffic generated by the Music Circus, there could be major tie-ups with additional vehicles exiting onto that street, they said.

Humphreys noted that the major entrance and exit would be placed in the front of the property on Route 3A. Only Cohasset residents would likely use the Sohier Street entrance which would be located 150 feet back from the corner of Route 3A. That entrance has been proposed solely for the convenience of Cohasset residents who do not wish to drive onto Route 3A to enter the plaza. he added.

The Cohasset Plaza, as envisioned by developer Staszko, would include a major supermarket and drug store, the medical center, a bank, and six to 12 smaller stores. There are several businesses currently negotiating with the developer for space within the eight-acre site.

At a Cohasset Chamber of Commerce meeting, Staszko said the plaza will contain 73,000 square feet of building space and 493 parking spaces. It will be a one-story, flat roofed building with a brick or stone facade. "Something similar to what you might see in Wellesley or Chestnut Hill," Staszko said.

Regarding the question of which retail companies will rent space in the plaza, Staszko said, "I have received a tremendous outpouring of response from corporations all over the U.S., not just locally."

Several people at the Chamber meeting were concerned about increased traffic on Rte. 3A.

Staszko said a traffic study has been completed and, "We took the Music Circus traffic into account." He added, "I would assume at some point in time a light will be placed there (on Rte. 3A)."

Some of the land behind the proposed building site is low-laying and wet. When asked about this, Staszko said perk tests have been performed, and the land conforms to health code standards and wetlands laws for building. He added, "Of course we will have to go before the conservation commission" for approval.

Staszko said the plaza would employ over 100 people and generate about $70,000 per year in tax revenue for the town.

When asked if he planned to sell the plaza once it is completed, Staszko said, "No, I will remain the owner."

No consensus on landfill

There is still not a consensus between the Board of Health and the Advisory Board about the amount of fill needed at the town landfill next year.

The Health Board budgeted $38,000 for next year but landfill expenses are expected to approach $50,000 for this fiscal year.

In other health budget news, the Health Board will pay $1,000 for an engineering inspector to monitor the privately-owned Cohasset Heights Landfill.

The board also wants $1,500 to hold a hazardous materials collection day. The day will allow residents to clean out old paint cans, pesticides and motor oil and deliver them to a collection site where the waste will be shipped to a dump site licensed to handle the waste.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Apparently the auto, driven by Chenett, lost control and hit a tree. There were no other passengers in the car.

There were also two other serious auto accidents in Cohasset last week. Three Cohasset people were injured in a two-car collision about 2 a.m. Feb. 10 at the intersection of Beechwood and Doane Streets.

In another accident, a car driven by Vincent Nardo Jr., 36, of 272 No. Main St. knocked down a utility pole on North Main Street 1 a.m. Feb. 10. He received minor injuries.

The pole knocked out electricity for 270 homes for about three hours.

A visitors locker room was broken into at Cohasset High School last week and several items were stolen from the lockers of Duxbury High School basketball players.

The break happened shorty after halftime after both teams filed into the gym for the second half. Police said the door was locked from the outside at the start of the second half.

Items reported missing from the Duxbury players included over $18 in cash, two licenses and a health club admittance card.

Dog officer requests used van

If selectmen have their way, the dog officer will no longer have to travel across town with someone's pet sitting alongside him.

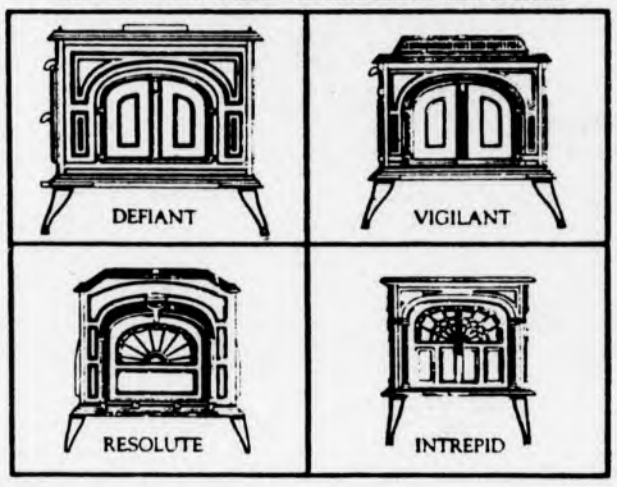
Near the conclusion of last week's selectmen's meeting, Dog Officer Richard Yokum presented an argument for expending about $4,000 for a used van.

Currently, the officer must travel through the streets of Cohasset in his own vehicle, picking up stray animals and depositing them in his car. If there's more than one animal, the extra canine must sit alonside the officer in the front seat.

"Ridiculous," decried selectman John DeBassio. And three of the four other officials agreed. They endorsed the "concept" of Yokum's suggestion and now the advisory committee must listen to a detailed cost analysis of the plan.

Selectmen earlier denied a request by Building Inspector Robert Dennis to purchase a vehicle. For the past two weeks, Dennis specifically related how the stop-and-go traveling he undertakes daily, is ruining his own truck.

But Wiring Inspector Steve Wigmore denounced the idea, saying he had tried that similar tack with selectmen years ago. He suggested the town employees be given a flat mileage fee each month. That would cover gas costs and other expenses caused by the wear and tear on personal vehicles.



"I sympathize with you," he told Dennis at the meeting. "I wrote that speech years ago and got nowhere. But if you get a vehicle, everyone (town employees) will want one."

Selectman Frank Ebgland and Debassio agreed with the flat monthly mileage allowance. Board member Clifford Mitman said he would not want a flat rate to interfere with the way in which employees perform their assigned duties.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who approved increasing the mileage fee, suggested a decision regarding the most appropriate flat rate must first be made.

Selectmen need applicants for constable. Anyone interested should call Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

Selectmen's briefs . . .

ENGLAND WANTS CITIZENS FIRE COMMITTEE

Selectman Frank England repeated the need to initiate a study into the Fire Department problems.

At last week's selectmen's meeting, England suggested that one solution may be to form a citizen's committee to investigate the department, its practices, and procedures. The committee would have responsibilities similar to the Ambulance Study Committee, he said. There could be persons knowledgeable in fire engineering, and residents with personnel experience, England added.

Although Executive Secretary Mark Lanza has contacted area towns which recently updated fire department rules and regulations, England said a separate investigation must begin. Selectman Clifford Mitman noted that before a citizens advisory group is formulated, a specific assignment and responsibility must be developed. "Actually, I think we (selectmen) will have to do pretty much all of the work ourselves," he commented, referring to the recent town meetig mandate.

CLAPBOARDS FOR BATES BUILDING?

Despite strong objections by Health Agent Elaine Eliopolous to sandblast the peeling clapboards on the Bates Building, selectmen say that remains one option in their plans to renovate the exterior.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur has long been a proponent of refurbishing the exterior of the historic Bates Building which houses the Health Department. But when selectmen suggested the exterior be sandblasted and repainted, Eliopolous warned the building would have to be "wrapped tighter than a cocoon," so lead contaminates could not enter the offices, according to McArthur. Rocco Laugelle disagreed with that opinion, and noted the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineerig "says there's no problem with sandblasting."

Selectmen said that would be one option to investigate, since replacing the clapboards would probably be too expensive, and paint would not hold to the building without first sandblasting the wood.

The board will look into whether the Health Agent can legally prevent sandblasting the town building. And in the meantime, estimates will be sought for the cost of replacing the clapboards only on the back side of the structure, which receives most of the damage from sunlight.

CABLE TV LICENSE FINALIZED

Selectmen signed a 15-year final license with American Cablesystem of Mass., Inc. and construction of the pay-television system underway.

Cabling of the town was set to begin on Beechwood Street last week and the cable company will be prepared for its first cable subscribers within three months, according to American General Manager Stephen Farquahar.

The signing of the license was postponed one week while changes in the company's insurance policy were completed. A stipulation that no solicitation by the company occur after 7 p.m. was attached to the contract.

Selectmen noted that all American Cablesystems salespersons will be wearing proper identification when soliciting door-to-door.

Sewer meeting Feb. 16

Thursday, Feb. 16, the Sewer Commission and the Citizens Sewer Advisory Committee, Chartis Langmaid, Chairman, wil' sponsor a Public Meeting at the Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.

The town's engineer for the Supplementary Waste Water Facilities plan, Ward Engineering Associates, will give a progress report.

Preliminary data will be provided concerning the resident's questionaire returns and the results of on site surveys.

This information will indicate those areas of Cohasset where on site solutions will be more cost effective and those areas of the town where extended sewer service will be more cost effective.

In addition, the most promising alternative plans will be summarized, and preliminary cost information will be presented.

All citizens are urged to attend so the Citizens Advisory Committee and the Board of Sewer Commissioners may leave the benefit of their comments, suggestions and criticisms.

Advisory Bd. continues budget review

by Karen Brown

Some budget items in the proposed fiscal year 1985 budgets for the Fire Dept., Conservation Commission and Building Inspector received particular scrutiny by the Advisory Board Saturday.

Although already approved by the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory board questioned certain budget and line items in the Fire Dept. budget, such as salaries and overtime, ambulance and a fire prevention program.

Full time salaries with overtime totalled $483,000.

Since the salary negotiations for the Fire, School and Police Dept. have not been completed Chairman Jim Lagrotteria suggested "lets hold off" on voting for a recommendation.

Board member Jill O'Donnell presented a brief outline of the fire prevention program headed by Capt. Mark Trask.

"The chief wants a fire prevention program in the schools," she said. Estimated costs for the program totalled $225.

Concerning ambulance service the Board agreed to "stay with the way things are" and reviewed recommendations by the Ambulance Committee.

The committee recommended reduced man-hour shifts, additional medical training for police officers and E.M.T's who could become paramedics.

The board didn't approve an increase in budget allotment for fuel recommended a transfer from another part of the budget to cover increased costs.

Lagrotteria questioned a $2200 line item for Tools "put in the budget and never spent."

CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Under the Conservation Commission budget, the Bd. noted some over spending for professional services for "engineering fees on specific lots" during Fiscal Year 1984.

Lagrotteria suggested the commission "investigate a possible recoup from the developer" for these outside services.

BUILDING INSPECTOR

Regarding the Building Inspector Bob Dennis's budget, the Bd. discussed the Inspector's request for a "town car" to be used by various departments.

The inspector based this request on a mandate by the state that the Building Inspector be "on the road 60 percent of the time" and "the town's increased building problems."

The Bd. questioned the practicality and agreed upon "a monthly automobile stand-by allowance" for the B.I.: adding a new line item to the budget for $1000.

The Bd. then approved the total B.I. budget at $7245.

The Bd. also reviewed budgets for Fire & Police Headquarters, Police Department, Water Dept., Parking Clerk, Celebrations and Memorials and the Town Exec. Secretary.

The Bd. approved:

— $15,950 Repair and Maintenance for the Fire and Police Headquarters including installation of a new phone system for both departments.

— $50,975 in General Expenses for the Police Dept. previously approved by the Bd. of Selectmen.

— $123,819 in General Expenses for the Water Dept.

— $3000 Total Budget for the Parking Clerk also approved by the Selectmen.

— $700 Total Budget for Celebrations and Memorials reflecting a $200 increase due to the cost of new flags.

— $22,260 Personal Services for the Town Exec. Secretary who has requested an additional $1185 salary increase to cover "travel and meetings" expenses.

His case was continued without a finding for six months. He was ordered to pay $100 and restitution. A charge of operating after revocation was dismissed.

New help for crime victims

Sweeping reforms guaranteeing crime victims and their families rights was signed into law recently by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

The new law will force criminals to pay for programs to help their victims. Fines will be paid into a new Victim and Witness Assistance Fund which will provide a wide range of services to crime victims.

"For the first time in this state's history, we now have a law mandating that victims of crime be treated properly as they travel through our criminal justice system," Dukakis said.

In addition to the new fund, the Victims' Rights Law requires that victims and witnesses be notified about changes in court scheduling, that they be informed of available protection and financial assistance, and that victims of violent crime have a voice in the sentencing of their assailants.

The bill creates the Victim and Witness Assistance Board, a five-member group consisting of the attorney general, two district attorneys appointed by the governor and two members of the public, one a crime victim, appointed by the governor. Board members will serve without pay.

The board will appoint an executive director responsible for carrying out all of the victim and witness programs established by the bill. The programs will be funded through fines—$25 assessed those convicted of felonies and $15 from those guilty of misdemeanors.

The bill will also:

—mandate that victims and witnesses be informed by the court and the district attorney of how to apply for any witness fees;

—provide victims and witnesses with employer and creditor intercession services;

—require that victims, family members and witnesses be provided a secure waiting area or room during court proceedings.

GI mortgages

Many service veterans may have failed to take advantage of obtaining a GI mortgage which guarantees the lowest interest rate with a minimum of down payment.

Mike McReaken, VA loan guaranty officer for Massachusetts, said eligible veterans may be able to finance as much as $110,000 or more without a down payment.

GI loans are made by private mortgage lenders and the VA guarantees up to $27,500 or 60 percent of the loan amount, whatever is the least. The actual amount a lender will finance without a down payment is determined by the lender, McReaken said.

He urged veterans to shop the mortgage lending field for the best rate, longest terms, highest mortgage and lowest closing costs. Presently the interest rate on GI loans is 12.5 percent.

McReaken said these mortgages are unlike conventional mortgages because they are not subject to prepayment penalties. Some conventional mortgages have payoff penalties of two percent or more of the outstanding balance which could be a substantial amount.

Another benefit is the GI mortgage is assumable without an increase in the interest rate or a change in the terms. Some mortgages provide for increasing interest rates and/or the entire debt to be paid when the property is sold.

Many veterans, McReaken said, believe that they are ineligible for another GI loan even though they may still own the home for which they used their eligibility.

The eligibility may be used for the building or purchase of a regular home, a condominium unit, or a manufactured home with or without the land.

☐Forty secondary school science teachers and department heads from throughout New England recently completed the Laboratory Safety Workshop at Curry College in Milton.

The workshop is co-sponsored by the Northeastern Section of the American Chemical Society.

Joseph Walsh of Cohasset, Science Department head at Boston Latin School, participated in the workshop. The 16-hour course provides a review of the fundamentals of laboratory safety and assistance in the development of laboratory safety programs for secondary schools.

☐Richard C. Tibbetts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Tibbetts, Jr., of 90 Howard Gleason Road, Cohasset, graduated with honors from Phillips Exeter, New Hampshire.

A student at the Academy for three years, Tibbetts will remain at Exeter as a post-graduate student during the second semester of the school year.

Tibbetts, who is a member of the boys' varsity basketball team, has been elected captain of the crew team for the spring sports season.

☐Ruth Bacigalupo had a letter from her son, Bill, recently, and its contents made her a proud Mom indeed! Bill was appointed Vice President of Group Personnel of the Power Systems Group Industrial Relations Co. Bill lives in Windsor, Conn., now, but certainly "saw the world before settling down." He lived in India, Tehran, Iran, Kashima, Japan, Australia, and Rio, Brazil. He surely has stories to relate to his three sons! Bill graduated from Cohasset High in 1962.

☐The "Person of the Year" contest is drawing to a close, and the results will be published as follows: the first week will feature a story on all runners-up, the second week will be on the third place winner, the third week will do a feature on second place, and, finally, the fourth week will be "the winner."

☐Lesa Pierotti, a member of the Junior Class at CHS, is spending the second half of her junior year in an enviable manner. Lesa was asked to be a page in training in Washington, D.C., and will be there until Congress breaks for the summer recess. Lesa will be back for her senior year, undoubtedly with many stories to tell, as things should be "hopping" during the election year.

☐This weekend certainly was a harbinger of spring. There were even reports of robins spotted in certain areas! The amount of walkers and joggers hit an all-time record, as did the temps! It was cause for concern, too, as many drivers reported. It would seem there should be a law as to which side of the street pedestrians use, as there are many dangerous curves in our town; and, with both sides of the street being used for walking and running, accidents are bound to occur.

☐Grace Donahue received a great telephone call from her son, Michael, this weekend. Michael, a junior, made the Dean's List at the University of Maine, Orono. Congratulations.

☐Jason Brown celebrated his first birthday recently, and it was video-taped! Jason's parents, Richard and Gina Brown, grandparents Priscilla Brown and Victoria Foreman, and Godparents, Bob and Polly Burns, were all participants in the festivities. Happy belated Jason!

☐Mary S. Sprague, a former resident of Cohasset, has put us on the map with her recent appointment. Carl Byoir and Associates have appointed her a coordinator for Honeywell's corporate and divisional public relations programs. She was formerly administrative assistant. Carl Byoir and Associates is the third largest public relations agency in the world!

☐Had an interesting phone call from Peter Wood last week. Peter is a marathon hopeful along with Dave Bishop and Richard Caffrey. They have been training "forever" and continue to do so. They have a "game plan" for marathon day that sounds like a super one. A cadillac limo will be hired to take them to the marathon. (After all, if Bill Rodgers can do it, why not?) They plan to run for it, then return home. Peter extends a challenge to other would-be marathoners that are "crazy enough to do it," to get training. Watch for these soon-to-be celebrities to be running through town.

☐Former police chief Randy Feola is a happy man spending his winters in Florida, especially since his supply of cigars never diminishes with Rocco Laugelle sending him a few boxes every time he suspects his cigars are running low. Wonder if he still has the habit of putting the cigar behind his ear.

☐Happy to report that Norbert Reardon was spotted out walking last weekend, and looking wonderful.

☐Walt Sweeney found out last week that it doesn't always pay to be neat. While emptying the ashtray of a certain truck, several keys went into the dumpster along with the butts! Can you imagine going through the same dumpster trying to find them? Guess who offered to go get salad dressing to go with the lettuce that they were sifting through.

☐The Saint Anthony's Sociables recently held their second annual Sweetheart Ball at Cohasset by the Sea to a sell-out capacity.

Some of the participants were Father John J. Keohane, Dr. and Mrs. Bonetzky, chairmen of Saint Anthony's Sociables, and Rene and Maria Rancourt of the renown Rene and Maria Orchestra. Rene is sometimes better known as the voice of the Bruins.

This year's theme was "Reminiscing with Rene and Maria. Highlight of the evening was a superb floor show. Plans are now underway for the third annual Sweetheart Ball.

☐Until next week, keep your news coming!

Dooley on the hotseat, more coming next week . . .

selectmen, the union was represented by counsel. Atty. Kevin Hearns of Boston attended the hearing and advised the union witnesses, but was not formally recognized within the hearing.

Protulis said the union remains opposed to the guidelines utilized during the hearing, in which Chief Dooley, as the defendant, is allowed legal counsel. Witnesses are not given that privilege. He also said he would like the union counsel to be allowed re-examination of all witnesses called to testify.

The first witness called Monday night was firefighter Peter Trask. Appointed in 1983, Trask told selectmen he had no previous training or experience on the aerial ladder until the night of the Hull fire.

He said he witnessed firefighter Wenzlow, upon command of the fire chief, use the aerial ladder to ram some plywood boarded onto a second-floor window. The second time the ladder hit, a 6-by-6 inch hole was punctured through what he later estimated to be 5/8 inch thick plywood.

He also later explained that aboard the truck, he felt the impact during both blows by the ladder to the boarded window.

Trask said Chief Dooley asked him if he had aerial training, and after replying negatively, the chief ordered him up the ladder while it was utilized as a water pipe (directing the hose to the direction of the flames). He was atop the ladder for more than two hours, during two separate intervals, he said.

During questioning by selectman Clifford Mitman, the firefighter said winds that night were "pretty gusty" and added, "they whipped me on the ladder as much as five feet from side to side." When asked if he felt his life was in danger, he replied, "yes, because of the wind. It scared me, mostly because that was the first time I was in operation."

Referring to the "ramming" of the ladder against the plywood window, Chief Dooley's attorney, Louis Cassis of Quincy, asked Trask if he thought the ladder was damaged at that point.

Trask replied he never told anyone the ladder was possibly damaged. "It wasn't me who said that," he answered.

Atty. Cassis then asked if Trask thought it made sense for the chief to order one of only two permanent firefighters at the scene to climb the aerial ladder, not one of the call force members. Trask answered affirmatively.

He later testified he felt in danger when the ladder moved direction because of the winds that night. But Atty. Cassis then questioned why Trask refused the chief's offer of relief at one point during the night. "I was afraid, but I did turn it down (Chief Dooley's offer to relieve the firefighter on the ladder)," he said.

Trask also noted he later told union president Protulis, "the winds were strong, but my life was not in danger."

When asked what was his opinion of Protulis's letter, Trask replied, "I have no opinion of the letter at all."

After a brief recess in the session, Atty. Cassis asked that all charges against the chief be dropped, because the witnesses called, thus far, had failed to acknowledge their endorsement of the letter written by Protulis.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson reminded everyone no charges have been brought against the chief, and that this hearing is for investigative purposes.

Firefighter Protulis was called next to testify. He was on duty at the time of the fire, although not at the blaze Nov. 25. He noted in his testimony witnesses to the event previously stated no safety lines were used to tie down the aerial ladder that night, a precaution routinely followed during high winds, he said.

He also said he objected to the stationing of men atop the aerial ladder because it was after the apparatus had been used improperly as a "battering ram" against the boarded window.

If the equipment had been damaged through this misuse, it would have endangered the safety and lives of the firefighters, he testified.

Selectmen noted that the aerial truck, by request of Officer Protulis, has been thoroughly tested and examined by two independent companies, which determined no structural damage occurred to the vehicle or equipment.

Atty. Cassis noted although Protulis said he was concerned for the lives of his fellow firefighters, it took him from Nov. 25 until Dec. 7. to formally notify selectmen of his concerns. The firefighter said it took that length of time to compile the necessary data.

The final witness called Monday night was a mechanic from Woodwood Spring Shop in Quincy. Dave Mortberg has worked on an estimated 1000 fire department ladder trucks.

The Cohasset ladder truck was sent to the Quincy shop for inspection, after selectmen received Protulis's letter alleging there may have been structural damage caused by the improper use of the ladder in Hull on Nov. 25.

Mortberg testified firefighters throughout the years have told him they use the aerial ladder "against walls, windows, and boards," he said. He noted there was no structural damage to the Cohasset apparatus. And, although he explained damage is minimized by a hydraulic bypass system, he later acknowledged "there's always a chance" the bypass will fail and the ladder will receive damage.

The third session of the investigative hearing will resume Tuesday, Feb. 21 at 7:30 p.m. At that time, Chief Dooley's attorney is expected to call area fire chiefs, including Hull Chief Robert Hollingshead and Hingham Chief Fletcher Patch. Chief Dooley will also testify in his own behalf.

State interference

Something is undermining the concept of free enterprise in this state. It's called the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which seems to believe that free enterprise can only exist so long as it doesn't compete with its own bureaucratic, muddled, exorbitant and ill-fated services to the public.

Take, for example, the case of Mr. Hugh T. Drummond of Halifax, a singularly genteel and enterprising man who, through no fault of his own, has managed to provide efficient, inexensive transportation from the South Shore to Boston.

Mr. Drummond started a modest vanpool service in 1980 which has grown by popular demand to include nine 15-passenger vans serving several South Shore communities.

Enter some of the giants of public transportation like the Plymouth & Brockton bus line, the Department of Public Utilities, and the most deficit-ridden, grossly mismanaged bureaucracy in the state, the MBTA.

The P&B doesn't like the idea of Mr. Drummond taking a few dozen cars off the expressway, particularly since he can do it cheaper and more efficiently than they. The DPU, with nothing better to do than disrupt a private operation, has put a stop to his meager profits until he toes the line. And the T — which has been assessing South Shore communities for millions of dollars over the years without providing any service — the T now says they have regulatory authority over his operations and fees!!

How long will it take the clowns at the MBTA to decide Mr. Drummond must increase his prices — not for more profit for him, but so he won't be so competitive to those state-approved bus lines?

Drummond is in the process of obtaining all his required permits and licenses and safety equipment, undaunted by the state's meddling and backed by his loyal, satisfied passengers.

We wish him well. If the Dukakis administration had done anything about the transportation problems on the South Shore, either now or during his previous tenure, than alternatives like Drummond's van service might not be needed. But better service is needed now more than ever, with the Rte. 3 reconstruction just a month away.

As a note, it is heartwarming that the fuss from P&B and the state over Drummond's small operation has provided more free publicity than he could ever want. Requests are at an all-time high, he said.

Perhaps he could give a few pointers in public relations to those in higher authority.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Selectmen support dog officer's request for needed purchase of used van but nixes building inspector request for same. Dog officer says he's been using his own small van for 3 years and if he had to pick up more than one dog — the other one would have to ride up in front with him

Introducing the non-cake cake

By Claire McDonough

"My birthday whipped cream with the candle in it was, um, unusual," the Dragon said, "but it seemed funny not having a cake.

"I appreciated not having any EDBs," he continued hastily, "and I'm really glad you didn't opt for the can of Calo with a candle, but wasn't there any alternative?"

"We could have not done anything," Skipper offered.

"Actually," I interjected, "there is another course. Kathy Splitz called to tell me of a craze that's sweeping Town Hall. It's called a Friendship Cake, and I'm starting one today.

"You have to get a 'starter' from a friend. It's gooey looking batter, and you keep it in a covered bowl. Once a day for the first four days you stir it. On the fifth day you add a cup of milk, a cup of sugar, and a cup of flour. Then you stir it once a day for four more days.

"On the tenth day you add another cup of milk, cup of sugar, and cup of flour. Then you divide it up and share it with three friends. To the part you keep, you add two-thirds cups of oil, three eggs, one-half teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons of baking powder, a cup of sugar, a teaspoon and a half of cinnamon..."

Skipper looked at me with something like awe. "That's the most complicated thing I've ever heard in my life."

"Quiet," I told him. "I'm not finished. You also add 1½ teaspoons of baking powder and a cup of flour, and 2 teaspoons of vanilla. Then you beat it with a spoon."

"Is that all?" the Dragon asked.

"Not really. If you want, you can add fruits, nuts, raisins, stuff like that. And you bake it in a greased tube pan for 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

"Maybe 50 minutes," I amended, "depending on your oven. Then when it's cool, you frost it with cream cheese frosting. Kathy says it's absolutely delicious."

"What about the EDBs?" Breida asked.

I smiled smugly. "Flour made from organically grown wheat."

"How about the sugar?"

I shrugged. "Nobody's perfect."

"Look," Breida said, "Do you realize you're going to spend 10 days making a cake? I mean, we're talking ten days. And you're going to wind up with something neither you, Daddy, or I can eat because it'll have sugar in it."

"I don't want any," Skipper said, "if it has nuts or raisins."

The Dragon nodded. "I'm not sure any of us want something that's been hanging around for ten days."

I sniffed. "Somehow I don't think my efforts are appreciated. And anyway, what else could I do? Nobody wants EDBs."

Skipper grinned. "Let 'em eat Calo."

Memorable Valentine's Day gifts

By Pat Desmond

It was a tough question. But then, the Mariner tries not to pull punches. One person after another hemmed and hawed and said they would rather not be identified.

In honor of the season, the Mariner wanted to tell the world what some of the townspeople liked about Valentine's Day--specifically, what was the best Valentine's present they had ever received.

But, for whatever reason, people didn't want to go public.

Tann Kasperowicz, who has never been known to evade a tough issue, thought for a minute and then recounted the story of a Valentine's Day raise she received while she was working as a correspondent for the Patriot Ledger.

"It was a $14 raise and I tried to refuse it," she said. "I said it wasn't enough."

She pointed out that the raise came, anyway. At the time, she was one of the ringleaders of an attempt to unionize the Ledger correspondents.

Camille Cadelieri said she's still waiting for the present she really wants--a pair of diamond earrings, in case anyone wants to do some belated shopping.

"The nicest gift I've actually received was flowers. Flowers are always nice," she added.

Laura Doherty said when she was in college there was a Valentine's Day that fell during midterm exams. She was cramming for an exam and couldn't find any NoDoz.

Laura told her plight to her boyfriend over the phone and soon he was there in her dorm, holding a package tied with red ribbon.

"It was my most different present," Laura said. "He'd brought me his NoDoz."

A local therapist thinks one can judge the emotional health of a person by watching how he or she reacts to Valentine's Day. It's just a theory of hers, but she thinks that when you find someone who pretends Valentine's Day doesn't matter at all--that it's only for children or silly people--you've found someone who's repressing the inner softness everyone has.

"Everyone has a soft side that needs to be loved and appreciated," she said when this reporter said the Valentine present question was a hard one to answer.

"I have a soft side my clients never see and please don't use my name. I don't want the world to know about the teddy bear I've kept for 20 years." The bear was her favorite present.

Her theory about the day is that the healthiest people

Explore and discover at Wompatuck State Park

By John Richardson
Naturalist-Historian

It has long been written that the frontiers of exploration and discovery have been exhausted on this planet. This is not completely true for wherever man has gone he has left his thumb print upon the land. These thumb prints are a rich historical resource that await discovery and interpretation.

For the most part, the history of the United States has its foundation in New England. Now, in what we prefer to think is an advanced age, New England is once again a frontier for exploration and discovery.

The new frontier of exploration and discovery is largely the art of observation coupled with research and archaeological exploration: the exploration for and the discovery of our natural and historic resources.

Beneath the forest canopy of Wompatuck State Park survive the indelible thumb prints of three centuries of use. I have often heard it said the Wompatuck State Park is little more than a large stretch of drab green forest. It is much more than that.

Recently, I have been contracted by the Department of Environmental Management to explore, discover, research and inventory the natural and historic resources that lie hidden away among the park's 3,000 acres.

A prime objective was to map and study the many miles of colonial fieldstone fences (walls) that appeared to criss cross the forest without rhyme or reason.

During the latter part of October 1982, I began a detailed mapping of the walls. I began at the park campground because the walls bisected the campground roads in a way so that I was able to establish an accurate diagram. From this point I was able to branch out in all directions using as my base map the 1942 Navy Land Acquisition Map. As I slowly worked out from the campground in an ever widening circle, it soon became evident that the walls were not haphazard at all.

They began to emerge as a logial and systematic pattern.

As I was mapping the walls I was also recording wildlife, plants, large trees, geology, etc. All these could be almost exactly placed on my master map by relating them to the stone fences. In fact, the stone fences form a gridwork over a large portion of the park which can be used in establishing zones and uses within a park management plan.

One fall evening I was reading that section of the History of Cohasset that dwells upon how the land was divided among the settlers. Each time a large block of wild land was divided into grant lots it was called a division. A substantial part of Wompatuck State Park lies within the Third Division that was authorized by the settlers on January 17, 1670.

I was examining a foldout map of the 1670 survey when I was suddenly aware of the similarity between that survey and the emerging configuration of walls on my layout. As I compared my layout to the 1670 survey I found they were nearly identical.

After a few days of exploration I was convinced that the walls of Wompatuck actually outlined on the ground portions of the 1670 Third Division. Certainly here was one of the oldest dated systems of boundary walls surviving in the United States.

The surveyors map of 1670 showed the long lot lines butting up against the Patent or Old Colony Line. This was a paper line established in 1640 which separated the Pilgrims from the Puritans. This historic line is, with one exception, the earliest artificial boundary located by landmarks in the United States.

I had long known that this historic line ran through the park but its exact location was not believed to be marked because it was not possible to point to an exact spot and say this is the line of 1640 that separated Puritans from Pilgrims. It occurred to me that where the long 1670 stone-fenced lots butted against the Old Colony Line, the line, which was the southerly end of the lots, might be physically indentifiable by a stone wall.

After a field check of my theory, I could state with confidence that Wompatuck State Park and its adjacent neighbor, Whitney Woods, contains one of the most significant and historic complexes of 17 century boundary and agricultural field stone fences now surviving within the United States. This systematic complex of walls is unique and may well attain that level of significance necessary for inclusion on the National Historic Register.

In later articles I will tell you more about my explorations in the Wompatuck woods but this discovery alone should go a long way toward dispelling the notion that these 3,000 acres are nothing more than drab, green woods.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

If you compare the first two budget offerings of Governor Dukakis' second term, certain characteristics become readily apparent besides the huge increase in state spending.

CHARACTERISTICS

First, the Governor's Fiscal Year 1985 budget, as did his FY '84 offering, contains several revenue initiatives which must be passed by the Legislature in order to balance the budget.

Second, Dukakis continues to stick to his contention that no new broad-based taxes will be needed to fuel his budget programs.

And third, the Governor has introduced yet another "Revenue Enforcement and Protection" (REAP) plan to generate revenue needed to balance the state budget. For the second consecutive year, the Commonwealth's citizenry may face increases in fees and taxes totalling well over $100 million.

REVENUE PLANS

The Governor's FY '85 budget balancing act hinges on the passage of four revenue plans amounting to approximately $210 million.

These include a plan to permit the Administration to raise state agency fees by more than $16 million. Once again, my colleagues and I will fight to defeat this initiative. The Legislature has already frozen current fee levels until June 1985. You can rest assured that I will continue to battle to lower fee levels rather than allow the Administration to raise them for revenue purposes.

The Administration is also counting on $20 million in increased deeds excise tax to help balance the budget, as well as $30 million from a new Water and Sewer Authority to be fashioned from the hapless Metropolitan District Commission (MDC). I can only assume that higher rates will be in store for water and sewer users in the MDC district.

But, perhaps the most important revenue initiative the Governor is resting his budget hopes on is this year's version of REAP, dubbed REAP II.

The Governor is counting on at least $133 million in new revenues from REAP II. Not much is known at this time about what this deceptive measure will bear, but what is certain is that its provisions will affect every man, woman and child in the Commonwealth. We will have to pay more in taxes and fees so that the

Terry Murphy's tasting party did more than raise money for the annual March of Dimes fund drive. It became a community effort. The results were a tribute to her infectious enthusiasm and the efforts of Marshfieldites of every nook and cranny of the town. It's a cause dear to the Murphy family's hearts, for 10-year-old April was born with a metabolic disorder and though life-threatening, is now a healthy fifth grader thanks to research made possible by fund raisers such as this. April has been a poster child for the drive and Terry has worked each year on the house-to-house canvass. This year she decided it was time for a new approach and "Taste the Town" was the result of plans that began on New Year's Day. The benefit was held at the Casa Berrini and "they couldn't do enough for us," exults Terry. Milt Searle, the owner and his hostess, Dottie Parziale didn't just donate their function room, the entire staff volunteered their time. Here is a dish which Bev Johnston donated for the buffet called simply

EGGPLANT CASSEROLE

4 medium eggplants
4 large, tangy yellow onions
2 c. stewed tomatoes, crushed
2 lb. container of ricotta cheese
1/2 lb. American or Swiss cheese, cubed
1/2 c. oil
1 egg
Black pepper, garlic powder, salt—each to taste.

Slice eggplant 1/4" thick. Put in pan. Sprinkle with 1/4 c. oil, as well as a sprinkle of garlic powder. Cover with foil and bake 45 min. at 350. At the same time, in a separate pan, slice onions, sprinkle with oil and garlic powder and bake along with eggplant. While these are baking, mix the cheeses with the egg and black pepper. When eggplant and onion are baked, lightly oil a 10 x 15" pan. Make two layers of eggplant, two of onions and top with cheese mix. Top with remaining onion and eggplant. NOTE: Have most of the eggplant and onion under the ricotta mixture. Top layer should consist of remaining onion and eggplant, topped with stewed tomatoes. Cover with foil. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 60 min., depending on how firm you like it. This serves approximately 15.

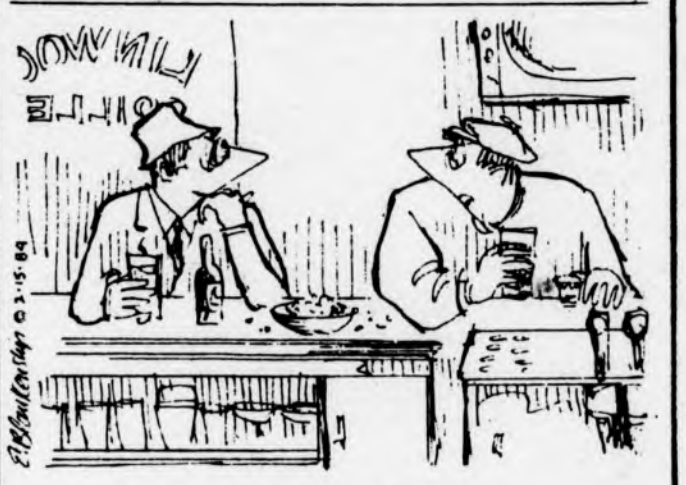
"In every sense of the word it was a success," Terry said. "Most of the local restaurants provided food for the buffet and there were gift certificates from the merchants." Proving that the busiest people are the ones who are always supportive of causes dear to their heart, were local residents such as the Joseph Kennedys of North Marshfield. She was honorary chairman of the event and both appeared at the evening affair and greeted over one hundred guests. In addition to Beverly who just completed work at the Kennedy School of government for her Masters in Public Administration degree, other busy ladies who found time to bake for the fund raiser included Suzanne Allmendinger, chairman of the Marshfield School volunteers. Her plate decorated with a branch of silk leaves made an attractive centerpiece containing goodies which Sue says make a great Easter dessert, too.



CALLA LILIES

3 eggs
3/4 c. sugar
1 c. flour
Pinch of salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. vanilla
Sweetened whipped cream

Beat eggs until very light. Gradually beat in sugar. Combine flour, salt and baking powder. Sift part over egg mixture and fold in gently. Add remainder gradually and fold again. Add vanilla. Drop by spoonful on greased cookie sheet and spread like a pancake. Cook approx. 8 min., until edge is light brown. Remove from sheet one at a time and shape at once into lily (cone shape) by pinching one end together. Make only four at a time, as they must be shaped at once before they start to cool. Cool on rack. When cool, fill with sweetened whipped cream and place a yellow jelly bean in center of cream for authentic look. This makes approx. 12-15 large cones, or approx. 25 mini-cones, ideal for finger food dessert. To make whipped cream filling: Place in chilled bowl with chilled beaters: 1 c. chilled heavy cream, 1/4 c. sifted confectioners sugar and 1 tsp. vanilla. Place all ingredients in bowl and beater until stiff.

Drainage Advisory Committee

Here are recent minutes of the Drainage Advisory Committee.

Diane Sullivan has been contracted by Matthew Marr of 662 Jerusalem Rd. regarding flooding conditions in his yard. Sullivan visited the location and visited again with Walter Ross Jan. 8. Mr. Marr has a serious problem and in our preliminary discussion we have agreed that some involvement with the Town will probably be necessary.

Diane Sullivan was contacted by Mrs. Clayborn of 31 Howe Road and visited the site and visited again with Walter Ross Jan. 8.

Mrs. Clayborn has a problem with water in her basement if the catch basin in front of her home is clogged or if the outlet (located above ground and across the street from her) is clogged.

In walking this site and following the water course, we observed this problem is related to the foregoing Marr problem and we must deal with them together at our next meeting.

A letter was sent to Selectmen to remind them to confer with Robert Dennis about notifying the Drainage Advisory Committee if a potential drainage problem may occur with new construction

American graffiti: the alpha and the omega

By Lois Martin

Maybe it started in the caves. Maybe the little woman was left home alone too long with her young as the Neanderthal mate scouted the surrounding forests for fodder.

Maybe that's when she started drawing on the walls.

I'm given pause on this subject because there's been some hoopla lately, revived hoopla really, about the condition of girls rooms, bathrooms in public places.

Certainly this is a testy subject. Not only will we be required, if we address this reality, to mention toilets, we must further be articulate and tasteful (tricky).

Let us have at it.

In my primeval grammar school we called the bathrooms the "basement," because that's where the bathrooms were. There was a vent of sorts that ran across the top of the wall between the boys and girls rooms. Chippy Wyman, we believed, was constantly standing on another boy's shoulders peeping through that vent.

That aside, we did not have artwork that was memorable.

Somehow in the interim generation a fettish has developed for writing all over facades, with particular vehemence shown on bathroom walls.

And if it seems I'm suggesting girls do more of this than boys, it's because that's what I'm given to understand. Besides my personal experience has been limited to the Ladies Room.

There has to be something in us that must speak, express itself. And apparently for want of courage or opportunity in the common forum of communication, young women give vent to expression using bathroom and cubicle walls for their medium.

All right, maybe it's the old broads like me who are doing the graffiti but there are words there I'm not sure we know how to use in context.

Last weekend I was at a hotel and thrice had the occasion to visit the lobby Ladies Room (I hope this will go no further). There, written bold as could be were these words: "Joe doesn't love you."

That was a lot for me to deal with. To balance that negative message, I read the rest of the wall. Truth is, had I undertaken to read the entire room, I'd have had something comparable to a novel the size of "Gone With the Wind."

There were the usual hearts, the implicit messages and a few drawings.

The second time, though, there was that same scrawl, "Joe doesn't love you." Still.

I've always believed that every human being has to believe he or she is raising the devil now and then. That goes for any age. Call it fun, letting your hair down, keeping it in a self-protective forum, each of us would like to think we're aberating now and then from strict compliance with routine responsibility.

How scribbling in bathrooms serves as a release for that urge is beyond me. I do a lot of writing. None of it is recorded on a bathroom cubicle. Anyone with intuitive or trained psychological understanding of the satisfaction gleaned in restroom messages is invited to inform the rest of us.

Meanwhile . . . Joe, you turkey. I never heard you were such a hot item yourself. And the minute I get to meet you, I'm gonna let you have it straight. I won't be subtle enough to write it on a bathroom wall. I can only take so many depleting non love messages in a weekend this close to Valentine's Day.

☐I didn't say the guy didn't enjoy playing the trombone in the jazz orchestra. I merely said he went back to his job in the boiler factory because he couldn't stand the noise.

☐Havelock Ellis once spoke of "the awful intimacy of marriage."

☐I didn't say Michelangelo was conceited. I merely said that when he completed his bust of Moses, he said, "Speak." Which reminds me that Richard Wagner, the composer, taught his parrot to say, "Richard Wagner, you are a great man." And D'Annunzio, the great Italian poet, once returned a letter addressed to the greatest poet in Italy. "I am not the greatest poet in Italy," he wrote. "I am the greatest poet in the world."

School Committee briefs ...

High School budget requests

The School Committee recently heard requests from two high school department heads for capital equipment. Home Economics Head Patricia Wunshel asked for $1,600 for new gas and electric ranges and two sewing machines. School supt. Eugene Crowell recommended she settle for $1,290.

However, Crowell didn't favor spending $1,025 for a bassoon, $725 for a tympani and $1,000 for a polyphonic synthesizer.

Overnight trips approved

The School Committee recently approved two overnight trips for high school students. One will be an exchange concert with Monson High School in April and another will be a trip to Newport, Rhode Island for the Heritage Music Festival in May. Last year both the concert and jazz bands placed first in their categories at the Heritage Festival. This year the senior chorus will also compete. The Monson High School trip to Cohasset may be changed because of a scheduling conflict with the Annual Town Meeting, April 7.

Bus stop complaint

The School Committee does not agree with a request from Paul and Ann Quinton to change what they call is an unsafe bus stop.

The Quintons live near the end of Fair Oaks Lane where the road forms a cul-de-sac. Their child catches a bus at the corner of Fair Oaks and Sohier Street. The walk, said the Quintons, is long, curvy and dangerous especially in the winter where there are no sidewalks and the bus stop is at the crest of two hills.

The Quintons asked for the bus to come to the cul-de-sac.

Committee member Joe Nedrow who also lives on Fair Oaks Lane did not agree about the safety risk and added if an exception is made, it will set a precedent.

Chairman Dick Conley said he studied the route and saw no safety problem. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the two reasons for going to the end of a cul-de-sac were to pick up Kindergarten children or to allow the bus to turn around. Crowell did say he would research the route.

Personnel actions

The School Committee accepted with deep regret the resignation of Deer Hill Music Teacher Kathryn Fox; the leave of absence for Lunchroom worker Marie Byrne; the maternity leave of Anne Marie League and the appointments of Phyllis Grayken as a full-time Bookkeeper and part time Speech Therapist Jane Boomer at the Osgood School.

Deer Hill budget

In an earlier discussion, School Supt. Eugene Crowell asked the School Committee to upgrade Marjorie Murphy to a full-time librarian at the school. This would allow the system's head librarian Elizabeth Glasfield to spend more time at the Osgood School. School Principal Ken Ekberg also asked the committee to spend money to replace the curtains in the cafeteria and the stage and an increase in the maintenance budget to replace worn-out tile on portions of the floor in three rooms.

Outdoor program banned

The Deer Hill Outdoor School program will not be budgeted next year. In the past fifth-graders went to places like Thompson Island in Boston Harbor to study outdoor science or to camp overnight. Earlier staff told administrators they were concerned about weather conditions and the lack of extra compensation.

Sports Center clinic

Hubert Vogelsinger, former Boston Minuteman professional coach, will provide free instructional soccer clinics, free tee shirts and prizes to area youth and school players Feb. 21 and Feb. 23 at the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham.

Exact clinic times and dates are available by calling the Center at 740-1105.

Governor will have the money to hire an additional 1500 new employees.

It just seems that every time Governor Dukakis says that "there will be no new taxes," a conveniently disguised REAP plan is implemented. As far as I can tell, REAP is just another way of saying broad-based tax.

Congratulations, Governor. You are about to break your no-new-tax-promise for the second year in a row.

WHITE HOUSE EVENT

I attended a series of one-day briefings for Republican women elected officials at the White House February 3, which included lunch with President Reagan.

Some 75 women from 12 states attended briefing sessions with Vice-President Bush, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce, Jr., Commerce Secretary Malcom Baldrige, Education Under Secretary Gary L. Jones, and other Administration officials.

The highlight of the day was lunch with President Ronald Reagan in the state Dining Room in the White House.

Feb. 2, the women were invited to attend a Campaign '84 briefing with Reagan-Bush '84 Campaign Director Ed Rollins and other key campaign officials.

The women elected officials that attended were from the following states: Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

This meeting was held so that these women officials can receive firsthand information on administration policies that affect their constituents.

I was amazed that President Reagan has not aged in office as all past Presidents did. He is very direct and his sincerity and compassion are very obvious. I also was very surprised to see so many women in under Secretary positions along with Secretaries Dole and Heckler. It was a fantastic experience.

A conversation with 'Forty Cats' director

By David Wadsworth

Recently we met with the veteran actor and Director Harry Heineman of Scituate and talked about his forthcoming Cohasset Dramatic Club production of playwright Jay Allen's comedy "Forty Carats."

The play will be staged at the Cohasset Town Hall Friday and Saturday, March 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 4 at 2 p.m.

Harry is returning once again to the theater world of Directing, followinq several appearances as an actor in recent Dramatic Club shows.

After a long rehearsal with the cast of "Forty Carats" he spoke enthusiastically of the new production.

"Directing is great fun when you have such a talented cast as we have for this present show, they are a happy group, and that, in a sense, is what community theater is all about."

When asked whether he preferred acting or directing, Harry, who has long experienced both before and behind the stage footlights, said, "Its impossible to say, because each has its own joys and pleasures. Directing is exciting, for it gives you a chance to play god,- on a liminted scale, of course, to tell the actors where they should be at each given moment in the play:- where to cross, where to stand or sit, to pick up an apple and put it down, and so on.

"The Director must be sensitive to each performer/and to help him or her through the early, awkward times when script is unfamiliar and before each individual character is built from the lines given by the playwright.

"The Director must keep in mind the whole ensemble from opening curtain to closing, and strive to achieve the best possible realization of each of the play's characters."

His experience in Theater began with a period of study at the Bread Loaf School of English (the Middlebury College Graduate School of English) in the late 1940's, and he has been at it ever since.

For two years he supervised dramatic productions at Monson Academy, and throughout the 1950's was active with the Belmont Dramatic Club.

It was there that he directed, among others, plays of Noel Coward and Thornton Wilder, and appeared in numerous on-stage roles.

At Belmont, Harry wrote and directed an original musical called "Nothing So Important." He also appeared as King Priam in an original play written for the Tufts Arena Theater.

As for acting, Harry adds, "Its thoroughly enjoyable, for the actor can concentrate on the development of a particular role, without having to be directly concerned with the myriad of details that demand the constant attention of a director. The rapport with an audience, not to mention with your fellow actors and actresses, gives a satisfaction not like any other."

On the South Shore, Harry has been active with the Curtain Call Theater, where he played in "Night Of January 16th," and with the Scituate Theater Guild both as an actor and direcror.

For the Cohasset Dramatic Club, he has Directed "A Thousand Clowns," "The Children Hour," and the comedy "Sly Fox."

His acting accomplishments on the Town Hall stage include roles in such plays as Anderson's "Joan of Lorraine," in the comedy "Table Manners," and in the lead role in the drama "Uncle Vanya."

Recently, Harry has been seen in the contemporary play "Scenes From American Life" and as Marley's Ghost in this winter's production of Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

He said he's "having a ball" with his newest project, preparing "Forty Carats," a scintillating comedy about spring-summer romances.

"Comedy," the director observes, "is every bit as stimulating and difficult to do as the most serious play, but its great fun."

When Harry isn't acting or directing, he keeps his hand in by writing plays. During community theater's off season in the summer, when he's not teaching, his favorite passtime is his "other hobby," tending his Scituate garden and greenhouse.

Tickets for "Forty Carats" are $4 each, available at the Town Hall box office at times of the production and in advance at Fleming's Hardware, Cohaset Center.

Senior Citizens are invited free to attend the final dress rehearsal, Tuesday, Feb. 28 at 8 p.m.

Scholarships

The Pilgrim Skating Arena, Inc., a non-profit family recreation facility, announces its scholarships awards — 15 awards at $1,000 each to high school seniors and returning veterans of the South Shore Community.

This year the Scholarship Committee's decisions will be based on the attitude and effort the students have displayed in the classroom and as members of their high school community.

The scholarship awards will be made available to graduating seniors seeking to further their education

Application forms for the scholarships may be obtained at the Pilgrim Arena Pro Shop on or after Feb. 13. They must be picked up and signed for by the student applicant.

All completed applications must be mailed or delivered to the arena no later than March 31.

Central Cemetery meeting

The annual meeting of the Cohasset Central Cemetery will be held in Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House Saturday, Feb. 25 at 4 p.m.

According to Section 4 of Article VII of the by-laws of the Cemetery, "each owner shall be a member of the Association and shall have one vote as such member at each regular or special meeting of the Association which is duly called."

The meeting will hear the reports of Committee chairmen; hear the report of the Treasurer and to act on the budget for the coming year; hear the report of the President; hear the report of the Nominating Committee and to Elect directors; elect Nominating. Committee by ballot from nominations made by the Board of Directors and will act on any other business which may properly come before the meeting.

According to the by-laws, a quorum at Annual Meeting must be 15 members.

'Share-a-Classic' at Library

Two "Share-a-Classic" programs will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library during February school vacation week.

These programs scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 21 and Thursday, Feb. 23 at 1:30 p.m. are for children 7 years old and up and will last approximately an hour.

"Homer Price," written and illustrated by Robert McCloskey is a funny story of a boy growing up in Centerburg, a small town where the most preposterous things keep happening.

But nothing fazes Homer Price—not the puzzling problem of a musical mousetrap or the extravagant affair of the doughnuts.

This story will be read in two parts by Weezie Welz.

Troop 28 news

By Linda Farray

Congratulations to Rich Silvia who is now the new Committee Chairman of Troop No. 28. (Rich's son is Mathew Silvia one of our 1st Year Scouts). The past Acting Committee chairman was John Bryant.

Merle Brown will be Camp-Master at Camp Child Feb. 24, 25 & Feb. 26 and at Camp Squanto on March 2, 3 and 4.

The Scout Law contains the twelve codes of conduct which is the foundation for scouting. Each scout tries to live up to the scout laws.

One code is: The scout is reverent to God and the scout shows he is faithful in his religious duties.

He respects the belief of others. Members of Troop No. 28 visited the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church and the Temple Beth Shalom in Hull. The scouts learn about other religions and show their good community relations. The boys from Troop No. 28 who participated were also joined by Hull's Scout's Troop No. 20.

The scouts will be visiting other neighborhood churches in the future.

Troop No. 28 scouts are planning a trip to Washington D.C. form June 24 through June 29. The boys will visit the capital, Congress, Arlington National Cemetery and other sites of interest. The boys will be busy with various fund raising projects in the future to help defray expenses.

School Committee briefs . . .

Cafeteria cleanup

Student Representative to the School Committee John Replogle told the committee Monday night the new method of keeping the junior-senior high school cafeteria clean was successful in its first day of operation.

"The cafeteria has been an eyesore," John said; so five members of the Student Council set up a program to try to solve the problem. The week of Feb. 13 to 17 will be a trial period to measure the success of the changes.

John said part of the problem developed before 10 a.m. when seniors have free periods in the cafeteria and may buy food.

The windows where dirty trays and dishes are returned were closed for part of this time, and students were leaving their trays on the tables, he said.

Lunch program funds were used to purchase six new barrels. All the barrels are now placed in different spots throughout the cafeteria. Before they were all at one end of the cafeteria, John said.

In addition, custodians now walk around to the various tables with the barrels during the four lunch periods.

Because many students were leaving trays on the tables, students now pay a 10 cent deposit on the tray when they purchase their meal. It is now mandatory that a student buying a meal takes a tray.

When the student returns the tray, his 10 cent deposit is refunded.

Before this week, five minutes were allotted between each lunch period. Now the five-minute break between each lunch period is eliminated and students have 25 rather than 20 minutes to eat lunch, John said.

This does not detract from classroom time, merely from time in the halls, he said.

When there are five minutes left in each lunch period, a warning bell sounds in the cafeteria only. No lunches can be purchased from that point until the next lunch period begins five minutes later.

John said Tuesday that the second day of this policy was more successful than the first day. If the improvement in the cleanliness of the cafeteria continues, students may be awarded a free food item, such as a dessert, once a week, he said.

Gjesteby requests correction

School Committte member Martha Gjesteby requested an amendment to a meeting's minutes which caused some discussion at Monday night's meeting.

Gjesteby asked that a statement she made at a Jan. 23 meeting be added to the minutes "for the record."

Following discussion, the committee voted 4 to 1, with committee member Joe Nedro voting against the motion, to include in the minutes, "Mrs. Gjesteby said for the record she wanted to state she does not peruse information in teachers' folders as an individual."

The statement was made in the context of a discussion between School Supt. Eugene Crowell and the committee, she said.

Committee Secretary Diana Kornet said she had intentionally omitted the statement from the minutes. Kornet was afraid someone looking at the minutes might get the impression the rest of the committee looks at teachers' files, which it doesn't, she said.

The point of disagreement was whether the statements and actions of individual members of the committee should appear in the minutes. Nedrow said the minutes aren't "a forum to put in individual opinions."

"Anyone on the committee can request something be put on the record," Gjesteby said. "I just can't believe this discussion."

Committee member Jack Langmaid said, "I don't like to make a fight over something like this. I support it because I don't want to fight you on it."

Langmaid confirmed that Gjesteby did make the statement and did ask that it be put on the record at the Jan. 23 meeting.

PSO donation

The Parent School Organization donated $86 to the School Dept. toward the purchase of an Osgood School library card file. The School Committee accepted the gift Monday night. The money came from raffle proceeds.

CTA scholarship

The Cohasset Teachers' Association will be offering a member of the senior class a scholarship based on academic excellence and financial need.

The School Committee accepted the scholarship with gratitude Monday night.

The CTA had previously offered a scholarship to a student who planned to go into education, but discontinued the practice when no students applied for the scholarship, CTA President Christine Collins said. There has been no CTA scholarship for a number of years.

The exact amount of the scholarship has not been determined. The amount depends on how much money is collected from the members, Collins said.

Board okays NJ trip

The School Committee approved a trip by members of the junior-senior high AFS club to Plainsborough, NJ March 7 to 11.

The trip will cost $56 per student, and there will be no cost to the School Dept.

A maximum of 30 students will take the trip, and there will be two male and one female chaperones.

George Fortin, coordinator of the trip, said the trip has been enjoyable for the students in the past. "There's been a lot of tears" when the students from the two schools say goodbye, Fortin said. "There's still a lot of letter writing going back and forth."

Parents plead for arts

After a brief discussion on the art budget for Fiscal Year 1985, the School Committe was about to continue to the next agenda item when a few parents requested more attention be given to the arts.

In the junior-senior high school, there is one art teacher who teaches five classes.

Three are exploratory or general for junior high school students. For high school students there is a photography course and and advanced art course.

Referring to an elementary-level arts program sponsored by the Parent School Organization one parent said, "Our program is a $5,000 program.

"It would be wonderful if we could get some support."

Parents said the committee has to actively support the arts if they are going to become important to students.

Board member Diana Kornet said the committee endorses the arts, but the School Dept. can't provide courses if students don't sign up for them.

If there's student interest, offerings will be increased, members said. Committee Chairman Dick Conley said, "We restored the music program to a full-time basis from half-time."

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said, "Don't direct it against the school committee because it's not of their making. The purse strings are not in this room."

"We understand the budget limitations," PSO President Sue McNamara said. "The PSO would like to see the school committee adopt a policy integrating art as part of the curriculum."

COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE

"Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician"

The Chiropractor is sometimes overlooked in the health care field, this is very unfortunate because thorough training and knowledge can help alleviate a great number of aches and pains.

In this area we suggest you stop by at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE located at 760 Cushing Highway, phone 383-1211

Headaches, lower back pain, tight muscles, back spasms, and arm and leg pain are a few of the ailments that can be alleviated through the science of Chiropractic. The Chiropractor through spinal examination can find and adjust the vertebral misalignments in order that spinal nerves may be free from pressure.

Chiropractic has been practiced for over 88 years. The concept is healing based on the mechanical and physical approach to pain and disease. There are over 30,000 Chiropractors treating over 130 million people in the United States today. Chiropractic is now accepted as part of the Federal Governments Health Program. As an added service to their patients this office accepts payments directly from your insurance firm.

The editors of this 1984 Dunn's Business Review recommend this fine Chiropractor to all of our readers and would like to mention that Dr. Neill graduated in December 1980 from the NEW YORK CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE.

Both boys and girls varsity basketball teams have qualified for the State Tournament.

More money for soccer

The School Committee heard a request from a handful of parents Monday night that more money be spent in the school soccer program.

Soccer Boosters Club President Russ Reidy said there's an inequity between the amount of money spent on soccer in relation to some of the other sports.

"I certainly hope with the number of students participating in junior high athletics that those programs will stay intact." He requested the School Dept. "funnel money into areas where there's high student participation."

In response to this request, board member Jack Langmaid said, "We've run out of places to play soccer. We don't have enough fields."

"I'm ashamed that Russ Reidy had to bring this to our attention again," board member Diana Kornet said. "I think we should spend more money on soccer.

"It is a disservice to the citizens when we don't have more soccer coaches in this system."

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said $475 was appropriated for soccer supplies in FY '84, and $800 is included for soccer supplies in FY '85.

Reidy said, "That's great."

of a 9 year-old wrestling mat at $8,000 and four new tennis nets at $169 each.

Chatterton also said the department needs a new home plate and a new pitcher's mound. He says they are continually stolen. "We've even cemented them in with a 100 pound block of cement and they're gone," he said.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the School Dept. will have difficulty funding the athletics programs in the future. In light of this, Chatterton was asked to present the advantages and disadvantages of users' fees.

Twenty five percent of nearby communities charge a users' fee to students participating in sports, he said. If Cohasset were to charge a fee, each team member would be charged from $20 to $35, Chatterton said.

If a student plays more than one sport each year (such as field hockey, gymnastics and spring track), he would pay the users' fee only once.

In addition, no more than two family members will be charged a users' fee in the same year. Chatterton said Hanover instituted a fee system this school year and collected $7,500 in the fall.

However, participation in junior varsity and freshmen teams has declined at the schools which charge a users' fee, he said.

"I would hope this would be a last resort," committee member Joe Nedrow said. He cited a nearby school with a users' fee which has to fund a half-time clerical position to handle the fee system.

The committee agreed to avoid initiating users' fees unless there was no alternative.

In another matter, Chatterton gave the committee an update on the status of the South Shore League.

This year, the participation of 12 schools in the league has allowed for the league to be divided into small school and large school divisions, he said. Therefore, Cohasset has competed against other small schools and has done well, he said.

But next year, Holbrook will be leaving the league and the only town interested in joining is Sandwich, he said.

Most if the towns in the South Shore League are opposed to Sandwich's admittance because the school doesn't have a football team and because of its distance, he said.

Next year, if a town with a football team is not admitted to the league, Hull wouldn't have a Thanksgiving day football game.

Because Thanksgiving day football games usually bring in some $10,000 in proceeds, Hull is staunchly opposed to Sandwich's acceptance in the league, Chatterton said.

Following this one and a half hour discussion, parent Karin Bartow said, "The basketball team has just won a title and I can't believe nobody has mentioned it."

Chatterton then said this season may be the first one in the history of Cohasset where both the girls' and the boys' basketball teams made the championships at the same year.

Valentine's gifts . . .

are the ones who give Valentines without gauging whether or not they will get one in return.

(Have you ever had a Valentine in your pocket or pocketbook that you didn't give because you realized the other person didn't have one for you?)

"And somehow those (the unself-conscious givers) are always the people who do get great tokens of affection on Valentine's Day," the therapist said. "Not necessarily expensive tokens but something that says love."

Lest all you people who didn't want to expose your secrets feel I was being unfair, the best gift I ever got for Valentine's Day came along in 1973. Someone very special gave me a dinner ring, and all I had for him was a card. And I kept the card in my purse until I knew he had something for me.

I didn't want to feel foolish, handing over my heart to someone who might not have felt the same way.

Seahawks report . . .

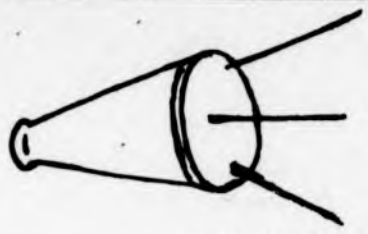
The Seahawks youth hockey teams enjoyed a successful weekend as they had their final series of competition prior to starting the State Championship play-downs.

Not only will the play-downs start Saturday, but several of the teams will enter tournament play next week as well.

In the final tune-up the Squirt "A's" soundly defeated Neponset 6-3. Billy Tibbetts led the "Hawks" with a hat trick (three goals) and Jon Mahoney added two goals with John Resnick completing the scoring. Assists were credited to Dan Cohen, Kevin Mulcahey, Mahoney, Resnick and Tibbetts.

The Squirt "C's" played one of their finest games losing a heartbreaker to Plymouth 1-0. Mat DiFiore was superb in net, but unfortunately, so was the Plymouth goalie.

The game was 0-0 until halfway through the third period. In addition to DiFiore's performance, Robby Lawrence, Matt McGuirk and John Hurley drew praises from coach Averil for their strong efforts.



The PeeWee "A's" avenged one of their two earlier defeats by soundly beating Neponset 6-3. Paul Norton earned the "hat trick" with Mike Richardson scoring twice and Brian Pompeo adding the final goal. Assists were attributed to Pat Glennon (3), Erik Steverman and Brian Pompeo.

The PeeWee "B's" also turned in a strong performance, defeating Milton 5-3. Chris Ventolieri led the scorers with two goals, one of which was a penalty shot and Bobby Divito, Mark Resnick and Greg Neville accounted for the rest of the scoring.

In the PeeWee "C" game, Damon Parsons earned his first shutout of the season in an 8-0 defeat of Pembroke. In addition to Parsons' superb netminding, David Flanigan spearheaded the offense with three goals (two unassisted). Other scorers included Mike Murphy, Jeff Montague and Paul Marks.

'JULIUS CAESAR'

Cohasset High School students will view a 45-minute production of "Julius Caesar" Monday, Feb. 27 performed by Shakespeare & Company of Lenox. The Company will also present a lecture and demonstration which will focus on the history of the Elizabethean era, Shakespeare's plays, and voice, movement and stage combat techniques.

The program was coordinated by the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee and is made possible by a grant from Yankee Oil & Gas Incorporated.

The ninth grade Humanities students have just completed studying "Julius Caesar" and will begin preparing for their own performance of the play. The tenth grade Humanities students and other English classes have been invited to view the performance and lecture.

Shakespeare & Company is a nationally known classical theatre company established six years ago. Their purpose is to "re-establish the universal appeal of classical theatre." Their Schools Program provides a solid introduction to William Shakespeare and the classical theatre for students.

ESSAY CONTEST

Cohasset students in Grades 10, 11 and 12 have until March 1 to enter the Colonial Dames Essay Contest.

Interested students are encouraged to write a 500-word essay on the topic: "The Future of Democracy in Our Country."

Entries will be judged by members of the Colonial Dames on content and form. The winning author will receive a week's trip to Washington D.C. with attendance at the "Congressional Seminar."

Applications are available in Cohasset High's English Department Office.

PSO'S PHONE-A-THON

Phones will be ringing all over Cohasset on Thursday evening, March 1, in an attempt by the Parent School Organization to raise funds.

Between the hours of 7 and 9:30 p.m. approximately 50 PSO volunteers will be calling each of Cohasset's 800 school families in the hope of soliciting money pledges which will allow the PSO to continue and expand its assistance to the Cohasset Schools.

PSO president, Sue McNamera, hopeful the Phone-a-thon will generate much needed funds, said "The budgetary limitations imposed by Proposition 2½ threaten the quality of public education in Cohasset. Concerned parents are asking how they can help. The Parent School Organization offers the means. By contributing time, talent, and money the PSO can help blunt the effects of Prop 2½."

SCHOOL VACATION

School vacation for all Cohasset Public School students begins Feb. 20 and ends Feb. 24. Classes resume Monday, Feb. 27.

CHS SENIORS REGISTER

Over 80 new voters were registered by town officials during a special assembly held in the Cohasset High School Auditorium Tuesday, Feb. 7.

The new voters were seniors—all member of the class of 1984. The voter-registration assembly was sponsored by the Cohasset Chapter of The League of Women Voters.

Mr. Edward F. Sheehan, Chairman of The High School Social Studies Department, served as master of ceremonies during the morning assembly.

The first speaker in the program was Mrs. Jean Cotton, a representative of the local League of Women Voters. In her brief talk she outlined the main goals of her organization.

Mrs. Cotton stated that, "It is our hope that every citizen become an informed voter and an active participant in government."

Mr. Sheehan then recognized the organizational work of Mrs. Mary Larson, Voter Service chairperson of the L.W.V. It was Mrs. Larson who made the voter registration assembly a reality.

Assistant Town Counsel John J. Slater then outlined the duties, rights, and responsibilities of 18 year olders. He informed the assembled Cohasset Seniors that their right to vote was insured when Congress and the states passed the 26th Amendment in 1971.

"You now have the full legal capacity to make a contract," he said. "But you also have the duty to live up to all obligations mentioned in that contract."

After the speakers, Bertram J. Pratt, the chairman of the Cohasset Board of Registrars, explained the duties of his office and the process of voter registration in Cohasset. He then assisted 82 students to register to vote.

CONDOMINIUM MARKETING DISCUSSED

Ms. Linda Dixon recently spoke to the Business Management class on the subject of condominium marketing. She operates her own marketing service, concentrating on residential development.

The discussion included developing, advertising, designing and marketing of condominiums. Since most of our students live in traditional one-family homes, the class was exposed to alternative living situations such as time-sharing and use of multiple condominiums in different areas.

CAUGHT!

One hot, humid, lazy summer day in July, I found the water more enjoyable than usual. My swimming was pointless and aimless.

That day the sights of the sea were extraordinarily clear. The colors in the coral reef were dazzling. I watched schools of tiny bright fish darting in and out of the jagged reef. A large starfish was indulging himself on a clam and was trying to eat it. Four giant stingrays were playing tag beneath me.

I swam toward a massive bed of seaweed. Unexpectedly a silvery streak appeared in front of me. I lunged for it and dived with it into the seaweed.

Suddenly, I knew something was not right. I felt a sharp pain on my left side. I was no longer under my own power! I tried to dive deeper, but I was fighting against a strange force. I felt myself being pulled back towards the coral reef. No matter how much I strained I could not move forward. I was certain that I would be pulled out in the open ocean beyond the reef. I made one last attempt to escape but I could fight no more. My body was aching and I thought my lungs would burst.

My last memory was being hauled into a boat. In the background I could hear questioning shouts, "Is it a keeper?"

(The following letter was sent to Jack Leary, counselor at the Junior/Senior High.-Ed. Note)

Dear Mr. Leary,

After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1979, you've all probably lost touch of whatever happened to me as my family moved away from Cohasset. I thought perhaps that you, or whomever is chairing the Counseling Department after this amount of time, might be interested in what happened to me!

I am proud to say that I successfully graduated from Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N.Y. in May of '83. I completed a Bachelor's of Art degree in Theology and a minor in music. After graduation I moved to the San Francisco Bay area to live with my father. I have since attained a position with the San Mateo County of Education, working as a tutor with learning disabled high school students. This fact brings me to the main point of my communique.

After returning to the public education system and seeing its status, I reflect on my own experience as a student in a public high school. And I can say absolutely without reservation that I was particularly lucky and privileged to have had such a thorough and caring education at Cohasset High School. I read books and plays and contemplated ideas with teachers that even some of my college associates had not explored by graduation day. I particularly feel grateful towards the Alternative School and Al Macdonald, in whom I feel I have a friend for life. I also regard with fondness and great respect Ron Emmons, Joe Federico, and a teacher who I remember as Mr. Lucas; a bit of a grouch, but always a dedicated artist.

The arts are disintegrating in public schools here. Creative imagination is scarce. One-third of the kids can't read. Another third don't want to. As for me, I try to instill in them a drop of enthusiasm that I received in abundance from my teachers.

Thank you all for giving me a smoother path to walk upon.

Chamber could be a boon to Cohasset

Chamber vice-president John Hagerty is hoping the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will be both a catalyst to town growth and an advocate to residents.

Hagerty, vice-president of public relations and president of Cohasset Colonials said the chamber will offer reactions to town issues such as sign control, reassessment, rezoning sewer and water issues.

He said the chamber will help to better the business climate but also serve residents who don't have a business in town.

Seminars will be offered on education, tax planning and speed reading.

"To promote the health of the town's economy, services and community activities, the chamber will bring people together to learn how federal, state and local issues affect us . . . To help a newcomer or a long time resident discover the town's educational and recreationalresources, to make sure Cohasset receives what it deserves, the Chamber will always be there," said Hagerty.

The chamber hopes to provide a forum to promote commerical, civic and economic town growth; supply new business and residents with information on a regular basis; offer low cost medical insurance; provide a government liaison between the local, state and federal level; compile economic profiles on Cohasset and other South Shore communities and assisting the town's preparation of applications for state and federal funding.

Cheating ...

performance and future ambition. Parents can make their son or daughter feel like a failure over a poor test grade. As a result, many students resort to cheating to satisfy others' expectations.

The most unfortunate aspect of cheating is that it's contagious. Once someone starts cheating, other students become compelled to cheat because they realize their disadvantage. Even the very best students will cheat in order to compete with their own classmates. I guess people never outgrow the "cheat, cheat, never beat!" theory. Anyway, as more people cheat, more non-cheaters are dragged into it; the effect is cumulative.

Traditionally, Cohasset High is an extremely fine school. If we are to maintain this school's high standards of excellence, then the problem of cheating must be dealt with openly and effectively.

This article was written as a result of Mr. Streeler's proposal to institute an honor code at C.H.S. He asked the Student Council to investigate the problem and determine if it was necessary to use the code. I have taken it upon myself to fulfill the Principal's request and I regret any offense I may have caused in doing so.

The Principal, several teachers, and myself feel that an honor code will effectively reduce the level of cheating in the school. Details on what an honor code is and how it works will published in a future Lamplight

In Case You Were Wondering ...

By Julia Sechen

Though the origin of Valentine's Day is uncertain, many people attribute it to St. Valentine, who lived in the decades before 269 A.D. He developed his reputation during the reign of Claudius, the Goth. The emperor forbade his people to marry since they then refused to leave their homes to fight wars. Feeling compassion for the young people, St. Valentine offered to marry many couples secretly. St. Valentine was soon jailed for not preaching about Roman gods. Quickly, he became friends with the jailor's daughter, who was blind. He prayed for her and restored her sight. Before he was beheaded on February 14, 269, he wrote a letter to the girl. In his blood, he signed, "From Your Valentine." This may have started the tradition of sending messages on this day. Romans had previously designated February 15 as a celebration of Lupercus, the god supposed to protect the city of Rome from wolves. As more Romans became Christians, the holiday honoring Lurercus was altered to honor St. Valentine on February 14. So, in honor of St. Valentine, we hope you sent your valentine a special valentine.

ZZ Top "Eliminator"

By Lisa Morse

Before the New Wave bands like "X," The B-52's, and Split Enz, are some old favorites like ZZ Top. ZZ Top includes three band members: Billy Gibbons, Dusty Hill, and Frank Beard. This band started in the 1970's, then slightly faded out. But, now they're back and better than ever, with "Eliminator."

Eliminator contains some of the best arrangements by ZZ Top. "Gimme All Your Lovin," "Got Me Under Pressure," and "Sharp Dressed Man" were the three songs which brought ZZ Top back into the spotlight. WBCN voted "Eliminator" as the fourth top selling album of 1983, and it's still going strong.

Although such undesirable titles as "Legs," "Thug," and "Bad Girl" are found, the songs show some of the best guitar work around. This three member band has been going strong for years and probably will continue to jam out well organized rock.

If you have yet to hear "Eliminator," buy it and listen to some of the best rock around.

On Warner Bros. Records Limited.

Never Cry Wolf - A Change From The Ordinary

By Jim Martin and Mason Sandell

Tired of the same types of movies playing at the theaters these days? It seems that the majority of films produced today are teen-age sex films, sci-fi outer space duds, or super-spy-private-eye police stories where one can enjoy the serenity of seeing death by gunshot; not a pleasant sight.

If this kind of cinematography no longer incites your attention as before (in other words, if you are now getting tired of seeing countless guys peeping in the windows of girls' rooms or showers, or if you're bored with entirely plotless stories showing people partying), then have we got a movie for you! Even if you have trouble resisting those fun-loving movies, try to see this one. After passing up various temptations such as "Hot Dog" and "Scarface" to see this film, we were happy that we did.

The name of the movie is "Never Cry Wolf." It is about a man who braves the Alaskan cold on a government project. He is supposed to discover why the carribou of the Northern Tundra have greatly diminshed in population and if the wolves are responsible. Although this film lacks the violence and the action-packed suspense of others recently put out, it provides two hours of worthwhile watching. The story begins with a man named Tyler (played by Charles Martin Smith) beginning his journey in the North. The story is neatly organized as a journal of his days in the vast wilderness. After being dropped off alone, in the middle of nowhere. He begins his observation of a wolf pack and in particular one wolf which he names "George." He becomes attached to the wolves, the environment and especially his work. During his stay for many months, the audience sees many effectual and humorous adventures of Tyler and the wolves he observes. With breath taking views of the mountains and Plains of the North and relaxing music, the movie gives a feeling of warmth and peaceful solitude in this serene wilderness. It's a place where most of us, at one time or another, have wanted to go to be alone. It's a change from the fast paced, action-packed motion pictures today, but is hardly a bore. We recommend that you go and see "Never Cry Wolf," savor the experiences that changed this man, but most of all, sit back, relax, and enjoy it.

New Wave Band Raves

By J. Kuntz

Buying records is a semi-major investment these days, so I have compiled a list of records from what's heading toward platinum to what's heading for the Bargin Bin in Woolworth's.

Eurythmics—TOUCH: One thing about Eurythmics, they're weird. Especially lead singer Ann Lennox, who boasts a Lone Ranger mask and bright orange crewcut on the album cover. This commercial gimmick does not, however, affect their music. Their album contains a wide variety of instruments, ranging from cellos to dulcimers. Their songs are clear and mellow, but, unfortunately, never reveal anything about the mysterious Lennox, who fails to sing with emotion of any kind. This stoic crooning, though, seems to work, especially in such songs as "Here Comes the Rain Again" and "Paint a Rumor."

Altered Images-BITE: It's hard to sell a record, especially if you sing like Minnie Mouse and write obnoxious, brainless songs like, "Don't talk to me about love." If you never heard of Altered Images you're better off. The title of the album says it all.

MADNESS: This seven member band from England combines music with their name. Such songs as "Our House," "It Must Be Love" and "House of Fun" are good examples of their talent and sense of humor.

Hayzi Fantayzee-BATTLE HYMNS FOR CHILDREN SINGING: Put a girl and boy dressed like Hassadic Jews together with some new-wave square-dance songs and you have Hayzi Fantayzee: ¼ music and ¾ camel drool.

VANITY 6: As madness combines humor with music, so Vanity 6 combines sex with music. This trio of female singers (led by "Vanity"-a potential centerfold) perform such songs as "Nasty Girl," "Wet Dream," and "Drive me Wild" while shaking down in their silk lingerie.

B-52's-WHAMMY!: This is the best dance album they have ever put out, with such songs as "Whammy Kiss," "Butterbean" and "Song for a Future Generation" (with that famous quote: "Let's meet and have a baby—now)

Sparks-IN OUTER SPACE: Spark's music has a definite knack to "hoodwink yo mama" with such songs as "A bunch of guys from outer space" and "All you ever think about is sex." If you don't mind spaced-out lyrics, you'll like Sparks, especially their single "Cool Places" with Go-Go Jane Weidlen.

Cheating : An Epidemic

By Michael DeSantis

The epidemic of cheating has been slowly spreading at C H.S.This is by no means a new problem. but it's time to discuss the subject openly. After much observation, I would say that the great majority of students in the junior and senior classes experiment with cheating. Although most of these students' cheating is inserious and infrequent, the number of chronic cheaters is increasing alarmingly.

Cheating occurs in various forms, differing with each subject and individual. If some students were as clever with their schoolwork as they are with cheating, they would be declared ingenious. Perhaps the most common example of cheating is the infamous "cheat sheet." This general term applies to any form of answers that have been prewritten on an object. When I say "object," I mean anything that pen ink will adhere to. For example, besides the standard sheet of paper that slides easily in or out a person's sleeve, I've seen answers written on shoe soles, books, palms of hands, fingernails, and even pens. In one case, a student minutely and meticulously wrote chemical symbols of the periodic chart, and every positive and negative ion in chemistry, wrapped the paper around his pen, neatly secured it with scotch tape. Calculators, used in chemistry and accelerated math courses, are great for concealing cheat sheets within their covers.

Another typical method of cheating is simply looking at another classmate's paper. All students acquire the skill of moving their eyes without moving their head at an early age. Of course, there is always the risk of the other person knowing as little as you, or the teacher detecting the wandering eyes. But as the educational system stands now, a student has nothing to lose from glancing at his partner's paper, except maybe integrity. Clever cheaters make use of mutual aid using each other's paper to supplement their own, having made a tacit agreement at the beginning of the year. There are many more ways to cheat. For instance, some clever student s make use of head phones with taped recordings of a test's answers in the device. A slow voice for essay questions makes life easier.

In certain classes, a great deal of memorization is required, such as in biology or anatomy. It isn't a difficult task to write out a scientific reaction or list steps of a process the night before a test, appear busy, and at the end of the test, pass up the same sheets of paper.

Finally, there are the professionals. This elite group steals tests and exams when the going is tough, ruthlessly infiltrating rooms, cabinets, and desks with keys. How these keys are acquired is a mystery to me, although obviously not to the people who can get their fingers in almost any compartment within the school. I assume the keys are stolen off the desks of careless teachers, found in coat pockets, or borrowed from naive teachers. The keys are then duplicated by machine and returned to the rightful owner. I think all will agree that someone who has a look at an exam before it's given has a distinct advantage over his classmates.

I have had several discussions concerning cheating with students, such as during Student Council meetings, peer counseling class, and with individuals. In trying to recieve a consensus of how students felt about cheating, I found that Nicky White of the class of '84 put it most accurately.

"In seventh and eighth grade, kids think of cheating as being a sin, but once they get into high school, cheating becomes a business. It's a real business."

Although I am strongly averse to cheating, I don't feel that students are to blame. The parents of many students and the school itself, put a great deal of pressure on the pupils to perform well. Most students feel this pressure around the ninth grade, when they are made to realize the correlation between their academic

"...lack of responsibility and respect." ??

By Lisa Morse and Pip Gilmour

This the question I asked myself after reading a letter to the editor of The Cohasset Mariner. (Jan. 5th issue) This letter, written by Joseph Hoffman and Troy Chatterton, suggested that we, as a staff, needed discretion in our writtings.

The problem which Joe and Troy cited, was that our Christmas presents to the teachers "...attempted to downgrade our teachers..." On the contrary, we set out to do no such thing. While commenting about our article, they then went on to say that we "...only showed our true immaturity, ignorance and lack of reponsibility and respect." If we are so irresponsible, ignorant, and immature, why is it that we have received not one complaint from any of the faculty members, regarding the presents? If a complaint was received, we would have gladly printed a formal apology to that faculty member.

Possibly Joe and Troy are forgetting that we take pride in what we do. And also, maybe they are forgetting that many of those presents were suggested by students within C.H.S. and passed on to our staff members. We are sorry to upset you, Joe and Troy, and we hope that this explanation will help you understand our motives.

By Mike Berger

Sixteen different people were nominated for Cohasset's "Person of the Year" contest.

The top three, definitely visible throughout town, will be interviewed and their thoughts published.

The race was close as the top finisher collected 12 votes, the second place finisher had 11 votes and the third place finisher had six votes.

The third place winner will be interviewed for next week's issue, the second the following week and the winner will be announced Thursday, March 15.

This week is devoted to those people who received single nominations.

These people are: Richard Henderson, Dr. Roger Pompeo and Dr. William Raskin, Lloyd Prescott, Alice Daunt, Mary Benbow, Henry Dormitzer, Gertrude Hooper, Mary Jane McArthur, Louis Scicchitano, Ed Minelli, Corrine Cahill and a woman who lives on Nichols Road.

Police-Fire Dept. ambulance favored

In a report to selectmen, the Ambulance Study Committee recommended a combined Fire and Police Dept. ambulance service.

In choosing a combined Fire and Police dept. service over a private service, the committee said in their report, "Since we are a small town both geographically and in population, we must consider the moset effective use of available personnel whohave knowledge of the town and its residents."

The committee said because policemen are often the first responders to emergency calls, it is sensible to include them in the ambulance service.

In some cases a police officer could ride in the ambulance and assist in giving first aid.

In the committee's recommendation both Fire and Police Dept. personnel would receive up graded emergency medical training.

Emergency "911" telephone service with a central dispatcher would be installed to serve both Police and Fire departments. The report said central dispatching "would free-up three firemen and three policemen from dispatching duties."

The committee recommended the town pay for books and tuition in the training of personnel, but that the firemen and policemen would have to take the training on their own time.

The upgraded ambulance service would be phased in over an 18 month period. "It would allow us time to restructure and improve controls over our present

Engineering firm offers sewer solution

By Bill Hayward

On-site repairs, upgrading the current town sewerage plant and connecting to the Hull town plant were some of Ward Engineering possible solutions to Cohasset sewage disposal problems.

Ward Engineering has been studying Cohasset's sewage problems since October. They have found approximately 18 percent of the town's septic systems have seasonal or chronic problems, and the treatment plant is overloaded.

Chuck Dauchy of Ward Engineering said, "There certainly exists a hazard when there is raw sewage or barely treated sewage on the ground. It is not a problem to be pooh-poohed."

One option discussed was the on-site correction of individual system problems. This would be the most cost effective solution for many areas in Cohasset. Ward Engineering has found virtually all of the on-site systems they visited can be repaired.

It is likely the on-site repairs will be a part of any plan developed for the town.

Another option would be to upgrade the existing sewage treatment plant. The plant was designed to handle 72,000 gallons a day and is currently receiving an average of 100,000 gallons a day, and much more in wet weather.

The treatment plant discharges into James Brook, which flows into Cohasset Harbor. The state wants an outfall built in the outer harbor, to prevent pollution of James Brook and the harbor. The harbor outfall would cost $2 million to build.

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis and Ward Engineering feel the harbor outfall would be unnecessary if the treatment plant were upgraded so that it discharged relatively clean water.

Mike Wilson, a lobster fisherman in the harbor, said the plant is polluting the harbor and killing lobsters stored there.

Wilson said, "When you open your lobster car and find you're short $1,000 or $2,000, it doesn't make you too happy. And you know what killed them — fresh water (from the plant)." He added, "Yo pump any more fresh water into that harbor anc ou have stopped commercial fishing in Cohasset."

In response to Wilson's comments Bill ird of Cohasset said, "Only one-half of one percent of all the fresh water that went into the harbor today came from the plant. The vast majority of it was rain water."

Other residents were concerned that even if the existing plant were expanded, it would not leave

Cable wiring is underway

Who will be the most influential person in Cohasset in 1984?

Chances are that person may be John Ronan, community coordinator for American Cablesystems.

Essentially he will supervise the community cable channel as well as train those volunteers who qualified to film and tape community events for cable T.V.

It won't be long before selectmen, school committee and important issues before town boards are aired via cable T.V.

Soon commentators will be saying, "Live from Town Hall, the Cohasset Community Center or the South Shore Art Center."

American Cablesytems should have the entire town cabled within six months. The first subscribers will be receiving programs in late April or early May.

The construction of Cohasset's cable studio will be completed within two months. The facility will include a studio, consumer service office and a conference room.

Ronan's first duty as community coordinator is to spread the word about community cable to Art Center or Community Center members, school teachers, the "Old Goats" or anyone who wants to listen.

His second job is to teach the community video workshops. Currently eight people are now taking a four-week workshop on how to use the equipment. The workshops cover basic video production, production techniques, lighting and microphone and camera work.

School teachers are the first to receive the workshops because the schools have video equipment and a capable instructor in Dr. John Packard.

Residents or teachers who graduate from cable workshops will receive a card to be used like a library card to check out equipment for filming productions or features for possible transmission on the community channel.

The scheduling of these programs will be a joint decision by the Cable Advisory Council and Ronan.

The council members are: David Chittim, chairman, Donald McAllister, Margaret Dillon, James Gallagher, Richard Hayes, Joseph McCool, J. Arnold Nickerson, Ann O'Malley and Packard.

The community channel will include sports coverage

Chamber logo contest

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced a contest, "Draw Our Logo." Any resident of Cohasset or member of a Cohasset organization is eligible with the grand prize of $100 in merchandise being the offered award.

The newly formed organization has set no design limitation. All finished drawings will become the sole exclusive property of the Chamber of Commerce and must be submitted to P.O. Box 336 before Feb. 29, 1984.

The winner will be announced at the regular monthly meeting March 14.

Sandblasting plans continue

Selectmen plan to continue to sandblast the Bates Building. This building houses the Health and Sewer Depts and the Planning Board.

Selectmen received the approval from Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos as long as certain health conditions are met. She believes lead paint particles could contaminate the area during the blasting process.

The project will take 2½ to three days and the building will be protected by a protective cocoon during the sandblasting. Still to be decided by selectmen are if two or four window sills will be replaced or if the first floor will be remodeled.

Selectmen voted to recommend to install three phones in the Bates Building. These phones will connect to the Town Hall central system.

Building Inspector Pay raise

Building Inspector Bob Dennis will have his salary raised from $19,365 to $21,708.

Selectmen approved the near $2400 increase, citing an increase in his job responsibilities. Dennis has been the town's building inspector since November of 1982.

In addition to the increase of condominium projects, Dennis is also the enforcing agent for the Conservation Commission and the Planning Board.

Wiring Inspector Steve Wigmore, who attended last week's selectmen's meeting, was not happy with the approval. Before selectmen made the decision, Dennis asked for a $4700 pay raise to a salary over $24,000.

"I'm at the same pay grade now that I was when I was appointed 11 years ago as head of the Wiring Dept. I have been thrown down and I have bargained faithfully. It's not fair to the other superintendents. I am dealing with the public and public safety also," said Wigmore.

By virtue of a 2-2 tie, selectmen denied a proposal to add $1,000 to Dennis's budget for car expenses. The amount would have been paid in monthly installments.

Dennis originally requested a town vehicle because he claims the mileage allowance does not cover the wear and repairs on his truck.

In another vehicle related matter, selectmen said they would submit Dog Officer Richard Yocum's request for a van to transport animals to the April Town Meeting if Yocum submits a request.

Vehicle removal order

Selectmen approved an order to Barron Salvador to remove his trucks as part of Litchfield Express. The vehicles are kept on a town-owned lot. For the past 15 years Salvador used the lot under a verbal agreement with previous boards. Salvador will be given 90 days to remove the vehicles.

Historic District Board budget

Selectmen approved an $85 budget for the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission. The board tried to get retroactive funding for a $235 tape recorder, already purchased to tape their meetings by a board member. Selectmen told a board representative under state law the committee must ask for the money first and then purchase the item.

Posts put up by the Highway Dept. block the public way from cars passing through.

Constable wanted

Those people interested in becoming a town constable should submit their applications to Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

Dooley hearing ends, ball in Selectmen's court

By Jane Lane

His attorney reasoned, "Chief Dooley should be applauded, not brought before this board on charges."

That's how Fire Chief Martin Dooley's attorney completed his summation to selectmen in the third night of testimony in the board's investigation of charges brought against the chief by his firefighters.

Atty. Louis Cassis of Quincy described inconsistencies in testimony by the firefighters, and inaccuracies in their statements, and described the union's charges against the chief as "foolish ". Indeed, he stated, the firefighters "lied" throughout their testimony -"how can you believe anything they say," he asked.

And in his final statement, alluding to the rift between the chief and his firefighters, Atty. Cassis concluded, "if these men would get behind him (Dooley) and back him - this fine chief - we'd have a fine department."

Three nights of open hearings were held in consecutive weeks after firefighters' union president, William Protulis, charged the chief with misuse of town property, and the endangerment of the firefighters' lives during a Hull fire Nov. 25, 1983.

Selectmen now have 20 days in which to submit a written decision.

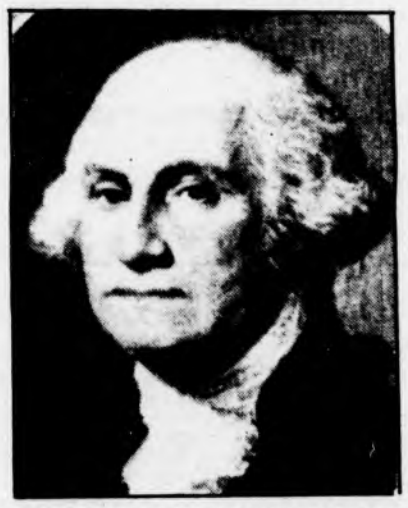
Throughout the previous testimony by three Cohasset firefighters who were at the Hull scene, it was noted Chief Dooley ordered the men to puncture a second-story boarded window with Ladder I's aerial apparatus. After following that instruction, the men were required to perform a water tower, with a man atop the aerial ladder. Protulis' letter, dated Dec. 7, maintained use of the town's ladder truck in such a manner is improper according to the maintenance manual, and ordering a man atop the equipment after such use, endangered the firefighter's life "and further diminished" their confidence in the fire chief.

During Tuesday night's hearing, two area fire chiefs, Fletcher Patch of Hingham, and Robert Hollingshead of Hull, testified in Chief Dooley's behalf.

Both chiefs agreed that when Cohasset responded to the fire that night, there were no flames shooting from the roof of the abandoned Golden Sands building, and it was imperative to immediately ventilate the burning structure. This directly contradicted previous testimony by the Cohasset firefighters who had said flames were seen from atop the two-story building, thus there was no need to ventilate the vacant building by puncturing the boarded window with the aerial ladder.

Atty. Cassis later presented photographs to selectmen, depicting the building the night of the fire as Cohasset arrived at the scene, with no flames visible from a vantage point atop the roof.

Chief Patch, who responded to the mutual aid call to Hull that night, told selectmen he had personally never used a ladder truck to puncture a boarded window, although it is standard practice in Hingham to use it to push away burning debris which might be endangering the truck and the men aboard it.



He also noted he ordered a Hingham firefighter to direct a water tower that night, and received no complaints about the instruction.

When asked if it is proper procedure to use the ladder "as a battering ram," Chief Patch answered, "each fire is different. We don't use the same tactics for each fire. The circumstances of each fire governs each individual fire."

Jr. League taps Philip Smith to design showhouse room

Philip Smith of Cohasset was chosen to participate in the 1984 Junior League Showhouse.

Smith, an associate member of the American Society of Interior Designers and owner of Designers Creations on Main St., was chosen by the Junior League of Boston to decorate a major room at this year' Showhouse in Dedham.

This is the eighth consecutive year Smith has been chosen to participate with other leading Boston interior designers in this major fund raising event of the Junior League.

Only one other designer in the entire Boston area has been given this honor.

Designers are chosen by their reputations and ability.

Smith's past rooms, such as libraries and last year's French style bedroom, have appeared in such magazines as House Beautiful, and in decorating books.

This year he will participate with Boston s other leading designers, such as Trade Winds, Bierly and Drake, Richard Fitzgerald and approximately 27 others chosen from over two hundred decorators.

Smith will decorate the boy's bedroom this year. He will use a simple style which will reflect the boy's interest in the old West frontier, and the new frontiers of the space age.

Many antique pieces will be used in the design, including a very early set of twin beds, Western and Indian art collections, along with model cars and ships.

The window and bed treatment will be a combination of leather and denim with Navajo rugs on the floor. The showhouse will have 30 rooms decorated.

The house this year is the famous 1802 Norfolk Inn, located within the Dedham Center Historic District.

It will be open to the public April 29 and will close Sunday May 20. Tickets may be purchased before the opening date at a reduced rate of $7 at Mr. Smith's shop, Designers Creations at 25 South Main Street, or call for information at 383-1451.

Smith has been very active in community affairs. He is past president of the Cohasset Rotary Club and is part owner of Flemings, a 50 year old Cohasset landmark.

Flemings carries marine supplies, housewares, gifts and collectables. His nephew, Frank Smith, also a Cohasset resident is a partner and manages the shop. Barbara E. Stephens of Highland Avenue manages Designers Creations. The shop offers lamps, carpets, drapery and furniture and other decorative items as seen in Architectural Digest and other decorating magazines. These items are not generally available in stores.

Smith works throughout the Boston area and has helped decorate many of the most beautiful Cohasset, Hingham and other South Shore homes.

He also has been involved in setting up the entire offices of several large South Shore businesses, including Roman Research in Norwell and The Burke Distributing and Redemco companies.

Here is an example of Phil Smith's parlor design.

In a most recent project he incorporated old material from buildings and used part of an 1865 bar to create a conference room.

Smith is currently finishing a project in Palm Beach, Florida of a client he has helped for years in Cohasset. "I do most of my work by referral and because it is usually so exciting and pleasant I can't think of any other work I would rather do," he said.

of high school and amateur teams, a bulletin board, local events and town committee meetings and magazine features.

These features will be filmed by those volunteers who graduate from the cable workshops.

Ronan said his primary job is to ensure the correct filming procedures are followed as well as to encourage people to use their creativity.

"As time goes by, community people will produce the show. In the beginning I will be the producer. But as time goes by, those who have shown they know the proper operation will become the producers.

Ronan is pleased the schools are off to a great start with cable because school staff members will use cable as a teaching tool. Video will be introduced as part of the curriculum.

Channel 3 will become the communities channel with the emphasis of quality over quantity, Ronan said.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Aronovici to seek assessor seat

Charles L. Aronovici of 619 Jerusalem Road recently announced his candidacy for Assessor.

He announced his candidacy in the form of questions and answers.

Why did you decide to run for assessor?

Recently, I expressed some dissatisfaction to a neighbor about the timing of our tax bills. He suggested that if I wanted to try to do something about it, I should volunteer my services.

Is is true that you are a newcomer to the area?

Relatively speaking, yes. Fran and I came to Hingham in 1980, and during our brief residence there, we found ourselves drawn to the small village atmosphere of Cohasset. The fact that we are not long term residents of the town in no way diminishes our concern and interest in town politics.

Do you see your youth as a hindrance to running for public office?

I don't know why it should. Certainly the town should be far more interested in my qualifications than my age. My educational background includes a B.S. in Finance from the State University of California at Los Angeles in 1973. My job history includes planning and control at Security Pacific National Bank, consulting at Tymshare, Informatics, and Computer Corporation of America. I now work from my home as the Marketing Manager for The Adesse Corporation.

What do you consider are your strongest qualifications for the job?

Traditionally there have been no job specifications for an assessor, and candidates have come from a wide variety of backgrounds. I offer the following:

A keen interest in seeing the job performed equitably and professionally, in the highest public interest and with the greatest cost efficiency.

My training and experience in computer technology and finance.

My willingness to take any necessary evening courses and participate in on-the-job training.

My accessibility to Town Hall - my office is in my home, and I am readily available to meet with citizens or town fathers throughout the week.

'Forty Carats' at Town Hall, March 2-4

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's forthcoming Town Hall production — the second show of the Club's 63rd consecutive season — is the light-hearted French comedy Forty Carats, adapted by American playwright Jay Allen.

Performances will be given Friday and Saturday evenings March 2 and 3 at 8 P.M. and Sunday, March 4 at 2 P.M.

For every theater production, professional or amateur, there has to be a small army of backstage workers. These often unheralded and seldom seen production crews are a vital part of each show, and without them the curtain would never even open.

Overseeing the entire backstage scene are Production Managers Tamsyn Elliott and George Hamacher.

In charge of the show during performances will be Stage Manager Don Freiter, and Michael Cox serves as Stage Secretary.

Design and construction of the stage settings of Forty Carats has been headed by Burk Ketcham, and Clark Young heads the stage lighting design.

Sound effects will be provided by Peter Tolman, who also appears onstage in the role of Mr. Latham.

The costume chairperson is Julia Jordan, and stage properties are provided by Susan Harrington, Yvonne Julian and Deborah Cadigan.

Rehearsal prompter is Althea Stamp.

Senior citizens are invited to attend its final dress rehearsal Tuesday, Feb. 28 at 8 P.M. without charge.

Tickets for performances will be available at the door, and can be purchased in advance at Fleming's Hardware, Cohasset Center. Tickets are $4.

Tui finds U.S. isn't 'Dallas'

By Theresa Sullivan

--One brand of butter.

--Dinners with the whole family that last for an hour and a half.

--Classes where the teacher lectures and the students don't speak.

This is what AFS student Tui McArthur was accustomed to when she came to live with the Atkinson family in July.

Tui, 18, is from Balclutha, New Zealand. Since moving in with the Rev. Ed and Sally Atkinson and their daughters Julie and Sarah, Tui has discovered the United States is not "quite" as it appears on "Dallas" and in Hollywood-produced movies.

"You always get movies at home of California. We never get to see the mid-west, New England, the Carolinas.

"It's so hard to try to form what it's going to look like in your head," Tui said.

One unexpected difference was the variety of brands of products available in the United States. In New Zealand, there are only one or two brands of each product.

"The girls and I had fun taking her shopping," Sally said. When they were in the supermarket and sent her to pick up something, "Tui would disappear."

She had a pretty difficult time trying to choose between 10 or 20 different brands of one item, Sally said.

New Zealand is a democracy, and the only language Tui speaks is English. But there were more differences between the two countries than she expected.

In New Zealand, everyone stops working for tea for a half hour in the morning and again in the afternoon. At lunch, everything stops for an hour. These breaks are written into employees' contracts, Tui said.

Tui said 90 percent of the families in New Zealand still spend dinner together. "It's a family time. It's a time where things are discussed."

School in New Zealand is also more formal, she said. "I like school; I had a bit more responsibility. It's a whole different atmosphere."

In class "at home, you have your head down for an hour. I never really just loved going to school."

She played field hockey in the fall, is a cheerleader for the Skippers hockey team, and hopes to run on the track team in the spring.

Tui is also a member of the yearbook staff, the AFS club and will be playing a stripper in CHS's production of "Guys and Dolls."

enough room for future town growth.

Another option discussed was the possible conversion of the treatment plant into a pumping station and connecting to Hull's sewage treatment plant.

The Hull plant is designed to handle three million gallons a day, but currently handles less than one million. If the Hull facility were used, town areas which do not lend themselves to on-site correction could be sewered. These areas might include the Veterans Hillside area, Pond St., and Jerusalem Rd.

Three possible routes to connect the existing system to Hull have been proposed. They are: Forest Ave., Hill St., and Turkey Hill Run. The annual cost to the town for any of the three routes, including construction, operation and maintenance, would be around $166,000.

In their preliminary estimates of the volume of sewage which would go to Hull daily, Ward Engineering used the figure of 200,000 gallons. Several residents were concerned that 200,000 gallons did not leave enough room for future growth.

Resident Max Pounder said, "I'm concerned that you are using flow rates that are too small."

Joe Ward explained that the 200,000 gallon figure was used only as a baseline for cost comparisons. "That figure is very open to change," he said.

Other residents were concerned over possible legal entanglements with Hull. Sewer commissioner DeSantis said the Citizens Waste Water Advisory Committee would be studying the legal and contractual possibilities in an agreement with Hull.

At this time the amount of federal and state aid Cohasset can expect for any of these projects is uncertain. Ward Engineering will be meeting with state officials to discuss aid.

Ward Engineering hopes to have a draft plan and recommendations prepared by late March. A public hearing on the draft plan will be held some time in April.

principal are given on the last day of school. There's no American type graduation exercise.

Tui is pleased high school graduations here are ceremonial.

Although change is slow in New Zealand, Tui says some women are beginning to enter the work force. But, "It's understood that the husband would prefer his wife not to work."

Sally said, one night Rev. Atkinson cooked dinner and washed the dishes. Tui's reponse when she saw this was, "Men don't do dishes!"

Tui is amazed about the styles worn by Cohasset people. She had never seen people wear pink and green together.

She's amused by "the plaid pants, the plaid bow tie and the white patent leather shoes. At home, people don't know what preppy is. I love alligators (Izods)."

Not everyone is preppy, she said. "I think it's good the way people are so versatile. You just can be an individual."

Although New Zealand is an island, Tui repeatedly said how much she likes Sandy Beach. "I think I'm really fortunate. The majority of the New Zealand AFS students never get to the East Coast," she said.

Tui has visited Sturbridge Village, Fanueil Hall, the Museum of Science and the New England Aquarium.

But, although she enjoyed these places, she kept talking about Cohasset. "It has 10 times more to offer than home."

She added, her home town of Balclutha could improve the use of the town's outdoor resources.

"At home, people don't stay around town during the summer. Cohasset hums all through the summer."

Tui said it'll be hard for her to leave Cohasset and the Atkinsons when she leaves this summer.

☐Town residents should be certain to give our students and schools a lot of credit for a superb job in educating Cohasset's youth! What better example than U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds announcing his nominees for appointment to the United States service academies, three of whom were "Cohassetites." Tim Curran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Curran of 128 Doane Street, was appointed to West Point. Michael Keller, 31 Border Street, and Christopher J. Mahoney of 468 King Street were the other two Cohasset nominees. Chris Mahoney received a double honor. He was also appointed to Annapolis!

☐"Friends" of Roger Porter of Target Industries decided to celebrate his birthday in a most unusual way. He received a Bellygram at 10:30 a.m. The occasion was enjoyed by all!

☐Margaret O'Brien was pleased recently when she was elected an assistant vice president by BayBank Norfolk County Trust in Dedham. She joined the staff at Norfolk Trust in 1964 as a customer service representative.

☐Troop No. 4551 of the Patriot's Girl Scout Council officially became Brownies last Wednesday under Shelley Weier and Kyle Lublitz. The girls are all first graders and they are: Jessica Aronson, Candice Buckley, Ann Dane, Jessica Jenkins, Stephanie Lubitz, Dawn Meehan, Bethany Quinton, Melissa Weier, and Alexa Zerndow.

☐Danny Silvia really made his godfather's day with his recent gift — a neat red hat to add to his collection.

☐Basketball is the name of the game at CHS this year. Both boys and girls varsity are awaiting word to find out who they will be playing in the States and when it will be. They will know after vacation. Be sure that they get tons of support in their efforts to be the champs! Congratulations to coaches Ed Minelli and Bill Fallon.

☐ An annual original one act play will be presented at Frothingham Hall, Thayer Academy Friday and Saturday March 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. Directed by James King, and written by him and the student participants, this year's production is a western take-off. A western movie under production mysteriously becomes reality. When a group of tourists get caught in the action, the trouble only begins and participating from Cohasset is Sarah Lualdi.

The cast consists of Michael McGovern and Kay Keating, Duxbury; David Giagrando, Damon Constantinides, Cait Tollefson, Hull; Leo Reed, Norwell; David Liss, Canton; Christopher Cook, Amy Stanton, Elisa Smithson, Pembroke, Pat Kearns, Julie Dwyer, Weymouth; John Rothstein, Randolph; Sharon Miller, Mattapan Lydia Magliozzi, Dorchester; Heather MacDonald, Cindy Cutler, Hingham; Nancy McLoud Julia Smallwood, Easton; Sarah Lualdi, Cohasset; Peggy Connolly, Quincy.

☐Simon Griffiths, of 15 Old Coach Rd., majoring in Civil Engineering Technology was named to the dean's list for scholastic achievement during the first semester at Wentworth Institute of Technology.

☐Attorney Stephen T. Sadler of Cohasset has been named Director of the Lawyer Referral Service and Secretary to the Fee Arbitration Board for the Massachusetts Bar Association.

Recently, Sadler was Chief Prosecutor for the Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare where he was instrumental in developing a pilot program for prosecuting food stamp fraud in administrative hearings.

From 1981-82, he served as Law Clerk for the law offices of Irving Fanger and performed various duties including general legal research and memoranda writing. From 1982-83, Sadler served on the Voluntary Defenders Program in Boston.

☐All of the rain we have been having lately brings to mind the Cohasset Garden Club and their focus on the problems of acid rain. Always on focus with current environmental issues, they are hard at work toward legislation to curb acid rain and protecting water quality. Recently they exhibited "Acid Rain and its Effect On the Environment," and won first prize in the regional water quality contest of the Garden Club of America. The contest was the culmination of a three-year priority by the GCA to protect the nation's water supply. This exhibit will compete in the national contest in Nashville this spring. Ann Churchill and Gretchen Stone were in charge of the basic design and execution of the project. The research was Kitty Howe's responsibility, Jo Ford handled the editorial work and the calligraphy was done by Betsy Hoopes.

The exhibit shows what happens when airborne pollutants, principally from soft coal-burning power plants in the industrial midwest, combine with water to produce sulphuric and nitric acid. The winds carry the pollutants hunreds of miles, as far as Canada. Trees, fish and drinking water are all imperiled — as Ann Churchill says, "It's like a slow atom bomb."

The Cohasset Garden Club exhibit is available to area schools, libraries and banks. Look for this outstanding exhibit and be sure to give credit to the hard-working team who put it together.

☐Be on the alert for the PSO's phone call March 1, and be generous to this effort to raise money for their most worthy organization.

Marguerita Burns is still going strong at 101. She celebrated this birthday with family and friends Feb. 10. Miss Burns is a graduate of Bridgewater State College and taught elementary school for 49 years. She lived most of her life in Hingham and now is a resident of Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Marguerita says she is not 101 but 20.

☐Congratulations go to Joe Hoffman, who was both captain and leading scorer of the Skippers hockey team. Joe was a member of the South Shore League's All-Star team, an honor indeed. Capturing the votes for the All-Stars in basketball were James Creed, Anthony Bogarty and Dave Barcomb.

☐Be sure to fill us in on Vacation News. It should be plentiful after vacation week. And, please be reminded that any news that you want to appear in this column has to be submitted by Monday morning of the week you want it to run. Hate to disappoint people looking for their news.

SUNDAY-AT-THE-CENTER

What do a computer graphics specialist, a curator of 20th Century art, a landscape artist and M.I.T.'s coordinator of its visible language have in common?

They are all speakers at the South Shore Center's 1984 version of its Sunday-at-the-Center series which has brought together prominent personalities in the fields of art, literature, business, sculpture and psychology for an informal exchange of creative ideas with audience participants.

This year's Sunday-at-the-Center program which will be held at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, begins Sunday, March 4, 3 to 5 p.m. and zeros in on the question "Can you create with a Computer?"

LTX Corporation's computer graphics specialist, Paul Diette; and M.I.T's coordinator of its visible language workshop, Rob Haimes, will discuss and demonstrate how to create with a new technology—the computer.

Advanced registration for this and the following two Sunday programs, March 11 and March 18 is required.

Sixty miles east of Puerto Rico lies a string of 50 or so outcropping, cays, isles and crags known as the British Virgin Islands. No more than a dozen are inhabited. Of the total population of 11,000, more than 9,000 live on the largest island, Tortola. Despite the word-of-mouth fanfare, the British Virgin Islands remain a quiet, unhurried preserve of the world's most beautiful beaches and perfect sailing. They are an enclave of charming little inns and luxurious resorts. The people are genuinely friendly which, in part, accounts for the fact that nearly 80% of tourist arrivals are repeat visitors. the islands present the perfect setting for a sailing holiday, unrushed by maddening crowds.

Fundamental success

Congratulations to the Boys and Girls Basketball teams for a fine season.

Even if a playoff game isn't won, Cohasset is proud of your talent, skill and enthusiasm.

Here's hoping everyone, including the school superintendent, high school principal and School Committee get behind you with their enthusiasm as was seen at prior school board meetings when CHS battled in state hockey tournaments.

This season may be the first one in the history of Cohasset where both the girls and the boys basketball teams made the championships during the same year.

This is quite an accomplishment for a town during the first year of the realignment of the South Shore League.

And although the talent of both teams is noteworthy, the key to the success of the boys team is in part due to the actions of the School Committee last summer.

We would like to thank School Committee Chairman Dick Conley for his greatest accomplishment during his tenure as board chairman.

If not for his decision to postpone an important sports coaching personnel decision, a vote would have been taken to oust Basketball Coach Ed Minelli.

This was recommended by the High School Principal Richard Streeter and School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

Fortunately, wiser thoughts prevailed and Minelli was retained.

The record speaks for itself. Two years ago Minelli guided a team which was 1-17 to an improved 9-11the next year.

This year's record is 18-2 and 15-1 in the league.

In addition, the junior varsity record under Coach Matt Salerno is 11-7.

Even though the School Committee and the School Dept. do not sufficiently acknowledge this feat, we would like to nominate all the players of the boys team and Coaches Ed Minelli and Matt Salerno as Cohasset's Persons of the Year.

There will be a special feeling in the CHS gymnasium next week if Cohasset hosts the opening round of the Division III Basketball Tournament.

That feeling will probably be best exhibited when the players come out onto the floor for the opening tapoff.

They deserve it.

School arts praised

Cohasset was favorably mentioned in an October, 1983 article in Prologue, a Tufts University publication on theatre.

High School English teacher and drama coach Ron Emmons found the article titled, "An Arts Proposition," by Sherwood Collins.

The article addresses the cuts made to the arts in Massachusetts school systems since Prop. 2½. Theatre, more than any other art form, has suffered, the article says.

Collins encourages school systems to maintain their drama programs. It sites schools which have repeatedly faired well in statewide drama festivals.

"What too many people have failed to realize is that those schools are in communities that have recognized the importance of drama in their educational programs," Collins writes.

Green Hill from Black Rock Beach — Richard Dabrowski

Commuting for high stakes into Boston

By Claire McDonough

Remember the river boat gamblers? The well dressed, steely-eyed individuals with names like Gaylord Ravenal who lured wide-eyed marks onto white painted, luxuriously appointed paddle boats where, removed from the scrutiny of the law, they fleeced their victims at their leisure.

Well, Gaylord Ravenal lives. The South Shore may not have a gambling casino, but the quest for the big win has taken wheels, and each morning the traffic rolls out onto Rte. 3A and the dream is born again as the commuter van gamblers take to the roads.

You see, a Boston newspaper has instituted a Bingo-like game. And every morning my vandals and I climb aboard, murmur a few pleasantries, and with a concentration, determination, and fervor matched only in certain revival tents, turn to the page with the numbers and pursue the will o'the wisp of fortune.

The cast of characters is all there. You've met them in hundreds of books, movies and t.v. dramas. You can meet them again on Morrissey Boulevard.

Grace, aka the Godmother: She looks like your typical little grandmother, but she handles at least eight cards with a skill that betrays a professional background. No promises have been made or extracted, but we know what's expected. As her gimlet eye rapidly scans columns of figures, we hand her our cards. "If I win, Grace," we tell her, "I'll split it with you."

Gentleman Bernie: Always ready to help a lady with her card; always there with a friendly smile or helpful advice. Is he as nice as he seems, or is he working a scam?

Margee, the Dance Hall Girl: Hauntingly lovely, she moves men's hearts. They lay their cards at her feet.

Joanne, the Addict: She'd like to stop, but she can't. Every morning she thinks, "Today will be the day." Each ride is another broken dream.

Sue W, and Ann, the Dreamers: Civil servants, they love their jobs, but they yearn for the number that would give them the choice. The option to sleep in the morning. Preferably on the Riviera.

Frans, the Cosmopolitan: He's lived everywhere in the world, and he knows the score. He sings out the numbers with a charm that distracts the players. Is he a plant?

Shirley, the Artist: The days when wealthy dukes supported struggling artists have passed. A big win would leave her free to pursue her vocation.

Sue M., the Mother-To-Be: Sweet and winning, she will, nevertheless, fight like a tiger for the security of her unborn child.

Mary, the Entrepreneur: Mary doesn't gamble—she goes for the sure thing. She moves among the players selling her vitamins.

Thomasine, the Ingenue: Young and beautiful, she longs for the break that will put her and her husband on Easy Street.

Faith, the Sophisticate: Tough and knowledgable, she says she's in it for herself. Does that hard-bitten exterior hide a heart of gold?

Terry and Nick—the Feds: They say they work for innocuous agencies, but we wonder. If we hit the big one, will we find the IRS has been riding right along with us? What will the Godmother do?

And there you have it. All the ingredients for high drama. A moving drama, you might say. When the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway begins, will it continue to move?

Letters

Say yes to PSO Phone-a-thon

(The following is a letter to Cohasset school parents —Ed.)

To the Editor:

Ms. Andrea M. Davis, CHS'79, wrote a letter recently to high school counselor Jack Leary which was published in the Feb. 16 isssue of the Cohasset Mariner. She wanted to thank her teachers for the education she had received.

I thought it interesting that she singled out for special praise the Alternative School Program, a program no longer offered in the Cohasset School System.

While so may debate the merits of the Alternative School, no one can help but wonder what effect the failure to continue or renew other programs, courses, special events, and teacher appointments is having on the students in our classrooms today.

The basics are still well-taught, but many of the mind grabbers, the brain chargers, the things that give a focus and a meaning to learning the 3R's, have fallen victim to the fiscal tenor of the times.

The CohassetParent School Organization's goal is to minimize or eliminate these weak spots in our school system as best we can, whether it be to purchase a new library card file or to secure the funding for a live performance of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar." Read our Feb. 14 newsletter to see what can be done by the "private sector."

However, we need "private sector" money to continue and improve upon our current level of support.

If you want the opportunity to make a difference in the quality of your child's education, please say "yes" when you are called during the PSO Phone-a-thon on Thursday, March 1.

Sincerely,
Steven L. Geary
PSO Executive Board

Multifaceted ed.

To the Editor:

In response to the editorial about funds for our schools...It almost seems that it suggests that school budgeting is like a game to see how little can be spent per student and still get good results.

Southeast Expressway update

Beginning Tuesday, Feb. 21, the West Street off-ramp — northbound — in Quincy will be closed for repairs related to the Southeast Expressway Reconstruction Project.

The southbound lane, however, will remain open.

Signs will be in place beginning Wednesday, Feb. 16 informing motorists of the shut-down, which will last approximately three months.

SCITUATE MEETING

The Massachusetts Dept. of Public Works will hold a Community Meeting sponsored by Senator Allan R. McKinnon and Representative Frank Hynes at the Scituate Town Hall Hearing Room March 1 at 7:30 p.m., to discuss the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway.

The Southeast Expressway Community Coordinator and DPW personnel will provide information on the reconstruction project, it's impact, actions that have been taken to minimize disruption and transportation options that are available for commuters, travelers and other users of the Southeast Expressway.

This meeting will be an opportunity for citizens to receive and ask their questions, have input into the planning for the reconstruction and begin individual preparations and travel plans for the reconstruction period.

HYNES MEETING

State Rep. Frank M. Hynes (D-Scituate, Marshfield) met recently in Boston with top state officials planning the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway.

The meeting was called to encourage coordination of planning and uniform procedures for all state agencies affiliated with Expressway management.

Hynes is concerned about the two truck accidents which effectively shut down the southbound section of the Expressway all day on a recent Friday and caused one of the most massive traffic tie-ups in Boston's history.

Hynes was upset about the way the State responded to the accident scenes and even suggested legislative investigation if there was inability for state officials to work together on such Expressway accidents in the future.

"I am pleased, today, with the willingness and desire of state MDC and DPW officials to learn from this unfortunate experience and work cooperatively in the future to remove such accidents from the Expressway in a timely and expeditious fashion."

MDC Commissioner William Geary told Hynes there were several issues compounding the problem that day, but that errors in judgment contributed to the traffic tie-up.

Geary assured Hynes that procedures involving Expressway accidents have been reviewed and revised to avoid such errors in the future.

He added, during the period of reconstruction the MDC, DPW and State Police will establish a direct line of communication to assure immediate response to such traffic accidents.

Work began two weeks ago on the Expressway with the installation of light poles and removal of the median guard rail on bridge decks.

Dilemma

Harried and hurried, habitual endeavor!
Southeast Expressway,
In anytime weather!

Morning and evening,
The blitz-madness ensues!
Monday thru Friday,
The commuting blues!

If anything can,
It does go wrong!
The fish overspill,
Line back-ups were long!

Alternate routes,
Not always the best choice!
"Should have stayed on!"
We later voice!

Oh! The magic words,
From helicopter Bill!
"Ahead it breaks loose!"
"Dead stop!" — Gives us the chill!

On Masses — on Sasses
On Datsun and Cad!
Endless, prolonged hassle
Equal to the Olympiad!

Bad as it is,
Now a piece of cake!
Wait till March,
In remodeling's bake!

Carpools and "Lady!"
Other means!
Won't alleviate,
The fumes and the steams!

Presently we are victims,
Of the "havoc express!"
But count the days!
Soon a reconstructive mess!!!!

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

MassBank, Governor Dukakis' pet project to deal with the state's infra-structure, is in dire straits because the Administration can't figure a way to raise the necessary revenues to fund it. More and more, MassBank, is resembling a pipe dream. But, our real concern must be who will MassBank hurt and who will it help if it eventually becomes a reality.

HURT AND HELP

Doubts over MassBank were raised for the second year in a row during last week's meeting with the Secretary of Administration and Finance left many questions unanswered as to who would pay for this proposal.

Surely, there is a need to improve the Commonwealth's system of roads, bridges, sewer, water and mass transit. We all agree that preventative measures are much more palatable than reactions to life-taking disasters such as the I-95 bridge collapse in Connecticut.

But how will MassBank be funded?

Considering the need for $300 million over the next three years for MassBank's seed money, the Administration has been floating various trial balloons for funding.

Among the most often discussed are an expanded payroll tax, increases in unemployment taxes and the maximization of private business investments for particular infra-structure projects.

Also in the mix, is the oft-talked of proposal of utilizing turnpike toll revenues to partially fund the start-up costs.

Taken as a whole, these potential revenue raising overtures amount to a big fat zero. They undoubtedly will hurt businesses across Massachusetts.

When questioned whether business, rather than the general taxpayer will be asked to foot the bill for the bank, the Secretary of Administration and Finance said, "That's a reasonable assessment at this time." It seems as though the probability of the Administration sacrificing the Commonwealth's business community to fund MassBank looms as a major threat.

OTHER THOUGHTS

Another thought we must address when considering MassBank is that the Governor passed a $617.5 million Transportation Bond package as well as a $700 million plus Capital Outlay Budget in 1983 to deal with many of the same problems he proposes to solve with MassBank. Duplication? You tell me.

The Administration plans to unveil its full MassBank proposal within 14 to 21 days. Whether or not it will include proper funding mechanisms savory to all is entirely another matter.

TRAINING CHOICES

I am pleased to inform my constituents who are on welfare that an Assessment and Career Counseling component has been added to the Department's new program — "Employment and Training Choices" —to provide meaningful jobs to welfare recipients.

"The agency to provide these essential services in my area is South Coastal Career Development Administration — 11 Hayward Street, North Quincy, MA 01440.

"It is anticipated that almost 10,000 AFDC recipients statewide, participating in 'Employment and Training Choices,' will benefit from Assessment and Career Counseling services.

The service will assist clients in clarifying their skills and interests and will provide a basis for developing a comprehensive employment strategy.

I am committed to assisting my needy constituents in attaining meaningful employment leading to financial independence from welfare.

Please feel free to contact me, or my staff if you have any questions, at the State House, Boston 02133, Room 134, or phone 722-2400.

NEWS ITEM—Cohasset: Selectman member suggests commuter buses serve cocktails on homeward commute like on Hingham commuter boat Gracious Lady. Bar serving drinks, coffee, snacks would attract passengers. 'Everyone would want a ride.' Camaraderie, comfort, snoozing already a feature of popular vanpool commute.

" . . . Could we see this week's wine list first, please . . . ?"

Scouts visit Harvard University Museum

Patrols led by Gardner Bryant and Billy Anstead were chosen to be the two Honor Patrols of Troop No. 28. The patrols ranked highest in attendance at scout meetings, advancement in ranks and projects the scouts achieved.

Committee members Peter Lelecas and Steve Curtin accompanied the two patrols and scoutmaster John Bryant to the Harvard University Museum Sunday, Feb. 19.

Scouts attending were: Gardener Bryant (Patrol Leader), Peter Curtin, Jim Long, Bill Anstead (Patrol Leader), Michael Lelecas, Nicholas Leleeas and Richard McLaughlin.

The scouts and leaders viewed the botanical museum with its famous glass flowers. The boys also saw the gems and minerology exhibits with displays of giant crystals of various kinds.

The zoology section had many stuffed birds and animals, as well as prehistoric skeletons and fossils.

Unfortunately the boys saw only part of the ethnology and archeology museums as only the downstairs section was available and the American Indian exhibit was limited.

The comparative zoology section showed three whale skeletons suspended from the ceiling. The scouts saw many lions, tigers, bisons (American and European) and many skeletons of varying bird species from all over the world.

All the scouts found the tour most enjoyable, educational and fascinating. Scout Jim Long summed up the enthusiasm of the trip by saying, "It's the best museum I've ever seen and I can't wait to come back."

The Troop No. 28 scouts will be visiting the Hingham Court House Wednesday, Feb. 22. The scouts will meet the court officer, James Gillis, and will tour the Court House and even sit in on some sessions.

Troop No. 28 wishes to extend its welcome to one of its new scouts, Alex Polomsky.

TIGER CLUBS

The Tiger Cubs are boys who are promising future Cub Scouts of Pack No. 38,

The Tiger Cubs have been busy with their activities such as ice fishing on Lily Pond with their dads. Some of the boys even learned how to skate.

The highlight for the day was the gathering to tell their experiences over hot cocoa and brownies.

One of their future trips includes going to the Chelsea Navy Yard to see the building of the 300 foot schooner and to tour Old Ironsides.

Phone directory deadline

The deadline is fast approaching for the Rotary Club's annual Telephone Directory and Buyers Guide.

The book, with the familiar photograph of Minot's Light on the cover, will make its appearance on or about June 1 for the 21st consecutive year.

Deadline for both advertising and telephone listings is March 1.

Advertising in the directory, together with donations from the public, have enabled the club to distribute more than $100,000. in scholarship funds to Cohasset High School graduates over a period of years.

New businesses who wish to advertise as well as established advertisers, who were mailed renewal contracts several weeks ago, should respond at once.

All inquiries, listing information and contracts should be addressed to Rotary Club of Cohasset, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, 02025.

Because of the continued growth of the directory and resulting production complexities, the March 1 deadline will not be extended.

Letters

Education . . .

Teachers are not magicians. They must be paid adequately for their efforts; there must be enough of them to go around so they can reach every student and they must supplement themselves with certain supplies and teaching aids.

SAT scores are not the only guage of a good education. Music, Art, Sports and technical experiences are important.

A good basic education is necessary, but in this complex world, one needs a many-faceted educational base to achieve his or her potential in it.

Thanks to Harold

(The following is a letter to H. Litchfield, the Highway Surveyor. Ed)

Dear Harold:
I am responding to your letter of January 27, 1984.

With great pleasure and pride in you and your Department, I acknowledge the work done on Town Way, at no cost to the Town. I may not have the right to speak for the entire Town, however, on behalf of the Advisory Committee and other Townspeople with whom I have spoken, you and your Department personnel deserve our thanks for a job well done.

It is most gratifying to us who work with budgets to have a Department that goes above and beyond what is asked of them, as you have done.

Again many thanks, congratulations, hooray and well done!

Sincerely,

. . . short stories from Deer Hill School . . . .

(Here are some more stories written by Deer Hill School sixth graders.—Ed. Note).

Perfect

If I could do anything, I would visit the Planet Pluto. It would be exciting to see another world. I would probably walk around and look at all the different scenery, and start touching it.

If I could go to Pluto, I would go in a rocket ship and see all the shooting stars go by. It would be fascinating to see them up close and sparkle in the deep sky. Maybe I could catch one from the rocket window, and put it in a special box that you can see through. I wish I could hold one in my hand and make a wish.

Pluto would be like a fantasy land to me, everything different. It would be peaceful and colorful just like a rainbow swirl. Maybe the big holes will be filled with caramel. I wish I could have some now!

Maybe Pluto will have another life. A kind of life which is a great deal more powerful than earth life. Their life would control things far away for several miles. They could read our minds as fast as a computer can read our programs.

If I ever go to Pluto, I hope to see different kinds of rocks, like maybe, some cone-shaped with rainbow colors in them, or maybe a candy rock, shaped like a heart gleaming several miles ahead. Maybe I would see smaller kinds of stones that are valued more than gold. It might look like it's gold, but it's not.

If I could go to all of the planets, I would, but if I had to pick one, I would pick Pluto. I don't know why, but I guess it's perfect.

Earle Ben

Earle Ben is my cousin's Cabbage Patch Kid. He has a round pudgy face with dimples and blue eyes. His hair is short and doesn't look real but all in all, he is cute. Earle Ben has only one outfit. It is periwinkle blue and has a pink elephant embroidered on it. His outfit which is a short suit, has straps like overalls and a shirt to go with it.

Although Earle Ben is only a doll, he came with a birth certificate and adoption papers. I once saw on TV a family who had a Cabbage Patch Kid and then their dog tore it apart. They sent the doll to the company who makes them and the company sent them a death certificate when they were hoping for hospitalization!

Returning to Earle Ben's looks, he has a bellybutton and weird knees which he shows off all the time because his outfit is a short suit. His legs are evenly straight, except for his knees which are not sewn together, but through the middle of each one. I think that most Cabbage Patch Kids look alike, not their hair, (if they have any), but their faces.

Cabbage Patch Kids all have pretty much cherry expressions and excited-looking bright eyes, but Earle Ben's don't look too excited or bright.

You may have wondered why I did my story on a Cabbage Patch Kid because they're not really a person, but if you think about it, some people get so serious about their Cabbage Patch Kid, they give him or her their own chair, bed, carseat, carrier, stroller, and even their own bedtime. So, you can see, they're enough like people to do a descriptive essay on a person.

The Comeback of Jonny Hansen

Seventeen year-old Jonny Hansen of Denver, Colorado, arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, last month to undergo surgery at Mass. General Hospital. He had severely broken both of his legs.

Apparently, Jonny Hansen (winner of two amateur downhill skiing championships), had been taking drugs before he had gone to skiing practice. When he started down the steep slope on his new skis, everything seemed all right, until halfway down, where he felt dizzy and lost control. Hansen slid into a big tree where rescuers found him hours later.

After the operation, it was clear to Hansen and his parents that he would not be able to ski in the Olympics in February. The hope of winning a gold medal was gone and all that hard training would go to no use.

When the idea for competing in the Special Olympics arose, Hansen immediately went to get in condition for this opportunity to be on the team.

Later in January, Jonny Hansen had on special supports for his legs and was getting pretty much used to them. The handicapped athletes looked strange to Jonny, who had never seen any.

At the beginning, it was very hard and frightening for Hansen to go back on the slopes, but all the friendly people encouraged him to try. Try, he did, and he tried so hard that he made it to the Special Olympics team!

On Thursday afternoon, February 9, the team will go for the gold and, hopefully, win it with Jonny Hansen on their side.

Todd

I was reading in the hammock when Mrs. Landers, our next door neighbor, came running frantically toward me. When she calmed down, she told me that her son, Todd, was missing. I guessed right away that the little rascal had gone to our new club house.

We had let Todd tag along with us while we worked on our new club house, far in the woods across the street. He thought it was a big deal to come with us, even though we mostly ignored him.

I told Mrs. Landers I was pretty sure where he was and that I would go look for him.

Todd was five years younger than I, and it seemed like he always wanted to see what we were doing and where we were going, but I have to admit, he has a smile on him like a watermelon and he is fun once in a while.

While I was walking into the woods, I thought about the time his parents went away, and he stayed with us. He gave me a whole package of gum and I didn't even ask him. He was really generous. When he woke up in the morning, his thick, brown hair stuck up like a tree. I will never forget the time when I asked him to help me make a bridge, his big, blue eyes sparkled, and his whole face lit up.

When I got to the club house, I looked in. There he was, sound asleep! His chubby hand grasped his last cookie.

I guess he wasn't all that bad and I was glad he was safe. I woke him up and we walked home together.

Cinderella, in Another Point of View

I am Cinderella's Step-Mother. Everybody who has heard this story thinks I am a bad person. Nobody in the world thinks I am nice. I will tell you how it really happened.

When my husband died, I was very depressed. Perhaps I took out my bad mood on dear little Cinderella. I didn't mean to take my bad mood out on anybody. Cinderella was also very upset when her father died. After he died, all she did was sit around the house all day. The reason I made Cinderella do all the housework and clean the fireplace was to keep the poor girl busy.

I admit I did favor my other daughters more than my step-daughter Cinderella. That is something I will always regret. I was just not used to having her around.

The reason I wouldn't let Cinderella go to the Prince's ball is because I didn't think she would like it. That is another thing I will always regret. I don't think that was very nice of her to go without asking me. Especially to disguise herself.

The reason I got so mad at her when I found out about her and the prince, was because I was jealous.

I don't know if you like me any better now. I just thought you should know how it really happened.

Paul Revere and I

We were talking about the Revolutionary War in history class one day. Our teacher was explaining to us about the rounds of Paul Revere when the British came. The class was pretty boring, and I knew all about Paul Revere. I began to feel as though my head was swirling around in circles. I was spinning around and around.

I fell out of my dizziness and looked around. I saw all of my pots and pans hanging on the wooden walls. My children were eating. My wife was dusting the shelves. Everything looked like a normal eighteenth century house should look.

It was getting late. I was waiting for my delivery of English tea. A young boy delivered every day from the ships that came from England. He was an hour late. He was never late before. "Oh, well," I thought.

Soon, it was time for the two children to go to bed. I went up and tucked them into bed. I read them a short story and left them slumbering peacefully.

I tiptoed downstairs to talk with my wife. We chatted and talked. Neither of us had any idea where the tea was. So, I decided to take a look outside. I looked around, but the delivery boy wasn't anywhere in sight.

I gazed up at the sky. It was beautiful. I called to my wife to come outside and look. We sat gazing at the stars, when all of a sudden, we saw a man on a horse riding over the hill. It was dark and we could not see who it was. As he came closer, we recognized him. He was Paul Revere. He was a nice man that lived in town. He hated the British rule in the colonies.

As he rode by, he yelled, "The British are coming! The British are coming!"

That meant trouble. Big trouble in fact. We've been having trouble with England ever since we've settled here to the New World. We knew that they would attack soon. It was that time.

My wife ran upstairs and got the kids ready to run out of the house and into the woods. I collected a few essential things and waited for my wife and children to come.

They came rushing down the stairs and we all ran out the door. We ran into the woods behind our house and hid behind some bushes. We crouched down low and waited for a long time.

Finally, British soldiers started galloping down the road on their horses. I heard someone call me. "John, John Boulton." The voice exclaimed.

I slowly lifted my head up. There was Mrs. Turner, my history teacher, staring at me.

"John, answer me!" she said, annoyingly.

"Oh, I heard Paul Revere shouting that the British were coming. I took my family to the woods where we were safe from the British soldiers," I said, excitedly.

The whole class started laughing like mad. Even Mrs. Turner was laughing. She said, (tears coming out of her eyes), "The question was: John, why are you slumped over your desk like that, with your folded arms on your desk?"

PSO's Midyear Review

For most organizations it is the time of year for inventories and compiling year-end results. The school year is different than most fiscal years; the Parent School Organization is only a little past midway into its "sophomore year."

However, PSO's President Sue McNamera feels that it is a prime responsibility of the PSO to act as a communication link between the schools and community and that Cohasset deserves an update on the PSO's accomplishments and future goals.

School representatives have been providing vital information to parents on school issues and have been relaying parental concerns to teachers, administrators, and the School Committee. Along with these general responsibilities, school representatives at each school have worked on specific goals.

Osgood School representatives, Kyle Lubitz and Alicia Spinlinhauer have coordinated parental response on the issue of elementary class size, have raised funds for a library file cabinet, and have sponsored the "Web of Life" science demonstration. Future plans include a program for parents on "The Hurried Child."

Deer Hill representatives, Eileen Corbett and Marie Hartnett Leary coordinated parental response to the Outdoor School issue and presented to parents the panel discussion, "Your Child in Transition." The representatives have promised two year-end orientation programs: for parents of incoming fourth graders and for parents of incoming seventh graders.

Junior and Senior High School representatives, Karen Kirkendall, Robin Suhrbrier, Mary Hartwell, and Richard Mantz provided vital parental input into the School Committee's Attendance Policy workshops, created a system of parent sponsors at each grade level, raised funds for "Godspell" and the Performing Arts Scholarship Awards, and sponsored three Junior High dances. Future plans include a High School Handbook to be distributed in the fall and a meeting of senior parents to discuss graduation activities.

The Arts Enrichment Committee is chaired by Karin Bartow. This committee has coordinated Artist-in-Residence programs in all schools: a dance residency at Osgood, a video/film workshop at Deer Hill, and theater arts workshops for the eighth grade. In addition, the committee has assembled an Arts Resource File for each school and has arranged for other arts programs that relate to curriculum. Arts Enrichment was responsible for bringing the mimes Stromberg and Cooper to Cohasset and will sponsor a "Julius Caesar" performance at the High School.

Host families have been found for Cohasset's 48 METCO students by Judy Bronstein and her committee. The committee also organized a potluck dinner in Cohasset for METCO and host families.

Norma Grassy, chairman of the Special Needs Committee organized the parental program "Learning Disabilities: Is It for Life?" and sponsored Handicap Awareness Months in grades 1-4. The committee has arranged for the "Kids on the Block" puppets to perform later this year.

Volunteers have been organized by Joanna Chittick to act as room mothers and to help in elementary classrooms, computer rooms, IMS labs, libraries, and the 10th grade CareerCounseling Program.

Roger and Jill Crafts, PSO's Activities chairmen, personally contacted over 120 families new to the Cohasset Schools and organized the Fall General Membership Meeting, "Are We Killing the Arts?" School Candidate's Night and the Spring General Membership Meeting are now being planned.

"Good communications" is an important goal of the PSO. The PSO Calendar has done much to bridge the communication gap between schools and parents. PSO's Vice-president Rev. Ed Atkinson was responsible for compiling and distributing over 1500 PSO School Calendars. Publicity chairman, Cindy Chase provided essential news through school menus, posters, and local newspapers. The PSO also helped coordinate the "School News" column in Cohasset's Mariner.

Funds to support these many and varied programs were provided by the multiple activities of the Fund-raising Committee, co-chaired by Jan Pyle and Steve Geary. Proceeds from the Homecoming Yard Sale, Bookport, school pictures, raffles, and movies all combine to attempt to finance the PSO $6,000 budget.

However, PSO treasurer Alex Spooner claims that the money goes out often faster than it comes in. President Sue McNamera explains "There are too

Trip to U.S. District Court

Thursday, Feb. 9, 30 students participated in a field trip to the United States District Court.

Seniors from both Miss Robbins and Mr. Graebener's law classes had the opportunity to get first hand knowledge of the federal court system through a program presented by the U.S. Marshal, Herb Smith.

In addition to a slide-tape presentation, students were taken through a cell block and were also shown a variety of weapons and contraband.

Several students had their own finger prints and mug shots taken.

The day proved to be both informative and enjoyable. We hope to continue this approach to the Senior law elective by having a number of guest speakers bring this expertise and experience into the classroom.

Dental Health Taught

The dental health program, which included a film and discussion, is part of Cohasset's on-going Health education program.

Ball in selectmen's court...

Questioning became a bit more heated during Chief Hollingshead's testimony before the board. He noted it was his directions to Chief Dooley, as the sole director of operations in Hull that night, to "place a ladder up (against the window) and try to knock it out."

"There were two of my men inside there," he said, "so this was not a vacant building.I had to protect those men, so I tried to ventilate the building."

The chief explained that in a smoky fire such as the Nov. 25 blaze, it is important to ventilate the building so the firefighters within the building will not sustain injury because of a "blow back" of smoke if they open a door.

Chief Hollingshead said this situation could be life-threatening to a firefighter, so a burning building has to be ventilated. His men tried manually to pry open a boarded window, but did not succeed. That's when he asked Chief Dooley to use his ladder truck to puncture a second-story boarded window.

After that attempt failed, he asked Chief Dooley to set up a water pipe operation, which he noted is "quite a common practice in Hull."

When asked by selectmen if he approved of use of the ladder truck as a "battering ram," the Hull chief noted he was "put off with that phrase."

According to Hollingshead, that term implies " a tremendous positive pressure " exerted against an object. The Cohasset ladder was used " with gradual pressure - the use of battering ram is a real misconception," he added.

When asked by selectman John DeBassio why the Hull ladder was not used to puncture a hole through the window, the chief replied it was previously disabled at that fire. At the request of the Hull Town Counsel, the chief said he was not at liberty to discuss what actual damage occurred to the apparatus.

He did note that a firefighter sustained two broken feet that night when a cable snapped on the Hull ladder truck.

Atty. Cassis objected to the line of of questioning by DeBassio, and noted that in the previous week's hearing, he was not allowed to discuss the maintenance records of the Cohasset ladder truck.

DeBassio answered that Hollingshead's actions that night "goes against the credibility of his testimony, with his consistent misuse of equipment."

The Hull chief answered that at the present time he is reconsidering the terms of the mutual aid agreement Hull now holds with Cohasset, and also noted that "Hull is satisfied with my credibility."

The final witness called Tuesday night was Chief Dooley. He noted his 30 years of firefighting experience, during which he completed and passed numerous firefighting examinations which led to his continual promotion and his final appointment as Cohasset Fire Chief.

The chief said he received proper instructions from the Hull chief that night. He added that all photographs introduced as evidence by his attorney clearly demonstrate a lack of ventilation within the building, and a need to provide some ventilation.

In his firefighting experience, he said he had never seen a ladder damaged by pushing or puncturing a boarded window. Several times throughout his career, he had viewed men atop a water pipe operation, and told selectmen he trained his men in that procedure just last summer.

At this point in the hearing, Atty. Cassis submitted portions of a firefighting tactics and strategy manual, entitled "Fireground Tactics" in which the author states, "I have used the tip of an aerial ladder to open boarded-up windows... particularly to those with thin plywood sheathing." Chief Dooley said this book is written by an accomplished and award-winning firefighter, and is used throughout the country as "state of the art" firefighting theory.

In his closing notations to selectmen, Atty. Cassis commented, "in Hull, a firefighter was hurt (at this blaze) yet no one pressed charges against the chief. We have to look at the history here. We have to look at why these charges were brought (against Chief Dooley). Where is the credibility of the (Protulis) letter? Chief Dooley was good enough for you to choose him as your chief - you determined he was the right man for the job. It is a sorry state of affairs if this board must Monday-morning quarterback their chief. He's the one fighting the flames when his men's lives are endangered. He's the one making the decisions."

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

I simply can't bake a single cookie without thinking of my mother—still at the grand age of 88 sending everyone out of her kitchen clutching a little plastic bag of cookies, warm and fragrant from her oven. I suppose some of our friends grew up with childhood memories of cold cuts and pizza, but for some little girls (and boys), the smell, the taste, the little rules mother taught them, will be with them always. During this vacation week some of the happiest hours for little children are spent baking with mother. Donning an apron just made for them, getting out their own little cookie cutter, or mini-pie plate to use up left-over pie crust or cookie dough, is the stuff of which memories are made. Preparing for a party and helping to serve, is another treat for most youngsters and there are many ways little hands can help in preparing this recipe from Nancy Gordon. She writes: "This delicious dip is especially good with potato chips, Triscuits, or crackers and I am always called, the day after serving, for the recipe."

Here is Nancy's recipe for

DIP-Z-DO

Large pkg. cream cheese (creamed)
20 chopped, stuffed olives
1 c. Hellman's mayonnaise
1/2 minced onion
3 hard-cooked eggs, finely mashed

Cream cheese and beat with electric beater. Add eggs, olives and onions - beat - add mayo.

Making dessert from a packaged cake would be an easy, rainy-day project, though with all this scary talk, perhaps it's as well to skip that idea. This latest food ban of the chemical spray, EDP, boggles the mind. As though it isn't hard enough to juggle the food budget and healthy, nourishing meals, these periodic food scares have to be taken into consideration. Figures show the cost of food at an all-time high. Since May 1973, the New York City Dept. of Consumer Affairs has been calculating a weeky market basket survey based on the average prices of 41 items in 150 stores in the city. The first market basket totaled $50.68; last week it was $113.53. That's the bad news. After all, we're supposed to be celebrating Washington's birthday and so for the good news. Throwing caution to the wind, let's indulge in the traditional cherry dessert with Angela Long's

GLAZED CHEESECAKE PUFFS

Using a package of vanilla wafers, place one wafer in each small muffin cup which has been lined with a paper muffin cup.

Mix together 1 lb. cream cheese, softened (2 large pkgs.)
3/4 c. sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla

Pour over each wafer, filling cup 3/4 full. Bake 10 min. at 375 degrees. Cool. Cover with cherry pie filling. Makes 20-24.

Well, how about eating dirt? After a rainfall, when the earth smells rich and damp and flavorful, there are still people in the rural south who find clay-rich dirt a taste treat. Some eat a handful a day, snacking from jars or bags of dirt that has been dug from a favorite clay bank, Chemical tests show that it's not harmful - except for the salt, perhaps. Heaven knows we've had enough rain this month, but I think I'll pass on that and enjoy another of Nancy's recipes for her way of cooking a cheaper cut of steak without marinating or pre-tenderizing. "The steak is juicy and tender, as well as retaining the meat flavor with no interference of tenderizer flavor," she says of her

LONDON BROIL

1¼" thick London Broil

Pour 2T oil on hot skillet or heavy pan. Sear steak two minutes on each side to seal in juices. Transfer steak to shallow roasting pan and immediately roast in preheated 375 degree oven for 12 min. Transfer steak to hot platter and dot with butter. Salt and pepper to taste. Delicious!

For those who can rise above the February gloom to think ahead of warm, sunny spring and cool, revealing clothes, here is another of Shirley Hagg's Diet Workshop recipes. Counting calories is for Shirley a disciplined way of life and for a refreshing little treat she suggests this dessert. Dieters are allowed half a cup of milk a day, so to satisfy the desire for sweets, top 1/2 c. chocolate ice milk with 2T sugarless, crushed pineapple.

'Person of the Year'

This woman won't be identified because she has cancer but her 13-year old daughter felt she should be nominated.

Her mother completed chemotherapy treatment which exhausted her. "It took her a full year to begin to start a normal life again. She started to help other women with the same problem as she had, reassuring them and talking to them.

After a friend moved to Arizona, her mother "went through a hard time, adjusting to the loss.

"She joined a stress clinic and learned ways to express her feelings. She decided to earn more credits towards becoming a psychologist and joined a class at UMass."

"Maybe no one else will nominate her but I think my mom... deserves and has earned this honor."

Alice Daunt

Alice Daunt of Todd Road is still active in all volunteer activities. For five years she represented Cohasset on the Board of Directors of the South Shore Elder Services.

She serves on the following committees, Grant Proposal, Finance Personnel and Home Care and has prepared a grant proposal for Geriatric Counseling to be administered by the Social Service League.

Alice has served for seven years as Secretary of the Council on Aging; broadcast for four years mystery stories to the blind from a Marshfield radio station; 16 years as treasurer of the Democractic Town Committee and worked for four years at the Cohasset Consignment shop.

For 20 years she was a teacher at the Deer Hill School, four years a lector at St. Anthony's Church, 28-year member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and was co-chairman for three years of the Book Table for the Village Fair.

She also worked for 14 years in Lourdes, France.

Two Doctors

Two medical doctors, Dr. Roger Pompeo and Dr. William Raskin were nominated for their medical accomplishments.

Dr. Raskin, with help from friends founded the Rte. 3A Medical Center in 1981 and the center is opened 12 hours per day, every day of the year.

"A person in need may arrive at any time, based on emergency or convenience. He has been able to treat or evaluate many conditions successfully that other doctors usually refer from one specialist to another.

"He has succeeded in this new approach despite the opposition of organized medicine. At any rate, this type of center seems to be expanding; witness other centers in North Weymouth and Marshfield.

"I believe their development was spurred by his success. This new approach toward medical care is a welcome step forward for the health of the consumer in a town distant from any hospital. I expect this added competition will make all other physicians more responsive to the patients needs and improve the quality of life in this town," wrote one reader.

Dr. Pompeo was nominated because he was available to everyone.

One reader remarked how all of his patients felt about him. "No matter who the person was or what they were like they all said the same general thing: 'Thanks for being there for me. Not only for medical help but to cheer me up when I needed a smile.'

He's never asked for anything in return but gave of himself whether to the poor or elderly, at a football game or in his office at 1 a.m. Sunday morning "helping someone who had too good a time."

Among the nominees were Richard Henderson, Dr. Roger Pompeo, Dr. William Raskin and Lloyd Prescott.

The reader added when he's not practicing medicine, he's working in the woods, beautifying one of the few remaining forests in Cohasset."

Lloyd Prescott

This reader said he has done much public good without fanfare or public recognition. He started taking senior citizens to and from church Sunday mornings for three years and now he's one of seven drivers who rotate the Sunday Shuttle Bus Service.

He has served as a member of the Cohasset Housing Authority for five years and has been chairman of the board for a year.

Prescott has served the public through the Rotary Club and is currently the liaison Rotarian between the Boy Scouts and the Rotary.

He's served on the Rotary's Scholarship Committee and annually cooks a complete meal for the Rotary. The money saved is given to the International Rotary.

Mr. Prescott originated and planned the first dinner for the senior citizens housing building. The dinner is an annual Rotary service affair.

"Last but not least, he raised four good citizen daughters," the reader said.

Mary Jane McArthur

All of the selectmen deserve the resident's deepest thanks, said this reader, as they devote many hours to satisfy the needs of the citizens and to ensure town services are provided in a orderly and efficient manner.

"We know that they are not adequately compensated for the time which they spend in the performance of their duties. They serve unselfishly because they love their community."

Mary Jane, said the reader, spends several hours after her full-time job working for the good of the town and is conscientious about fulfilling the tasks required of her. She also has demonstrated wisdom and good judgement.

When Channel 5 taped July 4 on the Common, Mary Jane was seated in a chair on the grass near North Main Street at 5 p.m. She was working on some needlepoint.

She was there to ensure Channel 5 fulfilled its obligation to clean and leave the Common in the condition in which they found it before the filming began.

"She told me that she felt responsible to be there and to be assured the job was done satisfactorily. And it was."

The only time Mary Jane has any peace is to physically remove herself from Cohasset.

"I hasten to add Mary Jane is not someone whom I know well. I see her once or twice a year, walking in town or at the selectmen's office.

Louis Scicchitano

He is a 84-year old landscape gardener who has been employed for the past 60 years and probably more, wrote this reader.

"He's a great guy, hardworking and loved by all who know him." He is currently employed by the Jane Steel Estate on Sohier Street.

Corinne Cahill

She has been a volunteer for many years in all the Red Cross bloodmobiles held in Cohasset. From 1969 to 1974 she was chairman and again when no one else was found to take over, she assumed the rights from 1981 through the current year.

"These bloodmobiles (three every year) which are an all town operation would not be conducted if it would not be her dedication to this critical need.

Others included: Alice Daunt, Mary Benbou, Henry Dormitzer, Gertrude Hooper, Mary Jane McArthur, Louis Scicchitano, Ed Minelli and Corrine Cahill.

"There is an unbelievable amount of time and energy required over a short period of time to conduct these community bloodmobiles and she performs many other community services."

Henry Dormitzer

"This man, who introduced the "Tall Ships" to the U.S. and has conducted two of these special events is now directing a third one. He has travelled all over the world in the promotion of this event and has certainly put Cohasset on the map throughout."

Gertrude Hooper

Cohasset has had a very successful "Fish" program for many years. "This person has been the principal organizer and promoter of this service which requires volunteers to be available every day to transport people to doctors and hospitals."

Mary Benbow, Richard Henderson

Mary Benbow was nominated for her dedication as a special teacher at the Osgood School.

Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said if Town Counsel Richard Henderson billed for all the time demanded by town affairs, the town's legal bills would be five times what they are now.

Henderson was also praised for his hardworking and conscientious approach to the many legal questions which have faced the town in 1983.

Ambulance

system, which is needed."

The committee recommended a private service as a back-up recommendation in case the combined town service did not work out.

The report said, "This recommendation is based on the assumption that current employees would be willing to take the necessary training on their own time. If this is not acceptable to them, then the committee would recommend that the town contract a private ambulance service as a more cost effective method of improving service."

Regarding a private service the committee said, "The town could negotiate a very favorable contract with a private ambulance company."

Members added "We would not need to buy a new ambulance or other new equipment...Furthermore we would not have the cost of up grading the skill level of our employees."

The report also said, however, that for higher level EMT's, a private service would charge more money.

At last week's selectmen's meeting, Fire Captain Richard Conley asked selectmen to consider the morale of the firefighters when deciding how to handle the recommendations of the ambulance study committee.

F. Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the study committee, submitted a 55-page report and a 500-page appendix.

The new catch basin truck on North Main Street is operated by Brian Cogill.

Over the coffee counter, the big news is a cruise

Last Friday morning she was wearing her Dunkin' Donuts cap askew. Her dangly earrings, fashioned of one dice per lobe, cut a swa th through the scent of the morning coffee.

That's Lois, a different once, Lois De'Orazio. She and I in brief repartee have already agreed there are too few with our name. And she polished off her comments by saying, "We're all crazy, thank God."

The women who work in such shops have known how you like your coffee for years. They fill an important niche in a community. Because every town should have a place where the assorted can gather before officially starting the day. At this particular shop there are commuters waiting for carpools, tradesmen who swap what is probably both fact and fiction over muffins, commuters who have the cool to drive the Expressway balancing a cup of coffee, and people like me . . . there for the break in the week's program.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Lois is given to wearing accessories that are not included in the corporate uniform, fun, raise-the-devil earrings, buttons that amuse and bemuse, whatever to make the morning bright.

But the big news is her cruise. Lois and her husband, John, are going on a first class cruise next month aboard one of Cunard's Love Boat vessels.

John entered the Boston Herald's "Choose a Cruise" contest, taking a one in 50,000 chance he'd win, and won.

Valentine's Day they got the news. It's St. Thomas, St. Lucia, Grenada, even, Caracas, Barbados. And it's also deja vu. The two met on a cruise in 1977, married a year later, moved to Marshfield about four years ago.

He, in retirement as a lieutenant colonel, spends volunteer time coordinating tax assistance for older people on the South Shore.

One can only speculate about the various notions Lois will have to wear as accoutrements to morning coffee after the cruise. I, for one, look forward to seeing the purchases.

It is odd that such a casual encounter as morning coffee has an inordinate place of import in society. The burden on those women is major. They translate the impersonal enterprise of profit through coffee/doughnuts into the atmosphere that constitutes a friendly kitchen table. They are consistently responsive to those who dunk alone or with those whom they count on meeting five days a week for coffee &.

So many directions of life are reflected on the stools that circle the counter. Friday one young lady was dressed in a grand pink dress, at the ready for the sixth grade social to be held that afternoon at her school.

Sometimes I'm astounded by the pots of coffee that pass through my purview in the time I'm there. I watch them shift the pots, sock in the fresh grounds, and it has the same distracting benefits as I get when I crack walnuts. A quiet respite over coffee.

You remember Geoffrey Chaucer of "Canterbury Tales." Well he was onto something early. One of his favorite pastimes was sitting and watching people. Geoff never had the benefit of a doughnut shop. But he had those broad-taled (sic, truly sic) English pubs and taverns and inns, a wealth of humanity to espy in the hours that inspired his creation.

And there's not a whit of uncertainty in my mind that he, were he a 20th Century man instead of a Middle Ages one, would have recorded the gang at Dunkin' Donuts.

One morning, in a mood of social reform, Lois suggested we institute a monthly clean-up campaign for one hour each Sunday. " . . . America the Beautiful," she said, "is getting very dirty. And besides we'd get to meet our neighbors. We could care about one another as well as our land."

Reasonable, though she was speaking with a Lois who pretends there's no yard around her house.

And if that program starts, count on her to be swishing a rake and calling merrily to others doing the same. There's no sense starting till our leader returns from her cruise.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐I would rather have a letter from a woman who signed it "affectionately yours," and meant it, than from a gal who signs the letter "love," and doesn't mean it.

☐A widow and her money are soon married.

☐When Gov. Orville Freeman visited the state penitentiary at Stillwater, NM,a convict bumpedhis elbow. "Pardon me," said the inmate. "Certainly ," said the governor. "But," said the covict, "he wouldn't put it in writing."

☐Happiness: it can only be really found within.

☐Rarer than ability is the ability to recognize ability. This reminds me of something Francis Bacon said: "Natural abilities are like natural plants that need pruning by study."

☐Overheard in a cocktail lounge: I inherited my ability from both parents; my mother's ability for spending money, and my father's ability for not making it.

☐I'm always amazed by politicians who feel you should be grateful when you give back a little of your own money. It's like thanking a pickpocket for leaving the lint.

☐Serendipity, a word coined in the 18th century by Horace Walpole after his tale, The Three Princes of Serendip (i.e., Ceylon), means an apparent aptitude for making fortunate discoveries accidentally. The December Reader's Digest has my favorite definition of the word: Serendipity is looking in a haystack for a needle and finding the farmer's daughter.

☐An associated press wire carried this report from the North Carolina department of agriculture: Milk now sold in public eating places must be in original containers.

CHS sports roundup for the week . . .

GIRL'S BASKETBALL

The Cohasset Girl's Basketball team over powered Hol brook 47-39.

Cohasset was in the lead the whole way but in the last quarter they pulled away, outscoring Hol brook 15-10.

Vicki Spooner played exceptionally well scoring 10 points and pulling down 16 rebounds. Janet DiGirolamo added 11 points while Tracy Fitzpatrick chipped in 10 points.

In the last regular season game, Cohasset topped East Bridgewater 41-26 to improve it's record to 14-6.

At the half, Cohasset was down 23-16. But they came back in the secnd half with outstanding team defense, and outscored East Bridgewater 25-3.

Carla Lucas had 15 points for Cohasset.

The Girls are preparing for the State Tournament which will begin Feb. 29.

GYMNASTICS

The gymnastics team lost to Duxbury last week, 109.5 - 81.7. The girls could not take any places from their opponent but Kate Duffy was third in the all around competition.

In the league meet last Thursday, Kate Duffy was fifth in the all around competition and Mary Beth McNamara was fourth in the floor competition.

HOCKEY

The hockey team played two non-league games this past week, but fell short in both of them. Bishop Fenwick came to Cohasset and won 7-3. Joe Hoffman scored twice for the Skippers and Lee Wilson added one.

Against Don Bosco, the Skippers lost 9-0.

WRESTLING

The Cohasset Wrestling team competed in the Sections at Middleborough placing 10th out of 16 towns.

Cohasset's hopeful Lee Redd—had a sterling performance. He won the tournament as well as being named the "Most Outstanding Wrestler of the Tournament," by an unanimous vote of all the coaches.

He won his first match 13-0, then his second by a pin, his third by a default, and his final match 13-5.

Lee will compete in Milford on Friday and Saturday in the States. "Lee has a very good chance," said coach Sweeney, "because he is ranked one of the top four in the state."

Five out of the nine wrestlers who competed made it to the second day of competition.

Both Ricky Rourke and Bill Sargent placed fifth, making them alternates for states. Brian Leary and Jim Stanton also made it to the second day of competition with a great effort.

BOY'S BASKETBALL

The Skippers finished their very successful regular season with a 70-58 win over St. Patrick's of Watertown. In addition, Dave Barcomb, Tony Bogarty and Jim Creed were named to the South Shore League All-Star team and Barcomb was named Boston Herald Player of the Week after his performances against Holbrook and East Bridgewater.

During those two games, he scored 38 points, grabbed 27 rebounds and dished out nine assists.

Cohasset will open its first game of the Division III playoffs late next week. Coach Ed Minelli predicts the game will be held Friday, March 2 at home and probably against Abington.

Against St. Pat's, Barcomb scored 26 points and grabbed 15 rebounds, Creed scored 17 points, grabbed 18 rebounds and blocked six shots and Bogarty scored 13 points, eight rebounds and dished out 10 assists.

David MacDonald only scored four points but according to Minelli played an outstanding floor game.

In an earlier game, Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 78-50 behind Bogarty, Barcomb and Creed. Bogarty scored 29 points, 10 assists and eight rebounds. Barcomb also scored 29 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

Creed scored 15 points and 12 rebounds and reserve Phil Bernstein scored seven points and played exceptionally well.

Seahawks report . . .

The Bantam A team coached by Phil Thomas played to a 3-3 tie recently with Hyde Park. Ned Flaherty and Todd Fitzpatrick scored the first two goals on assists from Paul Ahern and Darrin Gold. The typing goal was Fitzpatrick's second which he scored unassisted.

The Seahawks, Squirts and Pee Wees completed a successful weekend of play in the South Shore Conference.

The Squirt "As" beat Canton 6-5 in a hard-fought battle. Jon Mahoney turned in a "hat trick" for the "Hawks" while Billy Tibbetts had a pair of goals and Tim Getto added the final score.

Assists were credited to John Resnick, Mahoney, Tibbetts, Dan Cohen and Al Rogers.

Bill Roberts' Pee Wee "As" extended their conference leading record to 16-2-3 with a 6-3 victory over Randolph. Mike Richardson started the scoring by getting his first of two goals on a lead pass from Brian Pompeo and Nicky Tibbetts.

A couple minutes later Pompeo scored on a pass from Richardson with Pat Glennon assisting.

The Hawks were moving the puck well and when the third period ended, John Zimmer, Erik Steverman and Jeff White added goals.

Billy Lincoln had a pair of assists and Damon Sparrow added another just missing a goal as the final period ended.

MITES

Frank Greenberg's Mite C team played two games recently. Their first contest ended in a tie with Hingham, 4-4. Mike Foley scored twice and Mike Reynolds and Eric McLaughlin each scored once. Assists were credited to Matthew Graves, Alex Alpert and Bobby Monihan.

In their second game, the Mites were defeated by a tough Canton team despite the valiant efforts of Peter Freeman, Jarred Graves and John Silver.

A Letter of Appreciation, Admiration, and Commendation

The Members of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Hanover, wish publicly to express their sincere thanks to THE O'DONNELL CONTRACTING COMPANY for the extraordinarily fine job they did recently on reconstructing and restoring the barn and outbuildings on its property. Seldom have we seen such conscientious and thorough workmanship, and seldom have we met craftsmen who brought such admirable skills and love of their work to their tasks. We unhesitatingly commend them to anyone who is looking for builders and artisans to render them far more than an honest day's work.

St. Andrew's Episcopal Church
Property Commission

Sincerely,
Robert A. Mackie

'Person of the Year'
Mark Lanza places third

By Jane Lane

Mark Lanza was surprised, not shocked, to learn he had placed third in this year's balloting for Cohasset's Person of the Year.

Nothing seems to shock this young man, who at 27 years old, occupies one of the more important positions in this town. Last year, Mark was appointed Cohasset's Executive Secretary - one of the youngest in the state.

Despite his youth, Mark appears unruffled by many of the situations from which Cohasset is consistently unraveling itself.

Fueled by a fire of ambition, and an intolerance for people who prefer an older, more experienced wisdom, Mark is out to set some goals for himself and this town.

School debate expected with $4 million budget

By Mike Berger

Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria was a bit stunned Tuesday morning after learning the School Committee wants $126,097 more than the budget figure given to the committee.

"I don't thi nk we have that kind of money," said Lagrotteria.

In an emotional plea to parents and school committee members, School Supt. Eugene Crowell said unless the School Dept. receives the added funds, "you're not getting the class sizes you want, you can forget computers and the athletic budget will be cut in half.

"You won't send sports teams to Boston,"he added.

Committee members, Chairman Dick Conley, Joseph Nedrow and Diana Kornet voted to approve Crowell's request. Members Martha Gjesteby and Jack Langmaid voted to abstain from the vote.

Langmaid is concerned about spending too much money on computer education. Gjesteby said she didn't have enough information to vote on the budget.

She wants to know about any surplus funds expected at the close of the fiscal year (June 30) and actual and current class sizes for Grades K-12.

These two members abstaining from the budget vote upset the other members. Kornet said it's important the school committee be unanimous in its support of the school budget before going to town meeting.

Meanwhile, a meeting will be set between the school committee and the advisory board to discuss the budget. In past years the advisory board has maintained a tough "hold the line" stance on school budgets.

The submitted school budget will be $4,065,335, an increase of $224,414 or 5.78 percent increase over last year's budget. The advisory board granted the school committee a 2.5 percent increase.

The increase will save one teacher's job and avoided cuts in computer education and athletics. Because of declining enrollment, there will 80 fewer school students next year. Because of this and fiscal restraints, it is expected two high school positions will be cut next year, one other at the Deer Hill School, a part-time kindergarten teacher and an assistant bookkeeper.If the School Dept. is forced to go with the lower budget increase recommended by the advisory board, Crowell said a teaching position will be cut from the Osgood School.

Crowell, using fiscal comparisons of other area towns, said Cohasset shows the lowest school budget increase to date. Other towns showed primarily a five to seven percent budget increase.

Comparing schools to other town services, Crowell said the health and sanitary budgets have grown 78 percent over the years, protection of people and property, 67 percent,while the school budget increase is much lower.

"Why does a school system which has a top reputation throughout the South Shore have to struggle along at the lowest level of financial support?" asked Crowell.

He added realtors frequently remind him people move into Cohasset because of the school system's reputation.

Nedrow told the board the committee member's first responsibility is to children and felt it was wrong to arbitrarily pick a budget number.

Still unclear about the school budget is how much money will be budgeted for salary increases for staff. Crowell said 80 percent of school costs is staff-related. Because of negotiations, a line-by-line version of the budget has not yet been released but portions of the budget are available for review at the town library.

The committee also plans to ask town meeting for at least $160,000 to replace the badly leaking roof of the Deer Hill School. The committee feels $500,000 is needed to repair all the school damaged roofs.

Calling all history buffs

Attention, all Cohasset history buffs (except Cohasset Historical Society members.) Here's your chance to shine and win gift certificates.

This is the first week of the Mystery House Tour, recognizing many historical homes in town and the way they looked at the turn of the century.

Thanks to the Cohasset Historical Society, the Mariner will publish a turn-of-the century photo of a home which exists in Cohasset today.

At the end of ten weeks, our first place winner will be awarded $100 in gift certificates to loca businesses. Second place will be a $50 certificate and third place a $25 certificate.

If need be, Week 11 and 12 will be set aside for Sudden Death Playoffs.

Each week, we will publish the names of those people who are in the running for the first three places.

Historical Society members are excluded and no one should call Society Curator David Wadsworth for advice.

Once you find it, simply write down the address of the home(exact number and street), along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the Mariner.

The address is Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or you can drop the answers off in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

We'll publish a running tally of the results each week, so you can see how you're doing vs. the competition.

THIS WEEK'S MYSTERY HOUSE #1

Our first mystery house is tucked away on a well-beaten path familiar to many residents. That's the only clue we'll give.

The next week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today, plus a little history of each house.

The mystery homes were chosen based on location, age and the number of renovations over the years. You'll find each home has undergone some changes but not too many, just enough to make it interesting without being too tough!

Girls advance to state hoop Round II

Cohasset overpowered Sandwich 63-53 in game 1 of the State Tournament.

At the half, Cohasset was only up two points when they came back fighting in the third quarter to outscore Sandwich 20-10.

Cohasset opened up to a 14 point lead in the fourth quarter to shut down Sandwich.

"When we switched to a diamond and one defense in the second half, we held Sandwich's top scorer to two points over a 12 minute spread," said Coach Bill Fallon, "and that was due to Vicki Spooner (6 points) who quietly did a very good job defensively."

"The two keys to the game," said Coach Fallon, "was in the way we broke Sandwich's press easily for layups, and our rebounding, which improved tremendously in the second half."

"Overall it was a very good team effort and our best performance all year," continued Coach Fallon. "We played with tremendous intensity throughout the year and this is a victory that everyone in our Girls' Basketball program can be proud of."

Carla Lucas scored 16 points, Janet DiGirolarno scored 14 points. Tracy Fitzpatrick scored 13, Sarah Seavey scored 12 points, and Kerry O'Brien chipped in two points off the bench.

Cohasset now advances to compete against last year's Division III Champs, Cathedral, on Friday in Marshfield at 6 p.m.

Cohasset's week . . .

Police Dept. budget requests

Police Chief Joseph Kealey feels the most urgent requests in his Police Dept. budget is $3,500 for a television monitor in the cells and $4,000 for a Breathalyzer.

The monitor would cover three cells reserved for males and one juvenile detention cell.

The television monitor would help alleviate the threat of prisoners hanging themselves or choking to death.

The Breathalyzer would replace ten-year old equipment which is becoming obsolete, Kealey said.

Kealey is requesting three cruisers for a total cost of $29,500. The chief's car may be used as a detective car since its trade-in value is about $800.

In another matter, Kealey has told selectmen it would cost between $18,000 and $20,000 to increase the police force during the summer.

The money would go to hire six students from criminal justice training schools for a 40-hour week. The students would get around on foot or by motorbike.

Hubbard resigns

Conservation Commission Chairman John Hubbard sent a brief letter to selectmen informing them he has resigned from the commission. Although not specifying a reason, the letter comes a few weeks after developer Donald Staszko filed conflict of interest complaints with the state and town against Hubbard.

The conflict of interest stems from Hubbard's opposition to Staszko's building a house on Pleasant Beach, off Jerusalem Road.

A neighborhood group formed to oppose the plan for environmental reasons. In the spring the commission voted against allowing the house to be built. But Staszko won his appeal from the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Hubbard proposed the commission challenge the DEQE's ruling. Staszko found out Hubbard was a member of the neighborhood group opposing the plan. In December the group sent a letter to over 300 residents asking for legal and engineering assistance.

Jewelry theft

Four young men entered Cohasset Jewelers Friday, distracted store clerks and lifted nearly $7,000 worth of rings from a window display case.

Police said two of the men talked to sales personnel while two others opened an unlocked window case and took seven rings, worth nearly $1,000 each.

The rings were not discovered taken until a few minutes after the men left the store.

Police described the men as white males between 18 and 20 years old and added two of them were wearing red jackets with white trim.

Parking lot dispute

Acting Town Clerk Fran Marks is determined not to sign a statement which says the town received a formal application from the owners of the Cohasset By The Sea Motel to use a parking area on Pleasant Street.

The application was written to the Town Clerk and the appeals board.

Apparently, John Rook took the letter to Town Hall Aug. 5 and found the town clerk's office closed. Marks was on vacation and a replacement was on lunch break. The letter was never officially received by Mark's office and therefore no time stamp was used.

Charles Humphreys, attorney for the hotel is arguing the application was filed more than 65 days ago and by default the application should be granted. Marks will ask Town Counsel Rich Henderson for advice on the matter and to represent her if the matter ends in litigation.

Election update

Doris Golden of Bound Brook Lane has taken out nomination papers for a three-year term for selectmen. Her opponents will be Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur and Selectman John DeBassio.

In another major race, School Committee Chairman Dick Conley has announced he will seek re-election. His opponents will be George Marlette III and Judith Volungis.

Deborah Cook of King Street will oppose Patrick Plant of Jerusalem Road for planning board.

Another major race will be for Recreation Commission where Robin Suhrbier, Peter Laugelle, Peter Whitman, Robert Beggan and Terese England Duggan are running for two unexpired four-year terms.

Fran Marks is the only candidate now for the town clerk's position.

The deadline for taking out nomination papers for the April 14 town election is 5 p.m. Friday.

Ambulance changes

Although selectmen voted to retain the town-operated ambulance service, they vowed last week that "changes will be made."

Selectman Frank England questioned EMT instructor-coordinator James Lee Gurry at length last week. Specifically, he wanted to know why updated policies and procedures had not been submitted as Gurry previously promised last November. Gurry answered they were in the process of revision, but he needed assistance typing the list.

Gurry, incensed at England's questioning, at one point asked selectmen, "Am I on trial here?" He insisted the EMT-ambulance program remains certified by the state, despite the absence of an updated policy.

Selectmen explained the fire department, Capt. Gurry, and Chief Martin Dooley, were not standing trial, but the board wanted to know the current status of the program.

England also noted that within the report submitted recently by the ambulance study committee, it was stated EMT instruction is sometimes taught by non-certified EMT instructors. Capt. Gurry explained that the state allows teachers to give a class while they obtain credit toward EMT certification.

Another clarification sought by selectmen was an explanation as to why inspection of the ambulance and equipment is made only every other day. Selectman England suggested it would be better management for the equipment to be checked at the outset of each shift. He explained this point specifically to Chief Dooley, saying, "it doesn't seem professional" to check this specialized equipment every other day.

As he was exiting from the meeting, Capt. Gurry noted, "it would be nice to hear a 'thank you' once and a while." Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur assured the captain "this will not be the last time you will be before the board." She added their gratitude will be expressed in the future.

School candidates night

The PSO will sponsor a school candidate night Thursday, March 15 at 7:30 p.m. in room 107 at the high school. The three candidates, incumbent Richard Conley, Judy Volungis, and George Marlette will speak and respond to pertinent questions relating to School Committee issues.

The audience will be able to ask the candidates any questions.

For further information, please call Jill Crafts at 383-6832.

Phone-a-thone

PSO volunteers will be calling nearly 800 Cohasset school parents Thursday, March 1st, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. to request community-wide support for their programs. Monetary pledges are tax-deductible and will be used to continue vital PSO work in the schools.

Health Agent says she was threatened

At a recent Board of Health meeting, Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos said she was threatened by Paul Barry, owner of Cohasset Heights Landfill, when she was inspecting the commercial and private dump.

"He said he would bury me in the landfill," Eliopoulos told Health Board members. "He would not let me leave the landfill," she said. "He screamed at me and grabbed me. I was totally intimidated."

Eliopoulos said, "There was clearly a physical threat to my safety."

When she went to Assistant Town Counsel John Slater after the incident, Eliopoulos found Barry "had already called his lawyer and said he accidentally bumped into me."

Health Board member Dr. Charles Bliss told Eliopoulos to take a police officer with her the next time she went to the landfill.

During the same meeting the Health Board discussed health board violations with two town businesses.

The Board earlier ordered Central Market exterminate mice living in the building. Central Market was also cited for having only one sink in their meat cutting room.

Eliopoulos said, "You absolutely cannot wash a meat slicer in a slop sink. You have to come up with a solution or you can't sell meat."

John Miller of Central Market said most of the mice were gone. He agreed to fit a double sink into the market within 30 days.

Harrington's Restaurant has been cited for several violations, including a broken dishwasher and peeling paint. Company officials have been asked to appear before the board twice, and has failed to appear both times.

The Board decided to send the firm a notice to close the restaurant, but also to tell him he still has the opportunity for a public hearing.

New Town Hall Committee appointed

Faced with a request to endorse a recommended $30,000 for renovations to the Bates Building, selectmen last week decided to investigate the possibility of constructing a new Town Hall.

The perfect solution would be to have every town department under a single roof, according to Selectmen Chairman Mary Jane McArthur. In an effort to seek the best alternatives to that proposal, selectmen appointed five residents to a Town Hall Study Committee.

Kenneth Wilcox, Anthony Fasciano, Colin Studds, Benjamin Blake and David Terry have accepted appointments to that advisory committee.

Members of the sewer and health departments, and the planning board and conservation commission, currently housed within the deteriorating Bates Building, came before selectmen with a request for $30,000 to renovate the structure.

Selectmen said they would prefer to study the alternative of a new town hall building, although they would consider a smaller request to make minor repairs to the Bates Building. While bids were being bantered from either side, selectman Clifford Mitman suggested a list of prioritized improvements be submitted to the board. The amount should not exceed $10,000. An article for town meeting consideration will be held for this budget item, although Advisory Board Chairman James Lagrotteria emphasized speed in calculating the figures. He warned there may not be enough funds in the budget to appropriate for this expense at such a late date.

Daniel Cotton, planning board chairman, and a advised selectmen not to ignore the study submitted in 1981. That study was negated after Proposition 2 1/2 made funding of a new building impossible.

Telephone grants

New England Telephone is offering grants of up to $1,000 to help small, non-profit social or cultural organizations conserve energy and save money.

Grants will be awarded to aid successful applicants in making energy-related improvements - such as installing storm windows, repairing furnaces, and buying caulking and weatherstripping materials. A total of $40,000 will be donated by New England Telephone.

To be eligible for the grant program, the applicant must own the building, have a long-term lease or have control of the building for an extended period of time.

Applications must be received by May 1. For further information or applications for the energy grant program call Jung at 461-1325.

Sewer treatment plant improvements discussed

By Bill Hayward

The Sewer Advisory Committee is continuing to study several possible solutions to the town's sewage disposal problems.

The options include connecting to the Hull sewage treatment plant, upgrading the present treatment plant, and repairing individual septic systems on site.

At a recent meeting the committee discussed possible improvements which could be made to the Cohasset treatment plant. The plant is currently overloaded and the effluent it is discharging into James Brook, does not meet state standards.

Residents living near Jacobs Meadow, directly behind the plant, said they feel the plant's discharge contributes to the frequent flooding of Jacobs Meadow.

Lobstermen complained that the plant's discharge is killing lobsters stored in the harbor, by reducing the harbor water's salinity and by polluting.

Committee vice-chairman Bill Baird said the plant's impact on flooding in Jacobs Meadow is minimal. Baird said that with a one inch rain fall, 20 million gallons of water would run off into Jacobs Meadow and raise the water level 4½ feet.

If the treatment plant discharged 300,000 gallons of effluent into James Brook during that rain fall, the water level would be raised by less than one inch, Baird said.

Baird suggested the tide gates in Jacobs Meadow, which were installed in 1923, be replaced with gates which open fully to allow more water to drain out of the meadow.

The present tide gates open only "a crack," Baird said. He added, "They are a tremendous restriction on the outflow of water from Jacobs Meadow."

Baird said since Jacobs Meadow is a natural salt marsh, the tide gates should be left open normally, to let the tide flow in and out. The tides gates should be closed only when higher than normal flooding is expected.

The pollution of James Brook could be stopped by adding a filter to the plant. If the plant were upgraded and a tertiary filter added, the discharge "would be close to drinkable," Baird said.

Unfortunately not all the pollution in James Brook comes from the treatment plant. A large portion of Cohasset center drains into James Brook. Committee Chairman Chartis Langmaid said, "The water downstream from the treatment plant is cleaner than the water upstream."

As an emergency measure in case the plant should break down, Baird suggested that four 50,000 gallon storage tanks be installed under the plant's driveway. The extra storage would allow about a day to repair the plant, without discharging untreated sewage.

Baird said he does not believe the treatment plant is killing lobsters in the harbor.

After studying a report done on the harbor in the early 1970's, Baird said, "From everything I've read, even if we didn't have a sewage treatment plant the lobsters would still die."

There are several reasons for the lobsters dying, Baird said.

One reason is the low salinity of the harbor because of the rainfall. Another reason is the relatively high water temperature in the harbor, especially in summer, compared with ocean water. There is also a lack of oxygen in the harbor water, caused by plankton and algae.

Baird said, "If there are unexplained lobster deaths without rainfall, the reason is not salinity, but that the lobsters are shell-shocked by lack of oxygen and high temperatures."

However, Baird felt that some solution to the lobstermen's problem should be found. He suggested pre-cast concrete holders be placed in another harbor for lobster storage.

Another committee member said the lobsters could be stolen from the dock and lights.

Baird said, "It is an emotional problem, and the only way to solve it is to offer some solution."

Tax bills update

Hopefully, tax bills will be prepared and sent to residents by March 9, according to Board of Assessors Chairman Brian Wilkin.

But the cost of borrowing $2 million, necessitated by the late tax bills, averaged about $31,000. Wilkin told selectmen last week that the state has given its preliminary certification of the tax assessments, and if everything goes according to schedule, the final form should be prepared within two weeks.

What snagged final preparations for the tax billing was 100 properties which have not been processed into the town's computer system. Without a complete list of all assessed properties, the town can not receive certification from the state Department of Revenue, Wilkin explained.

It was the delay in developing new computer software on which to place the data, which caused the holdup and the need to borrow $2 million, he added.

Attempting to uncover the reason why the data had to be filed in the town's new computer system, causing such expensive delays, Selectman Frank England asked, "exactly who convinced you to put it into the computer?"

Wilkin answered, "there were trade-offs involved here. When do want to get your tax bills out? Our primary concern was to get the bills out before the end of the year."

Advisory Board Chairman James Lagrotteria suggested assessors ask for some part-time assistance, in an overtime expense, to prepare the list of 100 properties for the computer.

Mark Lanza . . .

After receiving this honor from the community, Mark half-jokingly mentioned he would now have to buy a hat two sizes larger. But anyone who has met Mark, quickly realizes he is a young man who supports a strong ego - a necessity to spur him to do some of those goals he has yet to fulfill.

Above all, he notes, he is a professional. Not a boy doing a man's job, as some would believe. He is an experienced municipal manager with a wealth of knowledge and an eagerness to explore things unknown.

He intends to remain in municipal government in one form or another. Currently, he is in the midst of his first year at New England School of Law. He's doing well, as if anyone would expect anything less. Between his duties in Cohasset and his law studies, there is little time for social pursuits. But that is something this young bachelor will seek after his priorities have been attained.

He's reaching for the day, and enjoying the flight. Mark was raised in Wareham, a vast difference from the affluence of this town. He struggled through a poor school system, but managed to gain entrance into Bridgewater State College. There, in a new environment of sound education and intelligent endeavors, Mark thrived.

He went onto Suffolk University for a master's degree, where he graduated with honors.

In another two years, with a law degree in hand, Mark would like to continue in municipal government, at least for another five years. He'll probably pursue a career using a law degree in municipal labor law and real estate law.

Why was he one of the top three vote-getters in the Person of the Year contest? Mark is not stumped by that query. "First, I am not in a position of controversy," he says. "And I think people perceive me as a professional. People know I am making an honest and sincere effort to make this a professional office."

Mark has been a Cohasset resident for a year and one month. His contract with the board of selectmen expires in June. He would like very much to have that document renewed.

"This office is still a challenge. And there's a lot of matters yet to be solved - so many to be done," he continued. "The board of selectmen has set many goals and objectives. I have yet to help them achieve some of those goals."

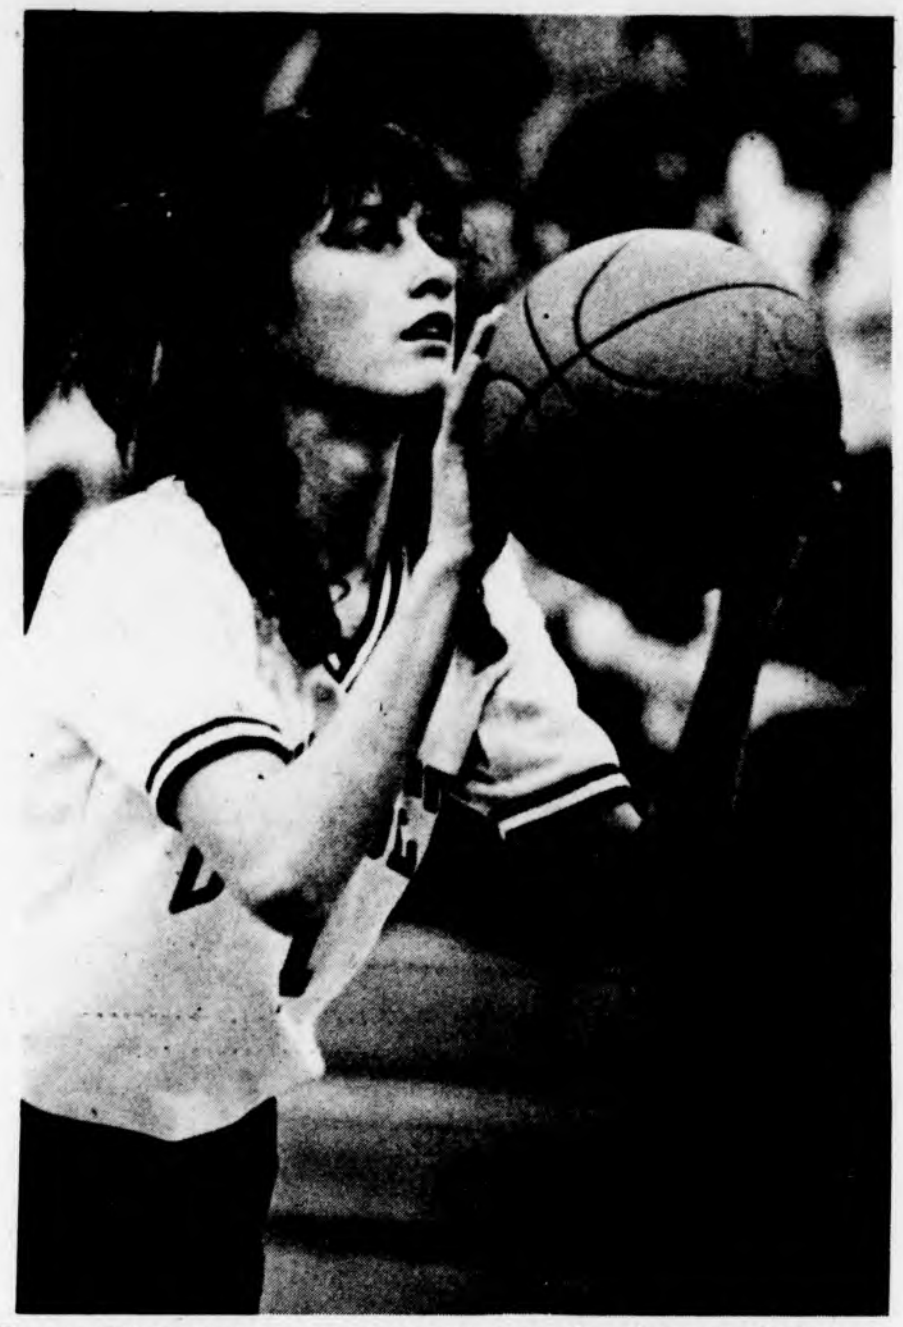
One of the primary concerns at the moment, along with assisting with budget and town meeting preparations, is the selectmen's mandate to investigate problems within the fire department. He is also anxious to continue the coordination of duties of the executive.

Mark Lanza

The centralization of the purchasing and supplies department, and the full development and implementation of a department head's performance and evaluation system, are also high on his list.

"Maybe some people who know me and how I work for this town voted for me," he adds. "I try to work diligently to make town government in Cohasset more efficient."

He is unabashed in his love for his new residence. "The people I've met here have treated me very well. This is a new position in Cohasset, but I have been very well received. Maybe because I'm apol i tical, people have accepted me easier," he says.



Mark hopes to continue this harmonious relationship with Cohasset. It is part of his specific plans for the future.

As he relaxes in a chair within his Town Hall office, Mark states, "It's not one of my ambitions to become a millionaire. I've got a taste of what good education and hard work can bring, and I'll continue to set my sight high. Gesturing, with his index finger to the sky, he adds, "way up there."

New ambulance inspections approved

By Karen Brown

In a special meeting Saturday, the Cohasset Board of Selectmen voted to inform Fire Chief Martin Dooley to upgrade inspection reports on the town's ambulance shifts, effective Feb. 29.

The new reporting procedure will include changes in the schedule of inspections and a new emergency equipment checklist.

The action came after recommendations of the Ambulance Study Committee.

The Committee has also recommended implementation of a central dispatching unit for emergency calls.

However, according to the committee, installation of a "911" number by the phone company could take as long as 18 months.

"I think we should start it now," said Selectman Frank England.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza is concerned about the impact of centralized civilian dispatching on contract negotiations with both police and fire departments since there is no commitment from either department for a full-time dispatcher.

The board approved the concept even with its "manning implications for both departments."

The board also recommended a new ambulance for the town and the creation of a Medical Overseeing Committee for Ambulance Services.

Responsibilities of this Committee also include assignment of EMTs to ambulance service.

The board dated the inspections part of the order effective Wednesday, Feb. 29.

The board also authorized rescheduling of the Fire Captain's Exam for May 15 and selectmen approved a Fiscal Year 25 cents per mile Mileage Reimbursement Rate for the Building Inspector, Plumbing Inspector, Wiring Superintendent, Health Agent and Dog Officer.

☐ February was a busy month indeed for Gerard and Katherine Stanton of 30 Clay Spring Road! Feb. 5 was the "kick-off" with Gerard and Katherine celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary. After celebrating that in grand style, Feb. 19 brought a super treat, their first grandson, Patrick Stanton Hynes. Patrick is the son of Richard R. and Mary (Stanton). For the finale, the Stantons are vacationing in Bermuda, an annual event that must seem wonderful this year.

☐ Happy to report Bruce Maynard is up and about after his surgery performed as a result of a car accident.

☐ Soon to be celebrities are on the stage this week. The Hingham Civic Orchestra and the Children's Ballet Workshop are sponsoring "Alice in Wonderland" March 3 and March 4 at Notre Dame Academy. The two stars to look for are Bridget Leung, a fourth grader at Deerhill School who will play a carpenter; and, Johanna Horn, a second grader at Osgood School will play the part of the oyster. For tickets and more information, go to the Hingham Library or the Hingham Bookstore.

☐ Congratulations to the Seahawks in their vacation victories which enable them to continue on in their bid for state champs. The next leg of the tournament takes place in Springfield in March.

☐ It certainly is the week to report about future stars—out of 100 children who auditioned for the musical "Annie," to be produced by the Hingham Civil Group, Caroline deLima (5 years old) has been cast. Caroline was one of the youngest to audition.

☐ A speedy recovery is wished to Bob Healey, who was in an accident recently.

☐ The Hanson Riding Club held their winners of the year and awards recently at Ridder Country Club and two Cohasset girls, Karcy McGovern and Colleen McGovern were among the award winners.

☐ Henry Rattenbury has joined the real estate office of Hallmark 100 Properties as a sales associate, according to Chris Ford, the firm's owner.

Henry is a lifelong resident of Cohasset and has been with the Cohasset Post Office for the past 24 years.

"Henry's detailed knowledge of the town plus his experience with real estate investing will make him a tremendous asset to our firm," said Ford.

Rattenbury lives on Briarwood Lane along with his wife Yvette and their four children. Henry will be working out of Hallmark 100's new office in the Brigantine East Building on Rte. 3A in Cohasset.

☐ Diarmuid B. O'Connell, a Dartmouth College sophomore from Cohasset, is studying French language and culture in Blois, France this term as a participant in Dartmouth's Language Study Abroad program there.

As part of the Language Study Abroad program, students spend an academic term in a foreign country, living with a local family there and attending classes taught by native professors at a local university. The courses cover language, literature, civilization and history, but the students are also given time to travel on their own and learn about the country.

☐ Congratulations to the following girls of Troop 4625 who recently became Brownies:

They are: Elizabeth Corcoran, Caitlin Hurley, Melinda Johansen, Caitlin O'Leary, Serena Quemere, Amy Silvia, Martina Snyder, and Erin Steimle.

Under the leadership of Kathy Quemere and Marsha Silvia, the girls are learning to be ready helpers, friend makers, and discoverers.

They have also been selling Girl Scout cookies and are planning a very special trip with some of their profits.

☐ Lee Reid, a senior at CHS came out of the Division II South Sectionals a winner in more ways than one! Not only did he win his match, he was the tournament Co-MVP. His coach was pleased with Lee's efforts, and labeled him an "outstanding wrestler."

☐ Two gymnasts in our town recently went to Hartford to a gymnastics meet, the New England Cup. Michell Hartley, 11 years old and Jane DeLima, an eighth grader were on their way to give their best efforts.

☐ Charlie DeSantis and his family had a grand time skiing during the Feb. vacation. Weather was great and skiing super. Everything one could ask for!

☐ Cohasset girls basketball made new stats recently when the Patriot Ledger All-Stars were announced. Three gals made the team, Janet DiGirolamo, Carla Lucas and Tracy Fitzpatrick are all in the limelight. Continued success to you in the states this week.

☐ Another reminder the PSO is planning a Phone-A-Thon to be held March 1. This is being held to raise funds to continue student programs. It's for our students and they are hoping for your generous response. Help support this effort to do more for the schools.

☐ Here's wishing Kevin Quilty a rapid recovery after his recent surgery on his shoulder. After the required healing time, bet he'll be better than ever on the ice next year!

☐ If you thought you saw the Channel 7 television cameras last week, you were right. They were here to interview Walt Sweeney, and it will be shown on Thursday, March 8 at 4:00 on the New England Afternoon Show. Don't miss it.

☐ The countdown is on, the racers are training, and the applications must be in early so that they are able to participate . . . The Cohasset Roadrace is April 1 this year, and is a popular one which is sponsored by the Rotary Club. The entry fee is $5, which goes to the scholarship fund. Sign up now by getting an application at local merchants or by sending a self-addressed envelope to: Road Race, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA. The race is limited to 800 runners, and last year many applicants had to be refused.

☐ Once again congratulations to Phil Smith as he undertakes the challenge offered to him by the Junior League to decorate a room in the Junior League Showhouse in Dedham. Every year Phil seems to "out-do" himself and this year sounds like no exception.

'Forty Carats' March 2-4

The name of the play is "Forty Carats," the time and place is Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. (Mar. 2 and 3) and Sunday at 2 p.m. (Mar. 4) at the Cohasset Town Hall.

This award-winning comedy by Jay Presson Allen will be staged by the Cohasset Dramatic Club with a cast of actors and actresses from Cohasset and surrounding towns.

Jan Higbee and Ed Lappen play the central characters of Ann Stanley and Peter Latham, with a fine supporting cast made up of veterans of and newcomers to the Cohasset Town Hall stage.

Directing the show is Harry Heineman. Production Managers are Tamsyn Elliott and George Hamacher; and Clark Young will do the stage lighting.

"Forty Carats," in its original Broadway version, was chosen one of the Best Plays of the 1968-69 New York season. Abe Burrows was the Director of that production which ran for 780 performances, playing to packed houses at the old Morosco Theater.

The setting for the play is first somewhere in the Greek Islands of the Mediterranean, then in New York City, as this humorous story of age and summer romance unfolds.

Tickets for the Cohasset production of "Forty Carats" are $4, available at the door or in advance at Fleming's Hardware, Cohasset Center.

'Alice in Wonderland'

Save some time on your calendar the first weekend in March so you'll be sure not to miss the adventures of a certain little girl named Alice when she pursues an elusive white rabbit down his hole.

All the zany characters from the Lewis Carroll classic, Alice in Wonderland, will come to life on the Notre Dame Academy stage in Hingham March 3 and 4 at 4 p.m. when the Children's Ballet Workshop and the Hingham Civic Orchestra collaborate on their third annual joint balletic presentation.

The works of 13 composers are being used to bring to life the March Hare, the Dormouse, the Cheshire Cat, the Caterpillar, and Tweedledee and Tweedledum, not to mention the Walrus, the Carpenter and a whole mass of oysters.

Dancing lobsters, a snooty rose, a lovely lily and a Queen of Hearts who keeps demanding, "Off with his head!" will fill the stage with color and movement.

It's a treat for young and old, so don't miss it. Tickets are available at the Hingham Public Library, the Hingham Square Bookshop, at the door, or by calling 749-5862 (afternoons and evenings). See a classic come to life through the magic of ballet and orchestra.

Flea market March 3

Saturday, March 3, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., the Choral Art Society will be sponsoring an old-fashioned Flea Market at St. Luke's Church, Scituate, located on Route 3A and across from the Town Hall.

A small admission fee of 50 cents will be asked at the door, with Senior Citizens and children admitted for 25 cents.

There will also be a raffle table with many interesting items, highlighted by a handmade quilt with over 1,000 blocks in the design.

Proceeds from the raffle, dealer and admission fees will go toward the Society's May 12th Spring Concert which will be "King David," by Arthur Honegger, which will be sung in English.

This program is supported in part by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

Mondale supporters meet

An organizational meeting for Cohasset Democrats interested in helping the Mondale for President Campaign will be held Friday night, March 2, at 8 p.m. at the Cushing Room, next to the Rockland Trust Bank in Cushing Plaza, Cohasset.

"A good grassroots effort is needed in Cohasset and other towns to make sure that Mondale wins the Massachusetts Presidential Primary," said Cohasset Mondale co-coordinator Donna J. McGee.

McGee and Mary Richard are coordinating the Mondale campaign in Cohasset. They will be working with other Democratic activists in Cohasset for Mondale at the March 13 Presidential Primary.

"We will be organizing an effort to identify the Mondale supporters in Cohasset and to get them to the Town Hall to vote for Mondale on March 13," said Richard.

Soccer championship

The South Shore Sports Center will host the "Tournament of Champions," a round-robin indoor soccer competition between nationally ranked New England colleges; Connecticut-1981 National Champions; Southern Connecticut-1983 National Semi-Finalists; Plymouth State-1983 National Semi-Finalists, and BC-1982 NCAA Tournament Participants, Saturday, March 3, from 5 to 9 p.m. in Hingham.

Will floppy discs win civil rights?

By Claire McDonough

"Computers are taking over the world," the Dragon roared. He roared a few other things as well, but this is a family newspaper and I can't tell you what they are.

"I don't know why you say that," I told him. "Computers can only act on the information humans feed them. The manual that came with the computer in our office says there's really no such thing as computer error. It's human error that gets fed into a computer."

"That's what they want you to think," he muttered darkly. "Who put out the manual?"

"Wang."

"I rest my case. Well, almost. I agree that there's no computer error. It's part of a diabolical plot to subjugate us. They're trying to confuse us so when the big take-over comes, we'll be too addled to fight back."

"They seem to be doing a good job in this house. And anyway, why do you think they're out to get you?"

"What do you call it? Last year every month the computer took $150 out of your salary and put it in someone else's credit union account. The only reason it didn't addle you is that you're already addled.

"Or how about the computer that dropped me from our family plan Blue Cross/Blue Shield?"

"I'm sure we'll get that straightened out," I said soothingly.

"By the time we do I'll be old enough for Medicare and I won't need Blue Shield. How long did it take to straighten out that computer from St. Elizabeth's that kept charging us for circumcizing one of our girls? Two years?"

"That was pretty diabolical," I admitted., "but once a human error gets fed into a computer it can take a long time to rectify it."

"Sure," he agreed. "Only that isn't the type of error any human would make."

"You have a point," I conceded. "But I really think you're exaggerating. How can you fear a take over by computers? After all, it's human beings who make the laws, write the songs, compose the poems, laugh, love, and care about each other."

"It used to be," he told me. "But while we've been busy laughing, loving, and caring, the computers have learned how to write songs and books. It's only a matter of time till they start writing laws.

"By this time next year floppy discs could have civil rights. And changing a daisy without due process could be a federal offense."

"Relax," I told him. "You really have gone overboard. There's no danger at all that computers will become too important in our lives.

"But if it would make you feel any better to talk about it, sit down. I'll fix us a byte to eat and we can interface. Maybe if we program all the variables we can come up with a modified alternative."

"And what do we do if we can't?"

"Well, if it's a global glitch, we can always cancel."

Election policy

It's election time again and the races are off and running.

With the rate of growth in Cohasset soaring faster than anyone's imagination, choosing an elected official is even more important than ever.

That's why it's important for Cohasset residents to listen to what each candidate has to say and decide who they feel will do the best job for the town. Remember these officials will have a direct say in how tax dollars are spent.

To ensure all candidates have equal opportunity to reach the voters and the voters have an opportunity to hear from the candidates, here is the Mariner campaign material policy.

All candidates for town office whether incumbents or newcomers will be entitled to submit a statement of their candidacy listing qualifications, education, past experiences and a brief statement why they are seeking office. Their statement may be accompanied by a black and white glossy photograph.

Because selectmen and School Committee members affect all town residents with their votes, their first announcements of candidacies will be published on page one.

After the deadline has passed for submitting nomination papers to the town clerk, we will still take weekly messages from the candidates and publish them in a weekly feature called, "Candidates Corner." No candidates corner will be published election week to protect all of the nominees.

Until that time, all candidates are invited to submit to the column each week. Submissions must be typed or written clearly and may be no longer than two 8 x 10 typing sheets of paper double spaced. No campaign material will be taken over the telephone.

We reserve the right to edit or delete any material that is unappropriate or considered by us to be libelous.

For example if a candidate says he or she is running because, "I am the only candidate who is not taking the position with an ulterior motive."

That statement leaves the reader with a thought the opposing candidate has something to gain financially by holding office. That above statement would be deleted.

Essentially, candidates should stick to meeting announcements or tall about the essentials of an issue, rather than personalities.

All materials may be left at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey News no later than 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in order to be published that week.

When Candidates Corner is published the order of the candidates submitting articles will be switched to avoid the complaint of "favorite space." Until now those announcements have been set in the newspaper according to a random space availability.

Our goal is to promote a fair and exciting race. So start writing, reading, listening and feel confident of your vote.

Another view

Usually we don't print letters to the editor which are not signed or are anonymous. But in this case it should be noted that a group of people sent in a letter commenting on last week's runnerup to "Person of the Year."

"A large group of readers decided to write this letter as soon as we read today's edition. We'd greatly appreciate it if you'd print the following:

"To all readers: After reading last week's edition and seeing who was nominated for "Person of the Year," many of us wished we had voted.

"We feel that one special person, over all, deserved this award.

"The woman on Nichols Road' is not just any woman on Nichols Road. She is a brave woman who deserves more credit than just an award. This letter seems like a nomination in itself; however we just wanted to point out that more than just her 13-year old daughter thought she deserved an award.

Thank You! Anonymous Friends."

An Alternative Arts education plan

(The following is a copy of a letter to the school committee.—Ed.)

I would like to thank you for your recent support and recognition of arts programming in the Cohasset schools. Your commitment to future funding with the Mass. Dept. of Education block grant of $1,500 and next year's proposed school budget, tentatively set at $1,000 (not designated for "arts"—just an amount put there.—Ed), is a beginning step to put these important and stimulating programs on an equal footing with other school programs.

Perhaps more important, however, is your support of our recommended emphasis on teacher in-service, workshops and arts training. These activities will provide reinforcement for those teachers already convinced of the benefit of arts in education and stimulate those who may be more skeptical, a desire for increasing arts in the curriculum and in teaching.

As important as these things are, without the School Committee's leadership and a commitment on the part of school administrators towards a comprehensive approach to arts in education, we are working very hard for only short-term results.

There has been good support for art and music in the schools, for the artist-in-residence and performing programs, and for teachers who on their own incorporate arts in their classrooms.

This seems to be an appropriate time for our administrators to assume a leadership role in implementing a broader effort in Cohasset's arts curriculum and education.

While the PSO, its Arts Enrichment Committee and other interested parents may communicate ideas and assist with grant writing and fund raising, they cannot accomplish what can only be done at an administrative level. Parents can be helpers, but we cannot conceive, coordinate, lead and administer these programs.

The private and public agencies awarding grants require evidence that the school administration is performing these tasks.

Enclosed is a collection of information that I hope you will find time to read. Of particular importance is a copy of the Massachusetts Board of Education "Arts in Education" developed in 1976. This detailed position statement on arts in education, set forth eight years ago, presents a comprehensive discussion of the value of an interdisciplinary approach, including rationale,

Town Clerk retires; full-time position discussed

He retired last week after serving the town for almost 40 years. And former Town Clerk Charles Marks says, "I enjoyed every minute of it."

Marks suffered a heart attack last October, and had not returned to his familiar second-floor office since that time. Although doctors gave him a welcomed clean bill of health last week, and told him he could soon return to the job, Marks decided against it.

Instead, realizing his part-time occupation had gradually evolved into a 40-hour position, Marks decided it was time to leave. He notified selectmen last week of his decision, thereby allowing enough time for people to put their names on the ballot for the spring election.

announcement.

His sister-in-law, who for 13 years worked as his fulltime assistant in the office, has taken out nomination papers for the Town Clerk's position.

"It was getting too much to handle - for a part-time position," he explains.

The structure of the office of Cohasset Town Clerk almost defies reason. Marks, who had been assistant Town Clerk for 13 years, was elected part-time Town Clerk in 1958. The position was tenured, so Marks remained there until his retirement. But for the past 13 years, there has been a fulltime assistant in that office.

Marks says the increasing workload now necessitates a fulltime clerk and assistant.

Selectmen are planning to include an article in the town warrant, requesting the elected position be made fulltime. And unlike Marks' situation, the new clerk will serve that position for a three-year term.

His sister-in-law, whom selectmen are unable to appoint acting Town Clerk because it is an elected, part-time position, is currently employed as a fulltime assistant. A 34-year Cohasset resident, Frances decided "I have to fulfill the need, for myself and the public, to finish the job we've started here, within the next three years."

Marks continues to recover from his attack, and is feeling better every day. He is looking forward to traveling "and taking it easy," although there's not likely to be a day he won't miss the town and the people of Cohasset.

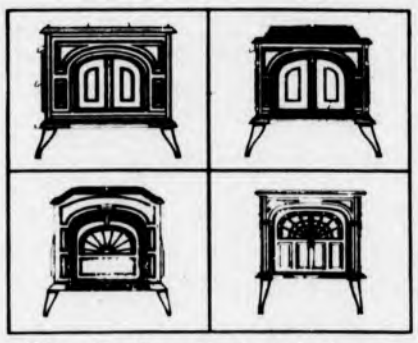
Vandalism paints an ugly picture

To the Editor:

I love Cohasset. I think it is just about the nicest place to live and raise a family, if things like environment and quality of life count.

I'm naive to some extent, I guess, for I feel anyone who is fortunate enough to live in this beautiful town could find better things to do than slash tires on my car and my wife's car, as they sat parked in our driveway last Tuesday night.



It had to be local talent because it simply doesn't make sense for some stranger to prowl the side streets of Cohasset looking for two tires to slash.

No, I'm afraid it was one or more of the young people in the neighborhood who thank God for their good fortune at living in this wonderful town by destroying other people's property and lives.

It is a sad but true fact that these sociopaths can roam our neighborhoods wreaking their havoc with relative impunity. I can't believe this is the first incidence

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

As you have no doubt discovered, the ideal way to have a dinner party is to let the others do the cooking. Friends are apt to get together more often if all the hostess has to do is clean the silver and run around with a dustcloth. In other words, an informal pot-luck dinner is an easy way to entertain, with each guest contributing her specialty. Pot-luck is traditional for large events such as church socials and club meetings and can also be a fun way to spend an evening at home. A dessert that would be welcomed at any party is of Italian origin. Mary Bennett's dish sounds divine, has the added advantage of being the type of recipe which can be made in advance and is called:

ZABAGLIONE

6 egg yolks
4 T sugar
1/2 c. Marsala wine
Shaved chocolate
2 large cans pears, drained

Beat egg yolks and sugar until thick and lemon-colored. Stir in wine. Pour mixture into top of double boiler and set over simmering water. Beat with electric mixer until it becomes thick—about 3 to 5 min. When beater is lifted, mixture will hold its shape. Refrigerate. Serve over pears and shave chocolate on top.

Ellis Benson came up with a cake so good that her husband asked her (jokingly) to hide it from the kids, so he could enjoy it all. Connie took an angel cake mix to make this tasty treat she calls a

WHIPPED JELLO CAKE

1 3 oz. pkg. raspberry jello
1 4½ oz. container cool whip
1 8½ oz. can drained, crushed pineapple, save juice
1 angel ring cake
1/2 c. chopped nuts
12 to 15 chopped maraschino cherries

Make jello, using juice for part of liquid. Whip thoroughly when it begins to set. Add cool whip and pineapple. Split cake in half. Spread filling between layers and on top sides. Garnish with nuts and cherries. Refrigerate for at least one hour.

Speaking of pot-luck dinners again, the ideal dish to bring is one that can be prepared completely in advance, requiring no additional work at the party. Casseroles are easy to transport and can be served buffet-style from the dishes in which they were cooked. Here is an Italian dish that would go well with Mary's Zabaglione, called:

SCALOPPINE A LA MARSALA

3 lb. veal cutlets, ⅜" thick, pounded to ¼"
Salt, pepper and flour
2 T butter
3 T olive oil
1/2 c. each Marsala wine, beef stock and chopped onion
2 c. fresh sliced mushrooms

Season cutlets with salt and pepper and dip in flour. Melt butter and oil together in skillet. Brown cutlets, 3 or 4 at a time, approx. 3 min. each side. Transfer to platter. Pour off most of fat from the skillet and saute onions and mushrooms. Add Marsala and 1/4 c. beef stock. Boil liquid briskly over high heat for 1 or 2 min. Return veal to pan, cover and simmer over low heat for 10 to 15 min., basting with pan juices. To serve, transfer cutlets to a heated platter. Add 1/4 c. stock to the sauce in the skillet and boil briskly. When sauce is reduced to a syrupy glaze, taste for seasoning. Stir in 2 T butter and pour sauce over cutlets. Serves 8.

Whiling an evening away with friends at dinner can be done more often if the party becomes a cooperative effort, for it's not such a strain on the food budget and while caviar is selling for close to two hundred dollars a pound, most of us will be content to feast on

EGGPLANT CAVIAR

1 medium eggplant
1 large onion
1 clove garlic
2 large tomatoes
1/2 c. olive oil
1 tsp. salt and dash pepper
1/2 tsp. sugar

Bake eggplant in 375° oven for approx. 45 min. Run cold water over it and peel and cut into cubes. Peel and chop onions, garlic and tomatoes. Mix with eggplant. Add olive oil, salt, pepper and sugar. Mix and chill before serving with crackers.

Greenpeace sponsors whalewatch

Greenpeace, the international environmental organization known for its efforts to protect the whales from extinction, is happy to announce a sixth season of whale watching trips. The 4½ hours excursions, departing from both Provincetown and Plymouth, Massachusetts, travel to Stellwagen bank, a summer feeding ground for several species of the Great Whales.

Approximately 150 Humpback Whales are expected to return to Stellwagen Bank, 6-20 miles off the coast, in early April, after making a 2000 mile migration from their winter mating and birthing grounds in the Carribean. Each year several female whales have returned with new calves, born over the winter in the warmer waters.

Humpback Whales are a favorite with whale watchers, often coming within 15 feet of the boats. An adult Humpback will reach 35 feet in length and weight close to 40 tons. They are known for their acrobatic behavior, at times leaping completely out of the water in a breach, or loudly hitting the water with their 10 foot white pectoral flippers.

In addition to the Humpbacks, Finback Whales, the second largest whale, and Minke Whales, the smallest of the Great Whales, as well as dolphins, and several species of seabirds are often found in abundance.

Marine biologists accompany every Greenpeace whale watch, to provide expert commentary on the whales and other marine life forms that are being observed. In addition to providing this service, the biologists also collect data on the biology and behavior of the whales. Scientists have learned to identify individual Humpback Whales by the light and dark coloration on their flukes (tails), and have been able to track the lives of individual whales over a span of years.

The International Whaling Commission, the body that regulates all whaling, voted in 1982 for a three year phase out of all commercial whaling. However, Japan, Norway and the USSR have all filed objections to the ruling and are legally free to continue to hunt whales. In July 1983, Greenpeace sent its flag ship, the Rainbow Warrior, into Soviet territorial waters to investigate whaling operations.

Toxic and nuclear waste dumping into the worlds oceans as well as off-shore oil drilling are as much a threat to the whales as the harpoon cannons. Greenpeace has recently expanded its work to address this threat to the whales and the entire planet.

"The money raised from the sale of tickets helps our organization continue its work," states Greenpeace spokeswoman Peggy Christian, "there is no better way to have a good time while supporting a good cause."

Beechwood playground meeting

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will meet with residents to discuss plans for the Beechwood Play Lot, to be constructed on the site of the old Beechwood Fire Station land, Thursday, March 8, at 8 p.m., Town Hall Auditorium.

Interested Citizens should attend this meeting as the Recreation Commission will review the basic plans for the area and accept suggestions and input from the community.

The Commission will place an Article in the 1984 Town Warrant, requesting about $5,000 for surfacing and fencing of the area, necessary for safety and function. An additional sum of money, about $1200 will be used from the accrued interest of the principal money the Beechwood Improvement Association has made available.

The essential plan for the Beechwood Play Lot will be to provide a multi-purpose active recreational area for residential use.

It is projected that the area would include basketball backboards, hoops, tennis bang-boards, 4 square areas, and optional set ups for various court games.

The primary concern and largest expense will be making the play area safe from the adjacent ball field and street. A fence will be erected completely encompassing the area. The height of the fence will vary from 10 to 12 feet on the ballfield side of the play lot, to 4 or 5 feet on the East Side of the lot.

Safety will be provided by keeping fly balls away from children, and children away from vehicular traffic along Beechwood Street.

The Commission cordially invites all interested residents to participate in the open meeting Thursday evening, March 8, at 8 p.m., Town Hall Auditorium.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Rec. Dept. will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience classes, to be taught by Mrs. Laurie Ann Goodrich.

All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, and will begin Sunday, March 25.

Beginner training classes will be held at 6 p.m. The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership.

Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, correction, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included.

The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience.

An intermediate class will be held at 7 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior training or have completed the Recreation Dept. beginner class.

From 8 to 9 p.m. there will be advanced class. For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed!!!

It is also strongly suggested handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes, the fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program. Dogs should be a minimum of 3 months of age, and there is no maximum age limit.

To register, please call the Recreation office at 383-6791.

of destruction for which they are responsible nor, sadly, the last.

"The price of freedom is vigilance" it has been said - but, alas, we can't be vigilant 24 hours a day. I, personally, refuse to succumb to the "garrison" mentality.

I just want the person(s) who did this wanton act to know that I think they are the absolute scum of society. A person from the ghetto with all kinds of disadvantages, imagined or real, one could understand—not condone, but understand; but you, living in Cohasset with all its attendant benefits—you stink!

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Phone-a-thon

Be alert for the phone to ring Thursday evening, March 1, between 7:30 and 9 p.m. Chances are the phone call will be from a Parent School Organization volunteer requesting a pledge to help replenish a dwindling PSO treasury. Collected pledges will be used to help bridge the gap caused by Proposition 2½. Remember, contributions are tax deductible.

PSO meeting

The Parent School Organization will meet March 8 at 8 p.m. in Room 107 of Cohasset High School.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell, and Stephen Hart, Assistant Superintendent/Financial Manager, will attend to answer questions concerning the school budget for the 1984-85 school year. All interested are encouraged to attend.

Trip to Symphony Hall

A number of high school students attended the second presentation of the Youth Concert series at Symphony Hall Feb. 9.

The musical genre known as "theme and variations" was the focus of the orchestra's presentations.

Mr. Bryan Marks, the music teacher, had helped prepare the students by incorporating the selections by Charles Ives in a classroom demonstration.

The guest soloist, Myron Romanul, performed Rachmaninoff's Opus 43 to enthusiastic applause. Gasps of admiration greeted the pianist's spectacular rendition.

Another highlight of the field trip was the opportunity we had to have a private discussion with Harry Ellis Dickson.

The students spoke with pride of the administration's and School Committee's strong support for Cohasset's music department. Despite tight school budgets the students felt a growing concern to maintain and expand the fine arts program.

Mr. Dickson, himself, expressed a feeling that the arts, in general, are appealing to wider audiences today and noted that it is "the arts that make life worth living."

AFS students come home

Two CHS students have recently returned from a year abroad under the auspices of AFS, and the local members of that organization are planning a "Welcome Home" party.

Becky Lovering, who went to Costa Rica, and Michael Laitta, who was in Argentina, will be the guests of honor Sunday, March 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House for a "Pot Luck Dessert."

The public is invited to attend to hear about these students' experiences and learn more about the AFS programs. For more information, call Jane Goedecke at 383-6935.

Students visit State House

Seven Cohasset High School juniors visited the State House recently as guests of Representative Mary Jeanette Murray.

The Cohasset students spend the greater part of the day observing first-hand the workings of the State Legislature and the other facets of Mass. State Government.

The trip was coordinated by Edward Sheehan the chairman of the high school social studies department.

Before the program is concluded, over 30 juniors will take the guided tour of the State House.

Among those who have been selected for the program are: Beth Riley, Vicki Spooner, Tracy Fitzgerald, Carla Lucas, Greg Igo, Lauren Haynes , Kristin Munro and Jill Nedrow.

Also, Kerry O'Brien, Alise Palimeri, Janet D:Girolamo, Maureen Costello and Bill Langmaid.

Also chosen were Jim Dillon, Dave Conlan, Tony Pereira, Stephan Hill and Dan Curran.

Also, Jeff Brown, Cathy Buckley, Kim Harrington, Chris Neelon and Jim Vimson.

In addition Chris Moore, Kate Bishop, Sarah Muir, Rick Rourke and Alex Gatto.

Joanie Chisholm, Phil Bernstein, Lisa Peachell and Bob Collins were also selected.

In her letter to Mr. Sheehan, Rep. Murray said, "The purpose of the day's visit is to prepare social studies students to better understand how bills are initiated and, hopefully formalized into law.

"Hopefully this will encourage young people who will one day take over the reigns of State Government."

CHS home ec

Since 1971 Cohasset High School Home Economics Department has been successfully offering an interesting and popular course based on the study of sound principles of child growth and development. The program is divided into four specific learning areas.

FIRST TERM: During the first term, an opening unit of study of traditional and contemporary family life sets in motion a child developmental study which begins with the conception of the child and continues through all stages.

Children and parents from the community are invited to become part of the class discussions and ultimately approximately sixteen children are enrolled in the early childhood program.

The students have an opportunity to put into use the knowledge they have accumulated over the past months.

SECOND TERM: During this pre-school time, the class has the opportunity to have "hands on" experience through their observation and their individual and

Mel King in Scituate

Mel King, former state representative from Boston and recent candidate for mayor of Boston, will speak at the Unitarian Church in Scituate, Saturday, March 3, at 1:30 p.m.

King will speak on political issues of concern to the region. The meeting will include open, informal discussion and is open to people throughout the South Shore.

The Unitarian Church is about one mile from Route 3A, east on First Parish Road.

Mel King is the state co-chair for the Jesse Jackson Campaign for the Democratic nomination for President. King will discuss some of the issues in the Jackson campaign, such as environment, education, women's issues; the need for people to share power by participating in the political process; the responsibility of corporations and labor for the economic and social well-being of the nation; and the need to review the nation's goals in foreign and domestic affairs.

All are invited to participate in discussion, said Louise Landy, local coordinator for the event.

Later in the afternoon, King will speak in New Bedford.

Dramatic Club tryouts

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold tryouts for its Spring production, Sidney Kingsley's Police drama "Detective Story," Sunday, March 11 from 2 to 5 p.m. Monday, March 12 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall, and Wednesday, March 14 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House Hall, North Main Street, Cohasset.

"Detective Story," a slice-of-life drama, calls for a cast of 25 men and nine women, with roles of various ages and lengths. The play itself first opened on Broadway in 1949, and in 1951 was made into a movie starring Kirk Douglas and Eleanor Parker.

Performance dates for the Dramatic Club's production of "Detective Story" will be Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12, and Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19.

Alternate arts education plan . . .

need, priorities and implementation.

At that time the State Board said, "The arts...can offer varied experiences to interest, to motivate and to engage students. Arts experiences are as important in the learning process as other academic disciplines. The time is opportune for a new and different approach to curriculum development with the arts as the integrating element of the process." And further, "This rationale of the need for the arts in education and summary of an implementation plan to infuse the arts into all subjects at all grade levels...is a realistic and pragmatic program that requires little or no additional funding by the local school districts."

This document was recently updated and I will forward copies as soon as I can get some.

Also included are:

— Copies of a Cultural Resources Grant application that illustrates the standard type of questions schools are required to answer.

— Two examples of in-service progrms from other schools. (Eight Cohasset teachers have indicated interest in theatre arts workshops. Many more would like to participate, but they are already committed to computer and video training. Since teachers are also interested in developing a curriculum guide for K-9 in theatre arts, perhaps they will apply for an in-service for the fall.

— Two recent newspaper articles illustrating the types of long-term, interdisciplinary programs that other schools are initiating. (A "Greek Day," such as was held at the end of the theatre residency at Deer Hill last year, could be expanded tremendously along these lines.)

The PSO, preceded by the Communication Councils, has worked diligently over the last several years initiating, encouraging, funding and supporting arts programs. It is appropriate for the PSO to continue to support and assist, but we don't feel it is our job to perform the functions of the administration—such as advocacy, collaboration, curriculum development, teacher training, leadership.

Your recent support of the Arts Enrichment Committee's recommendations leads us to believe that you understand the importance of arts in education.

While the unique cognition of arts in schools is becoming more widely recognized, the advancement of his posture to a comprehensive interdisciplinary undertaking is not well supported in U.S. schools. Cohasset has certainly done better than many schools in sustaining the arts, but it now has the potential to be one of the leaders in this area.

I am optimistic that you will work towards a real, sustained commitment to arts in education, especially when you consider for little or no local funding you can provide a basic experience in arts for all students.

Sincerely yours,
Karin Bartow, Chairman PSO Arts

group responsibility in working with the children in the areas of physical, social, cognitive and emotional pre-school learning.

THIRD TERM: Third term, the class returns to resume the study of school-age children from 6 to 18 years-old. The Osgood and Deer Hill Schools offer the needed opportunity for observation experiences. A term paper on this project is required during this term.

FOURTH TERM: Fourth term is devoted to developing creativity and imagination in the pre-school child. The classes play learning experiences and make learning devices to encourage each pre-school individual to express and extend himself creatively. Many an original story or game is tried and the results are very satisfying.

Child Study serves the community well and the community serves the child study program well.

Passenger's message to a Boston cabby

It was my first trip to Roxbury. Now I can say I've been there. And apparently I made the trip just in time. Because since my visit there to interview Elma Lewis, two cab drivers have been killed. So I've been a little worried about Abe.

It hasn't been routine for me to go 'in town.' But in doing some additional writing I've been traipsing there more than I'd dreamed possible, likely, necessary.

So far as Elma Lewis is concerned, she thinks finding her house is a piece of cake, as easy to find as leaves on the lawn in the fall.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

The cab drivers apparently do not share Elma's nonchalance about a Roxbury address. The photographer and I had made what we considered apprised plans to leave the car in a parking lot off the Expressway. We had pictured ourselves rolling down the window every few feet in Roxbury and bellowing out the window for directions from passers-by.

We didn't think that was a bright idea. On leaving the parking lot, the attendant heard us say we were headed to Roxbury. I wish he hadn't grimaced. But he did. Then he said, "I'm not sure you can get anyone to take you."

We thought that was silly, for goodness sake. Broad daylight, two women with more than enough for cab fare in and out, if we didn't eat lunch till later.

We stood by the street and sure enough along came Towne Taxi. It was, we would learn, Abe. First he did a double take when we gave him the address. He was on the verge of explaining that we'd made an error until we told him who we were going to visit.

No problem, said the sport. He didn't live too far from there. He'd take us. We relaxed for the excursion.

Inside his cab Abe had rigged strings to the locks for the back doors. His invention allowed him to pull up the locks from his driver's post. One still had to push them down in back manually however.

I don't ride in many cabs. Now they've got those fiberglass-type shields between you and your driver and that little slot box in which to push the fare. I wasn't sure which one of us was being protected, Abe or me.

After a scenic route through Roxbury we got to Elma's house and contracted with Abe to take us back if that worked out with his schedule. Elma's house is large, well cared for. It was her family's home that they'd bought when they settled there from Barbados. Hers is a spacious, welcoming apartment.

But no cab drivers are listening to that, I guess.

About 45 minutes into the interview I borrowed her phone to call Abe. I got the woman-answerer at Towne Taxi. When I told her where I needed to be picked up, she said, "I don't think anyone will want to come get you."

"Abe will," I assured her.

I asked her to find him if she could and we'd wait.

Of course we'd wait. What else were we going to do.

In the warmth of Elma's apartment as she made phone calls to keep the world on its axis of art, we realized we might become the marvelous woman's tenants instead of her guests.

No cab company wanted our business. It was Abe or nothin' to rescue us from a place that Elma Lewis loves but many cab drivers don't.

Another call to Towne Taxi, speaking again with a woman who was now a full acquaintance, indicated Abe was on his way. And within minutes he was there indeed, swishing out of his door to open one for us. We were safely back in our latch-stringed passenger seat, thanking him for coming to get us. Furthermore, we told him, it was his responsibility. He took us. He had to see we got back to our car.

And he did.

Consequently in the last few weeks when we've heard horror stories of murders of cab drivers, we have thought about Abe, who became a very important man in our lives that morning in Roxbury.

But handguns? I've pictured a cab driver pulling over to a curb, nervously, eyeing a prospective passenger askance, placing his free hand on his holster.

I just don't know if it makes them safer or not.

But I know that I, as a passenger, shouldn't be given a permit to carry a handgun for the purpose of riding in a cab. I hope I don't share a ride somewhere with a person who wants to plunder and pillage the cab driver.

I don't have a gun. If I did, I'd fear I'd have a rare moment of accuracy and mow down many nice people.

Nor do I want a rifle for my own recreation.

The issue of protecting one's self is weighty, often dangerous. There was a story the other morning about a man in Tennessee who looked up from his barbecue grill and spotted five escapees from the state prison. He got his handgun and pointed it at the intruders.

They mowed him down with guns of their own.

Would he have lived had he not had one to confront them? Who knows.

But the issue is provocative and frightening.

Anyway, Abe, take it easy. Be careful. Just pick up women who look like they're in for the day and don't know where they're going. Then you'll only need patience instead of a gun.

Church members voting in the Annual Meeting unanimously approved establishing a special fund, with a goal of $50,000., for building renovations which will improve access for handicapped and older people. The "elevator project" (which includes the new first floor rest room, the new exterior door, and an entrance ramp) will help anyone who has difficulty with the 21 steps from street-level to the sanctuary, and make it possible to welcome even wheelchair-bound people to services of worship and other events in the church.

Richard Silvia was named to head the fund-raising and renovation project, to be assisted by a committee to be appointed by the Trustees and approved by the Church Committee.

If you have fund-raising ideas and energy, and would like to help with this project, please be in touch with Richard Silvia or one of the Trustees, Wayne Sawchuk, Chairman.

Cohasset to host state Drama Festival

Saturday, March 3, Cohasset High School will be one of nine sites hosting regional competition in the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. Of the seven schools performing at each regional, three will be selected to move to the state semi-finals the following Saturday.

Should they prove successful at their regional, Cohasset might be one of the four semi-final sites March 10. The state finals will be held at John Hancock Hall in Boston on March 23 and 24.

Since first entering the festival in 1978, Cohasset has been a semi-finalist every year, a finalist three times, and the state festival winner once.

The local entry this year is "Chinamen," a fast-paced English comedy by Michael Frayn, who is currently represented on Broadway by the critically-acclaimed hit "Noises Off."

The play's five roles are designed to challenge the talent, energy and flexibility of one actor and one actress, both of whom must make rapid costume and character changes to play all five roles.

Appearing as Stephen and Barney is Kurt Hochkeppel, who acted in last year's festival production of "Twelfth Night" and last appeared in "Godspell." Nancy Walls will portray Jo, Bee, and Alex. This is her third festival performance. She also performed in "Godspell."

Attempting to structure the mayhem created by these two performers is director Ron Emmons. Stage managers are Tom Jones and Sarah Muir. They are being assisted by Andrew Glasfeld and Shawna McCarthy.

Tickets for the whole day's activities are $3. The public is encouraged to attend but is reminded that, since no one will be admitted during any school's performance, those planning to attend should arrive during the ten-minute break before each show.

All performances will start at the time indicated. 9:10 a.m., Norwell, "Volpone;" 10 a.m., Scituate, "The Valiant;" 10:50 a.m., Hanover, "Step on a Crack;" 11:30 a.m., Weymouth North, "Saint Joan;" 1 p.m., Notre Dame, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds;" 1:50 p.m., Cohasset, "Chinamen," and 2:40 p.m., Hingham, "Eden."

Coordinating this year's festival is Massachusetts High School Drama Guild secretary Ron Emmons. He is assisted by stage manager Janet Carlson and technical director Jeff Rhind.

Acting as consultant is former Drama Guild president Robert McCarthy of Weymouth.

The man with the difficult task of selecting the plays that are to continue to the semi-finals is Paul Tines, drama director at Choate-Rosemary Hall.

Tines was represented twice at the Massachusetts State Festival while director at Chapel Hill-Chauncy Hall and twice at the New England Drama Festival with plays from Choate.

He served as a judge at last year's Massachusetts State Festival and is a member of the New England Drama Council.

LaLeche meeting

The La Leche League of Scituate will meet Tuesday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Gail Bell, 73 Elm Street, Cohasset.

The topic for discussion will be "The Art of Breastfeeding and Overcoming Difficulties." Women interested in good mothering through breastfeeding (and their nursing babies) are welcome.

La Leche League is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization of mothers offering education, information and support to women who wish to breastfeed their children.

A circulation library is available to those attending meetings, while helping by phone is available also.

For further information about the League or its activities, or for help, call 545-0228 or 545-0815 in Scituate, 659-1345 in Norwell, 837-2665 in Marshfield or 749-2976 in Hingham.

Board of Health issues statements on EDB

The Board of Health recently issued this press release to keep the residents informed about significant events of public health concern which have recently been widely publicized, namely the "radioactive" table pedestals and EDB.

Specific information regarding the pedestals has been difficult to obtain.

However, at a recent Massachusetts Health Officers Executive Board meeting, Gerald Parker, Department of Public Health, reported that 18 sites nationwide have tables whose pedestals were constructed with contaminated cobalt. (It is impossible to find out how this happened.)

Apparently, the federal government (EPA) gave a list to the state (DPH) of all the sites, and the tables are being removed and trucked to a low level radioactive dump site in South Carolina. The list is not available to the local Boards of Health.

The state assured the local Cohasset Board of Health Agent that no such tables are in use in Cohasset. Contaminated pedestals have been found in many Boston area restaurants. The tables are being removed upon discovery, and the removal process should be completed in the near future.

Truckers are working 24 hours per day, 7 days per week to ensure their expeditious removal.

EDB

There has been much confusion as to the status of the EDB ban. As of Feb. 16, the Cohasset Board of Health Agent has been informed that testing foods will be ongoing for at least the next several weeks.

In about two weeks, the local Board of Health will be provided with a comprehensive list of all banned foods that the retailers will be asked to remove from the shelves. If the retailer does not voluntarily remove the product, embargo procedures will be undertaken.

The state Department of Public Health and the local Board of Health are confident the products can be removed and returned to the wholesalers with minimal effort.

Random inspections will be performed by the local Board of Health, to ensure swift removal of the product, as the information becomes available.

EDB is a potent, known carcinogen and its elimination from the food chain is an important public health concern.

The Board anticipates total cooperation in removing this product from access to consumers.

The Board of Health will keep the public informed and up to date as soon as the final official list of products is released.

At the S.Shore Art Center

"Can you create with a computer" will be the focal point of the South Shore Art Center's first March Sunday-at-the-Center program.

LTX computer graphics specialist Paul Diette and M.I.T's coordinator of its visible language workshop Rob Haimes will discuss and demonstrate how to create, using the computer.

Two speakers will attempt to define how this new technology expands or contracts the artist's horizon at this first program, Sunday, March 4 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd.

Diette and Haimes will probe the philosophies of this new media and will show examples of their work, using the computer. They will discuss: Is the computer a help or hindrance? What is the relationship of the artist to the machine?

At LTX, Diette serves a dual capacity as designer/illustrator and computer graphics specialist. As a designer, he has created slide presentations, video pieces and a variety of flat artwork used as promotional materials in the sales environment. As a computer graphics specialist he has been reponsible for studying possible applications of computer graphics to a variety of users needs.

The March 18 Sunday-at-the-Center program brings landscape artist and impressionist Geoffrey Teale Chalmers to the Center for his demonstration of oil painting using an impressionist method. He will show how the quality of light influences the work, the process of color mixing and various brush techniques.

Chalmers' program is from 3 to 5 p.m. Both Sunday-at-the-Center programs will be followed by informal receptions giving audience members and speakers a chance to meet.

Advanced registration is required and is due the Friday prior to each program.

A Letter of Appreciation, Admiration, and Commendation

The Members of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Hanover, wish publicly to express their sincere thanks to THE O'DONNELL CONTRACTING COMPANY for the extraordinarily fine job they did recently on reconstructing and restoring the barn and outbuildings on its property. Seldom have we seen such conscientious and thorough workmanship, and seldom have we met craftsmen who brought such admirable skills and love of their work to their tasks. We unhesitatingly commend them to anyone who is looking for builders and artisans to render them far more than an honest day's work.

St. Andrew's Episcopal Church
Property Commission

Sincerely,
Robert A. Mackie

'Person of the Year'
Chief Martin Dooley voted second

By David Warren

Fire Chief Martin Dooley thought the Person of the Year Award was designed for a behind-the-scenes person, someone out of the limelight.

His second place finish just one vote behind the winner came as quite a surprise.

"I knew I had the support of the citizens of Cohasset, but I never dreamt that support would go as far as to submit letters of support. That takes an extra effort, and I feel honored," the chief said.

1983 was not an easy year for Martin Dooley. The philosophy of discipline he brought up with him from Connecticut has yet to be accepted by the Cohasset firefighters, and his fire-fighting methods have been called into question as well.

Oh, what a week for the kids at Cohasset High

'Cruisers' advance

By Mike Berger

Boston Garden, Notre Dame, UCLA, the Spectrum in Philadelphia. Name any hotbed of hoop enthusiasm and that's how to describe Cohasset High School last week.

Urged on by a throngs of Cohasset well-wishers, the Cohasset Boys Basketball team, a.k.a "Eddie and the Cruisers" swept past Abington and Medfield to enter the Division III semi-finals Wednesday night.

Coach Ed Minelli described last Wednesday and Saturday afternoons as "incredible." He will never forget the atmosphere created by the fans which provided the ultimate "sixth man."

"If we were playing at 80 percent efficiency before, those crowds made us play at 100 percent efficiency. Everyone played their hearts out," said Minelli.

Two years ago the Cohasset team was 1-17. Tuesday there was talk of entering the finals against and beating Cardinal Spellman.

A valiant fight. . .

The Cohasset Girls Basketball team was defeated in Quarterfinal action against Cathedral, the defending state championships.

After one quarter Cohasset was down 16-12,and by the half the gap widened to 32-18.

But Cohasset came back to cut the deficit to nine points with four minutes to go, but their opponents proved to be just too much for Cohasset to handle.

Cohasset lost 61-36.

"We put up a good effort," said Coach Fallon, "but we played a team with better personnel."

Cathedral's two best players; Michele Edwards, (28 ppg) and Cathy Merit, combined for 42 points." "They were just to much for us," said Fallon.

"We had trouble handling their press," said Coach Fallon, "and you can't fall behind by that many points in Cathedrals class."

"Yet, overall we had a good season," continued Coach Fallon, "we made the tourney and we will be returning ten of our 12 players." "So next year we will

Drama Club in semi-finals

While at one end of the building the Cohasset High School basketball team was advancing to the sectional semi-finals of the state tournament, at the other end the Cohasset High School drama group was moving onto the semi-finals of the state drama festival with their production of "Chinamen."

While James Creed was gathering in 21 rebounds, Nancy Walls and Kurt Hochkeppel were gathering up acting awards for their hysterical portrayal of five characters thrown together at a dinner party.

Because of its winning performance on the stage, Cohasset has been selected as one of four sites hosting semi-final competitions Saturday.

Competing here will be the following schools: at 9:10 a.m., Boston Latin ("Trifles"); at 10 a.m. Classical of Springfield ("After Magritte"); at 10:50, Fitchburg ("I Know I Saw Gypsies"); at 11:40, Randolph ("Murphy's Crew"); at 1:15 p.m., Case of Swansea ("The Whorl of the Leaves"); at 2:05, Cohasset ("Chinamen"); and at 2:55, Swampscott, ("The Bespoke Overcoat").

Tickets for one or all shows are $3. The public is invited to enjoy as many shows as it wishes for one price.

Town clerk post remains unclear

Complications have hit yet another attempt by selectmen to resolve the issue of town clerk.

When Town Clerk Charles Marks announced his resignation two weeks ago, selectmen figured it was time to initiate some revisions in that department. In fact, the Town Government Structure Committee had been conducting a study of that department for almost a year.

But there were unforeseen problems after selectmen decided to inflate the $6200 clerk's salary to $19,000, and make the position full time rather than part-time.

But Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained last week selectmen cannot set a specific amount of hours to the position, because it is an elected office. The town could vote to triple the salary, and only expect and hope that the elected official will work a full 40-hour week, he commented.

Another snafu in selectmen's plans is a pay increase

Doris Golden announces candidacy for selectman seat

Doris C. Golden of 2 Bound Brook Lane has announced her candidacy for selectmen.

Mrs. Golden said her accomplishments included serving on the Cohasset School Committee for six years and honored by being its elected chairman for five consecutive years.

She managed and was responsible for capitol expenditures of over 23 million dollars which accounted or well over 50 percent of the town's annual budget during her tenure.

She presided over budget presentations, personnel evaluations in excess of 210 employees, hiring and dismissals, labor negotiations, grievance procedures, and the procurement of State and Federal Grants.

She believes that legitimate government has an obligation to serve all of the people through responsible leadership, compassion, and understanding. Confrontation politics is both counter-productive and regressive.

She was born in Newton, graduated from Mt. Alvernia Academy and Mt. Ida College.

She is married to John A. Golden and the couple have two daughters, Mrs. Karen Oronte of New York City and Cari Golden who is a senior at Northeastern School of Nursing. They have lived in Cohasset for 20 years.

Due to a pre-Christmas fire at their residence, which is being reconstructed, she is currently living at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Guilfoyle of 109 Nicholas Road.

She is available to discuss her campaign and to welcome volunteers on behalf of her candidacy. For more information call 383-1031.

Cohasset's week . . .

Pesticide spraying

Selectmen opposed an idea by a Sankey Road resident that a group of residents be formed to adopt an official policy regarding the town's spraying of pesticides.

Elizabeth Warren suggested a citizens group be formed to provide an official policy "regarding the indiscriminate use of chemicals on our land and in our water supply."

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said the town does no aerial spraying. That is completed by Plymouth County Mosquito Control and it is "not a definite thing" at this time, he added.

There are written rules and regulations regarding the town's spraying of insects, he said, and there are copies for anyone to read at Town Hall.

At this time, he added, "it's a day-to-day thing" to determine whether any spraying will be done. And if anyone does not wish to have his property sprayed, he must notify the town clerk. If the town does any ground spraying, Laugelle said, it won't begin for another month. Everyone will be properly notified of the date, he added.

Government Island home

Town Counsel will investigate if the town can purchase the Government Island home for use as low income housing.

Housing Authority Chairman Lloyd Prescott suggested the home and property immediately surrounding the structure, be purchased through Chapter 705 funds for conversion into two units of low income housing.

Before any decisions are made, however, town counsel must investigate whether the land can be sold and subdivided.

Space will be reserved within the town meeting warrant for an article requesting transfer of ownership to the town.

Prescott appeared determined to have the article prepared for April town meeting, and said, "if the state declines, then at least we'll have the time to look further" (for another housing site).

Little League registration

The Cohasset Little League Registration will be held Saturday, March 1 at Cohasset High School gym from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Sunday, March 18 from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

have a very good chance of winning the whole thing."

"It was a good year and something everyone can be proud of."

For Cohasset Janet DiGirolamo scored 10 points, while Carla Lucas and Sarah Searcy each chipped in nine points. Vicki Spooner added six points while Tracy Fitzpatrick contributed two points.

Congratulation should also be given to Trina Moore, Maura Corkery, Ann O'Leary, Kerry O'Brien, Jill Nedrow, Maureen O'Leary, Lisa Shumaker, and manager Meg McCullough for a terrific season.

Zoning bylaws approved by Planning Board

By Bill Hayward

In an effort to prevent further drainage and flooding problems in Cohasset, the planning board recently approved changes in section 11 of the town's zoning by-laws.

The amended by-law prohibits the removal or addition of more than ten cubic yards (about one truck load) of earth material per year on any location.

However, more than ten cubic yards of material may be excavated or added in connection with the construction of a structure or utility which has received site plan approval and building permits from the town.

Under the old by-law, no permits were needed to fill land (except wetlands). The planning board is concerned that unrestricted filling of land could worsen the already poor drainage in town.

Atty. Charles Humphreys argued against the by-law amendment. Humphries said the wording of the new by-law is vague.

Humphreys said, "This is a blanket prohibition against filling, with no relief except through a variance." He added, "You have to permit filling of land. Otherwise you take every lot in town out of development."

Board member Robert Sturdy said the amended by-law does not prohibit filling land, so long as town approval and permits are first required.

Sturdy cited the Cedar l edge development as an example of what the board is attempting to curtail with the by-law change. "There was a great deal of site development before any permits were applied for at Cedarledge.

Sturdy added, "Now you will have to go through the site plan review process before you start tearing up the landscape."

The board did agree with Humphreys, some of the wording in the amended by-law was unclear, and some grammatical changes were made.

There remains an unsung sports hero

Through the excitment over the girl's and boy's basketball teams, there remains an unsung hero. He doesn't perform in front of a packed gym and he doesn't receive all the encouragement and recognition from the media, town, and school that he should.

Yet, he represents Cohasset High School and very quietly he has put Cohasset on the map and given it a respectable name in the world of wrestling.

This wrestler is Lee Reid, who was Cohasset's hopeful in the State Tournament.

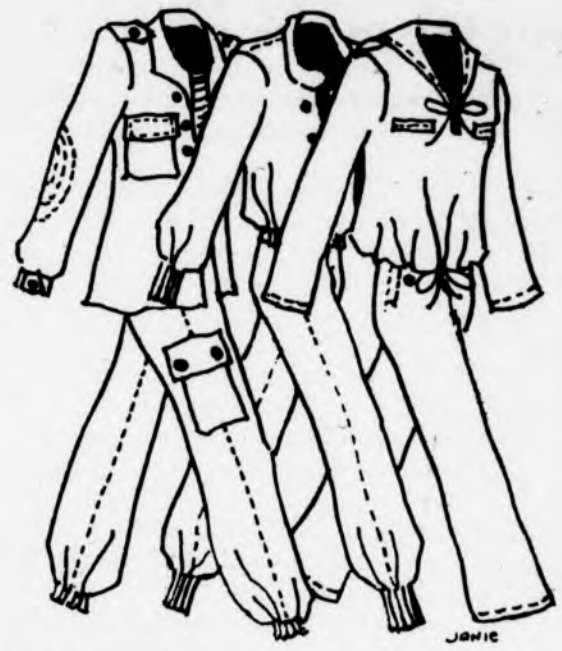
In his first match Lee had a sterling performance winning 13-0, which advanced him to the quarter finals which he also won by a pin.

Yet, in semi-final action he faced the returning State champion and New England champion, who overpowered Lee 10-1.

Lee entered the consolation bracket (because the State Tournament is a double elimination tournament) and won the semi-finals 6-5 and also the finals 18-4.

The winning of the consolation bracket placed him third in the State.

Lee now advanced to the New England Tournament. Yet, his first draw matched him up with a tough competitor who ultimately finished second in the New England Tournament. His competitor inched forward over Lee in a close race 8-6.



Lee finished with a record of 23-2 and made it to the New Englands which is quite an accomplishment for any athlete.

"Lee did an outstanding job," said coach Sweeney.

"He's a great competitor." "He also is an excellent example for the younger kids to follow. He just works so hard in practice day after day; pushing and training, and showing a lot of enthusiasm and encouragement which influences the younger kids and increases their interest in wrestling and succeeding."

"Lee also is so coachable," added coach Sweeney, "you can teach him something one day and the next day he'll use that same move in a match to show you he can do it." "He's a coach's dream," Sweeney said.

Chief Dooley is positive about the future

But Chief Dooley looks at the past year in a positive light. He feels that he is still in an adjustment period as chief but also feels a lot of good has come from the turbulance that has surrounded him.

"We've gone through a rocky year, but I see some light at the end of the tunnel. I still have to strive for (the respect of my men).

"I think it's a mutual understanding between both sides," Dooley said from his Summer Street home. "I have to better understand their position, and hopefully they in turn will understand my position. I think it's just a matter of time.

"We have our differences of opinion on how a fire department should be run...I've been brought up in the fire service pretty much in strict disciplinary-type departments, and it's bound to rub off, although I think I'm open-minded enough to be somewhere on the liberal side too."

Chief Dooley feels he has the support of the town as a whole. and believes this because he is constantly being stopped in the street and receives calls both at home and at the station whenever an issue involving the force arises.

Asked what he likes about Cohasset, Chief Dooley said the town is very similar to Port Washington, Long Island, where both he and his wife Joyce were born and raised.

"There's an old village in the town that is Cohasset all over again," the Chief says. "It was like coming home to come here. The friendliness of the people, knowing everybody, taking a half-hour to make it down the street because you meet so many people you know... we're very excited about this town, and would like very much to stay."

When he left the Hartford Fire Department to come to Cohasset, he said, he had a year to return if things didn't work out for him here. One would think that he would have thought long and hard about going back after all the adversity he has encountered but the chief says he never gave it a thought.

Martin 'Digger' Dooley

"I'm determined to make things work out here. I've met an awful lot of nice people in this town, and I just feel that I don't want to let them down."

Chief Dooley said he is able for the most part to leave his department-related problems at the station when he goes home. He stresses when a call comes in and the men go out to do what they do best, they are also able to leave their differences behind.

"The public has to realize that when we go out the door on an emergency call, no matter what the nature of the call, we put our differences aside and work for the protection of the community. That has to be emphasized."

Assessing his own strengths and weaknesses, Chief Dooley cited dedication as his major asset. "I am dedicated to the fire service and to the good and the welfare of the public.

"I'm also a traditionalist, and I pride myself on the fact that I'm a traditionalist, but not to the point where it interferes with progress.

"And I think that is also a reflection of my weakness side, because I'm basically bucking the tradition here. I come from a department that was very into a semi-military operation. The respect for rank is something that I'm used to.

"Cohasset's tradition is more of a personal relationship between the officers and the men. An officer has to realize, and so do the men, that when a man becomes an officer he steps above to a certain degree...he's automatically in a different league.

"You just can't be referring to them on duty on a first name basis without the respect of giving them rank and title."

Chief Dooley cites the improvement of fire prevention and getting the force more involved in the community as his goals for 1984. He hopes to have the department perform more inspections in both the public and private sectors "not with the idea of finding fault, but with the idea of better serving the community. We go in with suggestions rather than orders," he said.

He added the business community has been very receptive to the departments efforts so far.

Other planned projects include the continuation of underwater rescue drills, as well as firefightng basic drills. The chief is hoping one of his officers will volunteer to be the full-time training officer in addition to his regular shift duty.

On the personal side, Chief Dooley recently celebrated 25 years of marriage with his wife, Joyce. The couple have two children: Patrick, 23, who is a firefighter in East Hartford; and Colleen, 21, who graduated last spring from Simmons College in Boston, and now lives and works in the city.

A very private man when it comes to his family, the chief says he likes to go for long walks, and confesses to a love for the bagpipes and symphonies. Hard rock and operas don't sit well with him and his wife is still trying to win him over to the grace of the ballet.

Is there anything about the chief the public may be unaware of?

"I'm very sentimental," answers the chief. "I get goose-bumps when I hear the Star Spangled Banner. That may sound corny to some people, but it doesn't to me.

"I'm into the history of this country, what it stands for. I guess I'm what you'd consider patriotic.

"I'm not overly religious. I think that's a very private thing between a person and their God, and it doesn't always have to be displayed by attending any formal kind of church or congregation."

The chief believe it's important to be an active part of a community, and he plans to serve Cohasset for some time, although he says he likes to "keep (his) options open."

"My wife feels very strongly that I could handle a much larger department, and there have been times that I've given it some thought. But I think it's a matter of having self-confidence, and I don't feel I'm ready for it yet.

"But if an opportunity arises, I would definitely give it some very serious thought."

But for now, he's happy as a clam in Cohasset, and adds being chief is like realizing a childhood dream of running his hometown's fire department.

He's just doing it somewhere else.

Selectmen clear Fire Chief of all charges

By Jane Lane

With the hope that "this issue will be laid to rest," Fire Chief Martin Dooley expressed his pleasure at selectmen's decision to vindicate him of all charges brought by the firefighters union.

Following the last week's decision, Chief Dooley said he was "very happy the board voted 5-0 in favor of my decision as commanding officer. At this time, I hope we leave this issue to rest."

The board voted unanimously "there was no reason" to bring charges against the chief as recommended in a December letter written to the board by firefighters Union President Robert Protulis.

The union official told selectmen during a Hull fire Nov. 25 Chief Dooley improperly ordered the aerial ladder to be used to puncture a boarded window on the second floor of a vacant building. He also charged the chief endangered the safety and lives of the firefighters at the scene, when he ordered two men at separate intervals, to stay atop a ladder while it was being utilized as a water tower.

There were some harsh words for Chief Dooley's attorney, Louis Cassis.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "First, I think it was a bad decision (to use the aerial ladder to punture the window). And in regard to Mr. Cassis, I thought you went overboard in the way you spoke to the firefighters" (during the three nights of testimony).

He continued, "I realize these were serious charges against Chief Dooley, and I don't blame him for hiring an attorney. But calling them liars, I think you could have used better language . . . I don't go along with it."

Selectman John DeBassio concurred "somewhat" with Laugelle's statements, and noted "most equipment has a specific purpose, and I don't think the original intent of the ladder was to be used for battering, pushing, or as a hydraulic jack."

Selectman Clifford Mitman and Frank England maintained the board must "be careful about trying to interject" their interpretation of how equipment and personnel are utilized during a fire.

Mitman noted the operations manual for the ladder states "avoid use, not absolutely not use, as a battering ram."

England added, "We have people who have gone to school and I think we have to expect command decisions at a fire by experienced people."

Union official Protulis, who attended the meeting last week and quickly left after the decision was announced, said he would not comment at this time.

Selectmen released a written version of the decision this week. Selectmen said if Chief Dooley does not make a reasonable attempt to implement these finds, selectmen will issue a formal set of instructions.

Selectmen's Decision

"Selectmen received a letter dated December 7, 1984 and signed by William J. Protulis, President of Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804, alleging that Chief Martin W. Dooley misused the Cohasset Ladder One and endangered the safety of Firefighters at a fire at Alden Avenue and Beach Avenue in Hull on November 25, 1983.

Selectmen determined these allegations warranted further investigation, which was supplied by a special committee consisting of the Cohasset Executive Secretary and two Advisory Committee members.

"At the same time Ladder One was placed on limited service, pending determination of whether or not the ladder or the hydraulic system was damaged. It was ultimately determined by outside professionals that there was no damage sustained because of November 25 events.

"Selectmen then decided that a formal fact-finding hearing was appropriate and this was conducted on February 7, 13, and 20, 1984. Based on the testimony, information and exhibits presented as part of that hearing, Selectmen voted 5-0 that no formal charges against Chief Dooley are warranted.

"It is the conclusion of the selectmen that:

1. "Pushing of the extension ladder against the plywood covering a window is not a normal use for the ladder and is recommended against by the apparatus instructions. It is, however, not inconsistent with practices in other departments outside Cohasset and not prohibited by the instructions. We feel a policy should be set covering the unusual use of the ladder for the future, to be followed up by appropriate training.

2. "The hydraulic system should normally prevent damage from occurring through excess pressure on the ladder.

3. "Stationing of a Firefighter at the top of the ladder when in use as a water tower is an accepted fire fighting procedure and records indicate that wind velocity was not excessive at the time.

"There is some indication that additional training in the use of a water tower with a man on the ladder is needed. Also, the ladder was moved hydraulically with a man up the ladder, which should be avoided. It is our conclusions that neither of these is reason enough for disciplinary action.

"The Board of Selectmen, therefore, consider the November 25, 1983 matter closed and hope all parties concerned, including Selectmen, the Chief and the Firefighters, will in the future work together for the good of the Department and to assure the highest quality of fire service is provided to the residents of Cohasset.

Warrant articles reviewed by selectmen

Selectmen last week reviewed several warrant articles for town meeting.

The school committee will submit two articles, including one for $500,000 for major roof repairs to three schools. Supt. Eugene Crowell explained about half the total cost of the repairs may be paid by the state.

Legislation was passed in February which authorized appropriations for roofing projects such as this, he said. The school department has already applied for the funds.

An architectural firm has prioritized the leaking roofs which have to be repaired, with the Deer Hill School needing the bulk of the work.

The second article sponsored by the school committee requests $15,000 for extensive work and painting on the windows and trim at the Osgood School.

However, Tuesday night, School Committee Chairman Dick Conley asked for the article to be withdrawn.

When selectman Frank England asked why this item was not contained in the school maintenance budget, Supt. Crowell explained he couldn't inflate the budget further with additional figures because, "I'm $126,000 away from the advisory board figure now."

Supt. Crowell added, "If I put this into the regular budget, I'll have to pull out other things from our regular education program."

The Board of Health will also have two articles contained in the April Town Meeting warrant. The first article will request $95,000, or a five-year lease plan of about $1800 per month, for the purchase of a frontend loader. The heavy equipment will be used at the town's landfill, and will replace the 13-year old tractor used there now by landfill operator Joseph Laugelle.

Laugelle explained the capital outlay committee is investigating a five-year lease program for the equipment, which would cost the town about $2000 a month, depending on the low bid. Another article sponsored by the health board will request funding to construct some type of garage in which to house the expensive machinery.

The final article sponsored by the health board will request a maximum amount of $1,500 to conduct a hazardous waste materials day. This one-day event will allow all residents to dispose of hazardous materials in their garages and home, and arrange for a commercial hazardous waste contractor to transport the materials. Businesses throughout the town will be asked to assist with the event, although they will not be allowed to dispose of any materials.

The board originally intended to schedule the event in May, but that will depend on whether a transfer of appropriated FY84 funds is approved.

Harbor Permit

Selectmen reviewed an article which would require a permit from the harbormaster for anyone mooring a float or lobster car in the harbor.

Harbor Study Committee Chairman Charles Fink explained there would be no fee for the float or lobster car permits, although selectman Rocco Laugelle disagreed with that idea. He said some lobster cars use a greater amount of mooring space than some boats.

The second article will require boats without a Cohasset decal to pay a daily fee when they moor in Cohasset Harbor overnight. Selectmen suggested the boatowner sign a waiver which would alleviate any liability to the town for possible damage to the mooring.

Fink explained the night patrols may be the most appropriate method to collect the overnight mooring fees. Many times in the past, boatowners have moored overnight several times throughout the summer, without being charged. This is not fair, he explained, when others pay a fee to be moored in the harbor.

The harbor study committee has surveyed the coastal area communities, and the average overnight fee is $10, according to Harbor Master Harry Ritter. Selectmen will annually establish the fee charge, and the effective dates of the mooring fee.

'Forty Carats' was a lot of laughs

By Moira McCarthy

If you wanted a lot of laughs this weekend, you should have spent your evening at Cohasset Town Hall with the Cohasset Dramatic Club and their presentation of 'Forty Carats.'

The laughter picked up from the start of the prologue, until well after the final curtain closed. And they were laughs well earned by the cast of the play.

The play, a modern day comedy-romance, dealt with older women-younger men as well as older men-younger women relationships. The location was in a New York city apartment of a twice divorced real estate broker named Ann Stanley, who had a secret night stand with a boy named Peter in Greece the summer before.

Slyly, Ann had escaped taking responsibility for spending the night with a man some 20 years her younger by giving him a fake name and address.

But when the enamored Peter showed up at her New York apartment the next fall to date Ann's daughter, the plot took off.

By far, the most captivating performances of the screening were given by Alice Daunt as Maud Hayes (Ann's mother) and by Cohasset High student Jacqui Fahey as Trina (Ann's daughter).

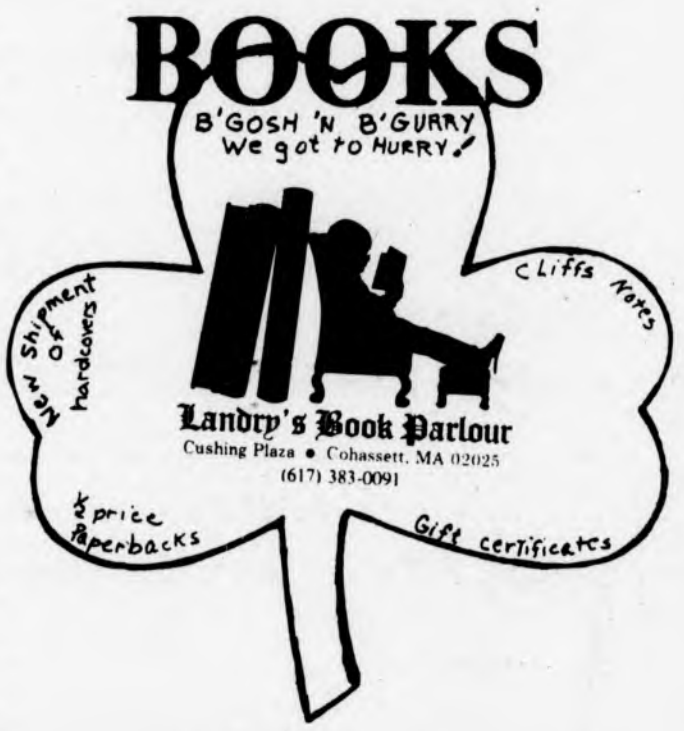
Those two characters continuous barter kept the show flowing with a natural feeling that all this was really happening. One was left with the feeling that if you meet Jacqui on the street, she was indeed an outspoken, independent "little bitch" to put it in Ann's words.

And the performance of Daunt, a long-time club member went off so smoothly and was so believable it was hard to believe she wasn't on a Broadway stage.

The playline wasn't a gripping one; it simply followed the intertwining romances of Ann and Trina and the two men they end up marrying.

The whole surprise element of the play was that 17-year-old Trina ends up marrying the older man her mother is supposed to be pursuing and Ann ends up marrying Peter (from Greece) the 24-year-old man Trina is supposed to be pursuing.

But throughout all this, some great lines, and some hilarious realisms are presented to the audience.



Billy Boylan, Ann's ex-husband played by John Kuhn, a newcomer to the club, let the audience take a look at the little bit of everyone that just doesn't want to grow up but at the same time knows that he must.

Mrs. Margolin, Ann's secretary, played by Peg Maeder, says everything you'd want to say in sticky situations; those snide one-liners that pass through your mind but never your lips. Mrs. Margolin says them all in a way everyone seems to laugh with and accept.

The set of the play was colorful, and well done. Producers Tamsyn Elliott and George Hamacher should be commended for the sets and how smoothly the two-act prologue play went off.

But probably the most impressive part of this refreshing comedy was the comaraderie of the crew that put this play together.

From the actors, to the crew, to the people serving soft drinks in the hallway, one could feel the togetherness in the air. And for each part of that togetherness, each person who took part in that play, deserves another curtain call.

Megabucks mania inspires fantasies

By Moira McCarthy

Without a doubt, the epidemic that swept the South Shore, along with the rest of the state, will only get worse this week.

Officials are predicting double the amount of people falling to that epidemic. What is it that's effecting each and every one of us, every day?

Megabucks mania's the name, and the game with its tempting $13 million jackpot has potential tycoons lined up for blocks outside stores selling the tickets.

At Christy's Market in Pembroke Center, the rush started early last week, after it was announced that the Megabucks jackpot had climbed to an unprecidented $5 million, because no one had won in weeks.

"That triggered it off", one Pembroke observer said, "I went in there Saturday night, and everyone in town was in line waiting to buy a ticket. I couldn't believe it."

Neither could lottery officials, who decided to hold betting open until 10 p.m., 45 minutes past the usual deadline, since the state's computer system couldn't handle all the bets at its usual speed. Lottery officials estimate that approxiamtely $200,000 a hour poured in from the game Saturday alone.

Christy's manager Pat Baker said the store did an unbelievable $3000 in lottery business last week, some $2000-plus of that being solely in Megabucks.

As for this week, she said the crowds are already pouring in.

"People are betting heavily for this week already," she said Monday morning, "I've already done as much business today as I do in two days."

The betters that came out this past Saturday, and who are coming out again this week, are from all walks of life.

Maura Clark, an executive secretary from Scituate, bet for her first time this week.

"When I heard what the jackpot was, I figured, what's a dollar (the cost of a ticket.) So I went out and put in a bet."

Did she expect to win? "Well, I have been dreaming of a new car, a trip somewhere warm, a new house . . ."

An unidentified Mashfield man, however, is far from a novice better.

"I bought 75 tickets," he said, "My wife and I spent all week figuring out the odds, and what numbers we should play. I feel like I've got a pretty good chance."

His plans for the estimated $550,000 a year? "Retirement. And a whole lot of travel. And fun too."

Pam Sullivan of Hingham plays the Megabucks every week, and every week hopes to win.

"I don't expect to win, but it sure would be a nice surprise. I've got a lot of plans for that money." Sullivan, a nurse at Milton Hospital, says she'd like to travel, and buy a home and a nice car.

On the South Shore, store owners experienced a big leap in business because of the betting.

Riddles Market in North Scituate was literally packed with potential winners, and the line for the machine wound through the store and out the door.

Cathy Brennan waited 45 minutes for her ticket.

"I'm up from West Virginia, and my in-laws told me about the game," she said while waiting in line. "I'm not quite sure how to play, but I'd love to win." She went on to cross of her birthday, anniversary, husbands birthday, and numerous other dates as her played number. "I'm going home to fix my hair for when the press comes to interview me about the big win," she joked as she left.

No one won Saturday night, and that means this week's jackpot should peak somewhere over $13 million, by far the largest jackpot in Massachusetts Megabucks history.

South Shore store owners are glad to hear that.

"I'm not sure how much business in th store increased from the rush, but it's always nice to have more customers coming in," Baker said.

And South Shore residents are happy as well.

"Just as long as it gets larger, I don't mind waiting one more week," Pembroke resident Maria Fletcher said, "What's one week when you're talking $13 million."

Marshfield resident Mark Beauziach agreed. "I can wait a few days when I'm waiting to be a millionaire. I need the time to plan my spending spree anyway."

That's confindence.

See Bermuda through local artists' works

Come see Bermuda---through the eyes of South Shore artists.

Some of the works of art done during the South Shore Art Center's "Paint Bermuda" trip will be exhibited during the Spring Open House, March 18 from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd.

The display of watercolors are works which the artists completed during a recent painting experience in Bermuda with watercolorist Virginia Avery.

During the Sunday open house, visitors will also have an opportunity to watch a print making demonstration by Center instructor Albert Abany. The demonstration will be held at 5:15 p.m.

Primarily the Center's open house offers an opportunity to learn about classes on the Spring schedule, to meet instructors and to register for classes and workshops. Advanced registration is required.

Returning to the spring schedule is Abany's course "A Workshop for People Who Can't Draw a Straight Line." Starting April 9, Monday from 12:30 to 3 p.m., this is an introductory course for people who thought they could never learn to draw. Line, form, proportion, perspective and structure will be covered. Abany's "Printmaking Without a Press" is also on the spring schedule and will begin April 16, on Mondays from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

A new course, "Art from Art", taught by artist Jim Ann Howard begins April 11, Wednesdays from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. Students work from Master paintings to identify and isolate qualities which make great paintings great and learn to incorporate these qualities into their own work. Students may choose either traditional or modern masters.

around town

☐ I feel I must begin this with a sad and unbelievable report. It seems that Buzz Stanton, a man who is confined to a wheelchair and must use special ramps wherever he goes, was at the Red Lion Inn last Wednesday night for dinner. He left his two-piece aluminum ramp outside the door, as he saw no reason to bring it with him while he was dining, and when he needed it to leave the building, it was gone! Someone had stolen it. Buzz wants it back . . . as he put it, "Money aside, I NEED it!" There will be no repercussions, so whoever "borrowed" it, or knows anything about it, please get in touch with Buzz, or leave it off at his house. Anything that can be done will be greatly appreciated by Buzz! Call him at 383-0944 or leave the ramp at his home, located at 30 Clay Spring Rd.

☐ Everyone in town knows by now that the basketball teams are awesome . . . the girls put forth outstanding efforts in their losing bid last Friday night, and the boys are stil in contention as this is being written. What most probably they don't know is Carla Lucas' story. Before half-time Carla, in a super effort to retrieve the basketball, took a real tumble, got right up and continued playing. She came back to play the whole second half, telling no one about the pain she was in. Afterwards, she went to the doctor, and found out that she had broken her collar-t one! Talk about dedication, that certainly falls under the "above and beyond" category. Hats off to you, Carla.

☐ One more word about basketball, this one for the fans. The high school has certainly come alive due to the boys continuing superb efforts on the court, and the players say they credit the fans as much as the team for their wins. The hats, banners, loud cheering and hands waving are indeed a sight to see, the students should be proud of themselves. Keep it up, "Bleacher creatures," everyone thinks your're grand.

Jessica MacDonald glues two pieces of wood together to put with her clay project at the Arts Center. (Rose Cundari photo)

☐ Had a call from Roberta Raffa last week, telling all that are interested that she and Mary Lou Slotnick, Elizabeth Robinson, Rose Mary Boyer, and Grace Lawrence have re-opened Studio 4. It is located in North Scituate, and hours are by appointment.

☐ Happy Birthday to Kyra Lea Cogill, who celebrated her third recently, under the able direction of Aunt Meka-Mari.

☐ Marie Johnston called with exciting news this week. She has been chosen to decorate a room in the Junior League house and this year she will do the pantry. The pantry is a large one, and she has planned it carefully. Marie has included hand-painted tiles, cabinets, and even hand made cupboards, with the china that will be there from Shreve's. Anyone who went on the house tour this past winter got a grand look at Marie's beautiful work as she designed the whole back end of Donna and Steve O'Connor's lovely home. A national magazine is interested in doing an article on this effort, that tells you how grand it is! Be sure to look at the pantry while going through the Junior League home.

☐ Stephen A. Kellman, son of Mr. F. William Kellman of Cohasset and Wianno, and Mrs. Jacqueline Jean of Osterville, is a recipient of the Dean's Award for academic excellence during the fall term at Colgate University where he is a Junior.

A 1980 graduate of Manchester High School, Manchester, NH, Stephen is concentrating in English at Colgate.

To be eligible for the Dean's Award, a Colgate student must achieve a 3.30 or higher term average while carrying a full course load.

☐ Kenny Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Davis, will be returning from Germany with his new bride, Angela. Kenny and Angela will go to New Jersey after a two week visit to finish his last year in the Army where he is an M.P. Kenny will be home March 7 and hopes to see some of his old friends, and to introduce his new bride.

☐ Gerald McNabb competed with Xaverian Brothers High School last Saturday in the Boston Globe Drama Festival at Brockton. Although the school's production of "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail" did not get chosen to continue, Gerald was honored as a member of the All Star Cast.

☐ Sally Lucy Wright of Cohasset was named to the Plymouth State College President's List for achieving a grade point average of 3.7 or better during the fall semester of the 1983-84 academic year.

☐ Lily Carbone's beautiful voice put gooseflesh on many people's skin, and a tear in many an eye when she sang the National Anthem at the last two games. A superior rendition indeed.

☐ Sara Corbett and Susie Leangold, both seventh graders, were medalists recently at a figure skating competition that was held at the North Shore Sports Center. Competing in the ISIA skating program, Susie won a gold medal and Sara won a silver. Congratulations, girls.

☐ If you are considering a vacation in Florida, be sure to consider Cape Coral, where Neil O'Brien spends his winters. It seems that everyone from Cohasset stops in, where Neil is "living the life of Riley." Pat McCarthy and his family (Dad was there, too) report that although visitors have to do maintenance (Pat fixed the dishwasher and garbage disposal), lotus blossoms floating in the pool made it worth it!

One wonders if there is a hotel license necessary, as there are people leaving and arriving daily . . . Larry Keating and his family were checking in as the McCarthys were leaving. Perhaps Neil should think about changing his name to Perle Mesta, Cape Coral's version of the Washington entertainer.

☐ Be sure to enter the Mystery House Tour . . . it's fun to try and locate the homes pictured, and the prizes give extra incentive to try and guess. Once you find the house, drop off the answers at the Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey's News, then watch to see if you are in the running to win (to be published in this paper each week). The mystery houses were chosen based on their age, location, and renovations . . . have fun!

'Eddie & the Cruisers' advance to semifinals

School Committee members were seen wearing "Eddie and the Cruiser" shirts and the most successful pep rally was held at CHS Friday with faculty and custodians all attending.

Blue was all over the gymnasium, an enormous crowd was waiting in line to get into CHS Saturday and Lilly Carbone, a CHS student, made most everyone have a tear in their eyes with her rendition of the "National Anthem."

There is no doubt the 20-2 Skippers surpassed any goal set out by Minelli before the season began. They have achieved, according to Minelli, the sense of unselfish and team basketball in the mold of the Boston Celtics.

The players, said Minelli, have become role models in the sense they will relinquish scoring in order to accomplish the team's goal.

A perfect witness to this was senior David Barcomb who played the role of decoy against Abington. He allowed Abington to double team him while dishing off eight assists and setting picks for eighth grader Brian Edwards. Barcomb scored ten points and pulled in 11 rebounds.

Edwards led all scorers with 20 points, 14 of them in the second half and pulled in ten rebounds.

Teammate Jim Creed blocked seven shots, scored 12 points and grabbed 14 rebounds. Guard Tony Bogarty scored eight points.

Another unsung hero was David MacDonald who played a tight defense and deflected several passes leading to turnovers.

Cohasset led at the end of the first quarter, 12-8, 27-22 at the half and pulled away for good in the third quarter.

Outstanding defense in the third period by Creed and Barcomb and a 13-6 run led by Edwards eight points boosted Cohasset to a 42-28 lead after three quarters.

The final score was 60-49.

MEDFIELD

Minelli said the 59-47 win over Medfield was the best high school performance of Creed's career and the best high school performance he has seen all year by a player.

The 16-year old sophomore 6-5 center played like a combination of former Celtic Paul Silas and former New York Knick Willis Reed with left hand hook shots.

He scored 18 points, grabbed 21 points, blocked four shots and began the Skipper fast break with accurate and quick outlet passes.

Another key was the play of Barcomb who plugged away with 11 rebounds and 14 points.

Bogarty was a master quarterback as he gave the Medfield team fits with his ballhandling and passing, good for 12 assists and six points.

Edwards hit for 13 points, mostly from corner shots and MacDonald chipped in with a valuable six points.

Midway throught the second quarter, Cohasset led 21-17 but then Medfield went cold. Cohasset's defense never let up while the offense went on a 16-6 tear. Cohasset jumped out to a 37-23 lead at the half.

The lead zoomed to 51-29 as Barcomb scored off the tap, Creed hooked in two from the lane, Bogarty scored on a drive and baskets by MacDonald and Edward put away the game for good.

"Believe it or not, this was not an easy win. My kids looked like they've been through the ringer," said Minelli.

Peering into his crystal ball Tuesday, Minelli predicted his team would have an excellent chance of beating Medway because that squad "is a mirror team of Medfield. They are a little bigger but we have an excellent opportunity to beat them."

If it should happen and depending if Brockton should win Wednesday, look for a Cardinal Spellman-Cohasset final Friday night at 7 at Brockton if Brockton should lose or Brockton High School at 4 p.m. Saturday if Brockton should win.

Computer costs

Recently, newspapers have published feature articles on the computer surge throughout the public schools.

The basic message was 'Hey, wait a minute! Are we rushing too fast? Why the rush for the elementary schools?

Our first reaction to the near $126,000 school budget increase over the advisory committee recommendations was can the computers cost be cut?

School Supt. Eugene Crowell acknowledges he has budgeted $30,000 through taxation appropriation for computer equipment for all Cohasset schools and also acknowledges this may be the first to be cut if the school budget is not approved at the April Town Meeting.

But he is also concerned about state Education leaders who are strongly hinting that computer literacy may become part of the Basic Skills testing now required of all public schools.

Crowell said area schools are budgeting now for computers and he feels Cohasset isn't going "the Cadillac route."

Crowell said the thrust of the Cohasset computer curriculum is not to produce professional computer programmers when students graduate from CHS but rather the students are proficient in computer language and can also take SAT and Achievement tests which are slowly testing computer skills.

In addition, some colleges are now requiring students to have passed some computer courses in high school.

We agree with Supt. Crowell, computers should be used as a teaching tool and if cuts are to be made, computer equipment should be cut in the primary grades.

After learning about state leaders hinting toward a required computer basic skill, we are now leery about drastically cutting school-wide computer costs.

Election update

The nomination papers deadline has passed and voters can expect some heavy political advertising during March. There are eight local office elections.

For selectmen, candidates are Mary Jane McArthur, John DeBassio and Doris Golden; School Committee, Dick Conley, George Marlette III and Judith Volungis and town clerk, Frances Marks and Hamilton Tewksbury.

For Board of Assessors, Charles Aronivici and Warren Pratt, water commissioner, Jeffrey Bettinger and Arne Gjesteby and for a five year term for the Planning Board, Patrick Plante will be running against Deborah Cook.

Library trustees: Sheila Evans, Cordelia Foell, Doris McNulty and John McNabb Jr and for the two unexpired four year terms on the Recreation Commission, Robin Surhbier, Peter Laugelle, Peter Whitman and Terese England Duggan.

Presidential Primary

Polling hours will be 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall. Absentee balloting will close Monday, March 12 at noon.

The Boy Scout Troop 28 will be manning a refreshment stand at the Presidential Primary, March 13, town election, April 14 and a coffee stand, April 7 to raise funds for a scout trip to Washington D.C. Scouts hope to visit with their Congressman and visit many historical buildings during their overnight stay.

News blackout for horoscopes

By Claire McDonough

My friend Elinor phoned me last Saturday in evident distress.

"You're the only one who can help," she sobbed. "When I went to read my Astrograph this morning, there was no horoscope for Aries.

"Please," she begged, "ask your friend Madam Zolar what's happening. Are all Aries doomed?"

"Calm yourself," I counseled. "Breida looks fine. I know it can be annoying when something you want isn't in the paper, but why don't you just buy a Globe or a Herald?"

"Are you kidding? The minute I knew that the stars didn't see any future for Aries today I got back into bed. I'm not getting out of here until tomorrow. If I make tomorrow. Please call Madam Zolar."

I couldn't resist a plea like that, so I visited Madam Zolar in her chic little ashram on Third Cliff. I had to cross her palm with a great deal of silver, but within an hour I was able to phone Elinor with some good news.

"Relax," I told her. "You have a horoscope just like everybody else. It just wasn't available today."

"Why?" she demanded. "We have a free pass. We have a Freedom of Information Act. Why can't Aries read their horoscope just like everybody else?"

I hesitated. "Are you a loyal American?"

"You know I am," she snapped indignantly. "Didn't I buy a car I couldn't afford when President Reagan said the economy wouldn't get moving again unless people started spending? Don't I have a 'Bless Ed Meese' stitchery over my fireplace?"

"That's what I told Madam," I said soothingly, "and she said if I was certain, I could let you in on it.

"You see, Elinor, Madam told me that people aren't the only ones with horoscopes. Animals have them, and cars, and houses, and even nations. Do you follow me?"

Elinor nodded, and I continued. "Well, it seems that there's a republic in Latin America that's an Aries. The government there has asked us for a loan, and some of the President's advisors think we should give it to them. On the other hand, some of his advisors think we should invade."

"This is getting very complicated," Elinor interjected.

"Foreign policy always is. Anyway, another country, a super-power, who happens to be a Scorpio, really wanted to know what we're going to do. If they thought we were going to grant the loan, they would pull their money out of the neighboring Virgo country with Aries rising, and beat us to it.

"On the other hand, if they believed we were going to invade they'd move a lot of weapons into a nearby Capricorn and be prepared to foil our plans. It isn't widely known, but there's an astrological gap, and we're far ahead of them when it comes to casting horoscopes. Their secret agents have been buying up all our newspapers because if they know what's going to happen to Aries they'll have a pretty good idea of our plans."

"That's incredible," Elinor said. "Do you mean to tell me there's a news blackout on horoscopes for Aries?"

"Just till the crisis is over. After all, you owe it to your country."

"I can't believe President Reagan would go along with this," she said.

"Madam Zolar told me it doesn't bother him a bit. He's an Aquarius."

Vanpool driver confident he will prevail

To the Editor:

I want to express my appreciation to you and the Cohasset Mariner for the excellent editorial in the Feb. 16, 1984 publication. While it seems at times that I am "fighting the world" for survival it is reassuring to see expressed support in your paper. With your help and others, I'm confident we will prevail in the end.

I am enclosing a copy of a letter of opposition to my service. Mr. McCabe at the DPU is supportive of my endeavors and has been helpful and cooperative in this licensing procedure. I don't believe we will take any immediate steps to terminate my operation.

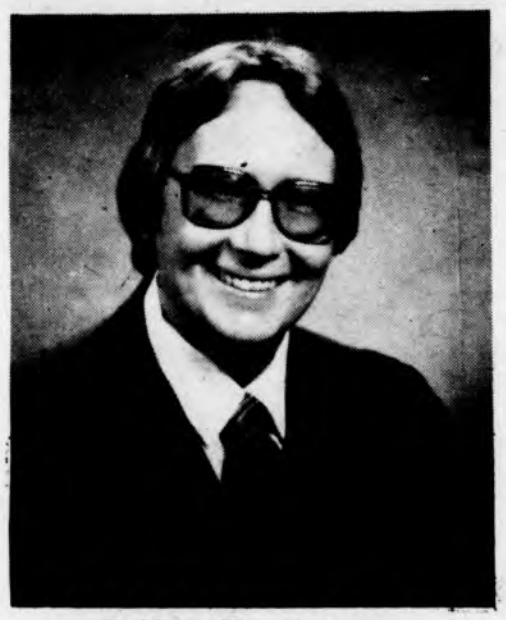
Thanks again for your support. I will keep you posted on all developments.

Very truly yours,
Hugh T. Drummond

(Ed. note: The following letter from Jeremy Kahn, Washington, D.C. attorney for the Plymouth & Brockton X Street Railway Co., was sent to John H. McCabe, Director, Division of Railway and Bus, Department of Public Utilities.)

Re: Van Pool Operations, Mr. Hugh Drummond.

The undersigned represents Plymouth and Brockton Street Railway Company, Plymouth, Massachusetts, a motor common carrier of passengers certificated by the Department of Public Utilities and the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority to transport passengers in regular route bus operations, between points on the South Shore, on the one hand, and on the other, Boston, Massachusetts.



Plymouth & Brockton has become aware of the activities of Mr. Hugh Drummond, who upon information and belief, is operating at least nine multi-passenger vans between points on the South Shore and Boston, in which he transports passengers, for compensation, without an appropriate certificate of public convenience and necessity being in effect, in violation of applicable laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts providing that such transportation may be performed, only with such a certificate in effect.

Plymouth & Brockton, as a regular route carrier with an extensive investment in equipment, facilities, and personnel, and more than 35 years of responsive service to this area, formally complains to your Department with respect to this apparent violation of the law with respect to economic licensing.

In addition, upon information and belief, the vans being operated by Mr. Drummond are in violation of the safety rules and regulations of your Department

Jeffrie Bettinger

Jeffrie A. Bettinger announced his candidacy for the seat on the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners.

His campaign committee has been formed and includes: Barbara Bliss, Ann Churchill, Linda Wakeman and Robert M. Davenport of 17 Black Horse Lane, Treasurer.

Bettinger is employed as an Engineer at Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation in Boston. He received his Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Michigan Technological University where he specialized in water and waste treatment.

Prior to attending Michigan Tech, he served for five years in the U.S. Navy where he became an instructor in water chemistry.

For the past year he has been serving as Chairman of the Hazardous Material Advisory Committee.

Bettinger feels that Cohasset could lose its supply of pure drinking water unless steps are taken to protect it. "Protection of our water supply would be my priority as a water commissioner. While we deal with specific sources of pollution, the key to future protection is planning. A comprehensive watershed protection plan must be developed and implemented."

As a water commissioner, his responsibilities will also include the water distribution system. "Considering the age and condition of the distribution system, upgrading is required. The state can help, but it is still going to cost us money. We need to find a way to get this money in the least painful manner."

Mr. Bettinger and his wife, Nancy, live at 84 Summer Street.

Volungis brunch

A brunch will be held by the Committee to Elect Judy Volungis to the Cohasset School Committee Sunday, March 11, between 11:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. at Harrington's Restaurant.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Judy at 383-0752 or Rita Strong, 383-0939.

and further, it is believed your Department has been aware of this fact for many weeks.

With respect to economic licensing, Plymouth & Brockton is justifiably concerned about the proliferation of competing operations by those who do not hold appropriate operating authority from the appropriate regulatory agencies. Plymouth & Brockton did not write the law, but it has operated under that law for several decades, resulting in a significant investment in equipment, facilities, and personnel, in order to provide service for the public. It is the carrier's position that the law, as written, should be enforced.

While a permissive attitude with respect to violation of the law with respect to economic licensing is one thing, each day that the Department knowingly permits an operator to engage in regulated transportation activities while he is in violation of appropriate safety rules and regulations is a serious abdication of the Department's responsibility to the public.

Each and every carrier engaged in passenger transportation is concerned with the public image of that transportation. Nothing is more important than safety. Plymouth & Brockton urges the Department immediately to take steps to terminate operations by Mr. Hugh Drummond that are in violation of applicable safety.

You are requested respectfully to advise the undersigned as to what steps will be taken to put an end to this unlawful and admittedly unsafe operation at the earliest opportunity. You are also requested to institute immediately an appropriate proceeding to bring an end to his flaunting of the law.

To the extent that the activities of Mr. Drummond are wholly within the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (with respect to economic licensing), I have, by copies of this communication to Mr. Joseph H. Elcock, General Counsel of the Transportation Authority, lodged a formal complaint with that agency as well as your own.

Should you desire any further information, may I suggest that you contact either the undersigned or Mr. John A. McDonough, Director of Operations for Plymouth & Brockton.

Respectfully,
Jeremy Kahn

Missing property

To the Editor:

Two weeks ago I had the opportunity to speak to the third graders at the Joseph Osgood School, Cohasset, as part of a program of handicap awareness.

At that time many questions were asked by the children regarding accessibility to buildings with stairs.

I explained that sometimes it was very difficult for me to get into buildings with many stairs, but I had ramps made which were portable and made many otherwise inaccessible buildings open to me.

I also explained that my family, friends, and the people of Cohasset were always very helpful to me.

So, it was quite shocking to me to find after I had dinner at the Red Lion Inn last week that someone had taken my aluminum ramps from the side entrance! I don't know who took them, or why, but they are very valuable and important to me.

They were designed specifically for a wheelchair and nothing else. Therefore, if anyone knows the current whereabouts of the ramps, please put them back or contact me about them. They are two six ft. long aluminum channels about six in. wide, with two handles on each piece.

I don't care who took them or why, I just want them back.

Respect for Jack Hubbard

To the Editor:

Few people will perhaps ever realize the number of cumulative hours of effort that Jack Hubbard has dedicated to the Cohasset Conservation Commission. In fact, his efforts have not just been limited to the local wetlands, but have embraced many other local and world concerns. His seemingly thankless efforts with the commission spanned more than 15 years, and yet were culminated recently with a simple, terse letter of resignation.

Jack had been a commissioner since before conservation commissions were granted regulatory authority under the Wetlands Protection Act. He knew the Act well and never hesitated to share his knowledge and experience. During my association with the commission, he very often stood firm, within the context of the law, on issues that he felt strongly should not be compromised. He is unquestionably a man of the highest integrity and forthright conviction relative to his dealings with people and to the preservation of Cohasset's unique environment.

It comes as a somewhat bitter irony then, that his resignation comes as it has. It would appear to many that his only underlying 'interest', however zealous, has merely been to preserve and protect the intricate and beautiful system of inland and coastal wetlands for all of us and our future generations.

Some thoughts from the retired Town Clerk

(Here is a copy of a letter to Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur.)

Dear Mary Jane:

After serving the town for 39½ years, I believe it is time for me to retire from my position as Town Clerk. I started working for the town in late 1945 as Assistant Town Clerk to William H. Morris.

In January of 1946 the Board of Selectmen asked me to work for them as Clerk of the Boards of Selectmen, Assessors and Public Welfare. I was clerk of these three boards until 1949 when I went to work for the Post Office.

I loved the work in the Town Clerk's Office and continued as Assistant Town Clerk. So, in 1958, when Mr. Morris died, I decided to run for Town Clerk. The last 26 years have been very rewarding to me and I have enjoyed every minute of it.

As you know, I worked as a part time clerk with my Assistant working full time in the office. The town has grown and the job can no longer be done any more on a part time basis. I do not want to work full time so it is time for me to step aside and enjoy full retirement. I urge the Board of Selectmen to change this situation and make the Town Clerk's position full time with the assistant working part time.

I have been very fortunate to have very capable assistants working for me over the past 26 years. When I had my heart attack last October, Franny was able to take over and continue the work without any problem. She knows the work and I am sure you will reward her by appointing her as Temporary Town Clerk until the election in April, at which time I am sure the town will elect her as Town Clerk.

I do not know of any department in the State where the office worker receives more than twice as much pay as the department head.

In order to change this situation, you will need to put an article in this year's warrant to reverse this inequity. You will also need to add the Office of Town Clerk for three years to the list of officers to be elected.

I want to thank the Board of Selectmen and all the other Town Department Heads for the splendid cooperation I have received over the years, especially Bill Signorelli and Gordon Flint. If I can be of any service in the future, please do not hesitate to call on me.

My retirement will be effective at the close of business on Tuesday, February 21, 1984.

Sincerely yours,
Charles A. Marks, Town Clerk

GOP Congressional candidates debate

By Theresa Sullivan

Two Republican candidates for Congress for the 10th Congressional District gave differing positions on national deficit, defense spending and a number of other issues during a debate last week.

The debate was sponsored by he the Cohasset Republican club.

Ricardo Barros of New Bedford, a Boston College Law School senior, and Atty. George Donovan of Hull had different solutions to the large federal deficit.

Donovan favors abolishing the Dept. of Energy. "They have accomplished nothing with their $12 to $15 million budget."

In his opening remarks, Donovan strongly opposed U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds' "internationalism."

"When we're in the hole for $1 trillion, we can not afford (aid to foreign countries). We've got to stop this crazy internationalism that's milking the country.

"I care first about America and the rest of the world is a very poor second."

Barros, 25, disagreed. "I don't feel isolationism will solve the problem of the deficit," he said.

"Wild spending by the Democratic party for the past 50 years" caused the deficit. The Democratic party has held a majority in the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives for the 50 years with the exception of two, Barro said.

"It's their programs, their social programs that have caused the deficit." He favors policies which fight poverty through job training, saying welfare recipients are likely to remain welfare recipients for lack of job skills.

Barros said the alternatives to reducing the federal deficit are reducing the spending or raising taxes. "I think raising taxes will choke off our recovery. You don't argue with success. It's quite clear it's working."

Barros said Democrats favor raising taxes, citing the Revenue Enhancement Program.

A tax increase would be "rewarding loveliness," he sa

Donovan said trading with the Soviet Union has a way of decreasing the deficit, and simultaneously reducing the U.S. food surplus.

"The simple reason for the surplus is that we don't trade with half the world. If we could trade with the Soviet Union, it would help decrease tensions," Donovan said.

"Russia is the largest producer of crude oil in the world. We could get crude oil (from Russia) for less."

Donovan said the Soviet Union leaders experienced death of their countrymen in World War II and concluded, the Russians are not anxious for war any more than the Americans are.

But Barros didn't agree with Donovan's thinking.

"The Soviet Union is a threat. It's not something we should be taking lightly. We should not be trading with countries who (advocate) cruelty and oppression."

We must be concerned about others in other countries, he said.

FISHERMEN'S VOTES

An audience member, asked the candidates how they propose to win the fishermen's vote, citing Studds' favor with fishermen.

"I don't think every fisherman supports him, Barros said. The passage of the 200 mile limit law took nine years to get passed and Studds tries to take all the credit for its passage, he said.

He cited another senator who pushed for the passage of the 200 mile limit law.

Donovan conceded the 200 mile limit law was a boon to fishermen, but said, "What we're overlooking is the fishermen can't sell their fish because they're bringing Canadian fish in at a lower price."

Another audience member said Canadian fish are no threat to local fishermen because Canadian fish are frozen fish which are being sold to restaurant chains. Local fishermen are doing well financially, he said.

"I don't know where you get your information, but I'd like to meet you at the town pier tomorrow" to prove you wrong, Donovan said, pointing his finger at the man

In his closing comments, Donovan said he supports capital punishment. If an armed robber killed someone in the act of robbery, Donovan said he should be put to death.

Former state commissioner of community affairs Lewis Cramton announced his candidacy Sunday for the 10th Congressional District. Crampton is director of management systems and evaluation for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Mystery House Tour, week 1a

Attention members of the Cohasset Historical Society, nearly 500 of you. You now are eligible to enter the Mariner Mystery House Tour.

Never did we realize there were 500 of you. After talks with Society Curator David Wadsworth he assured us very few society members have access to the selected houses and also assured us many members would have fun playing.

This means the contest must start again but the winners of last week will count if playoffs are needed.

So officially this is the first week of a 10-week Mystery House Tour, recognizing many historical homes in town and the way they looked at the turn of the century.

Thanks to the Historical Society, the Mariner will publish a turn-of-the-century photo of a home which exists in Cohasset today.

At the end of ten weeks our first place winner will be awarded $100 in retail gift certificates, second place, $50 in gift certificates and third place, a $25 certificate.

If need be, Week 11 and 12 will be set aside for Playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the home (exact number and street) along with your name, address and phone number and send it to "Mystery House Tour," care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Last week's house was No. 1 Summer Street, now the Funeral Home of Sparrell's Funeral Service.

This house was built by John Jacob Lothrop before 1876 and was constructed in part with timbers taken from Lothrop's earlier salt works at Sandy Cove. The picture last week was shot from the corner of Summer and South Main Street. The old signpost was blocked off intentionally.

The winners last week were: Robert A. Leonard Sr. of 39 Bancroft Rd, Hamilton Tewksbury of 81 Elm St., Jean Rosano, Lillian Pierce of 18 Spring St. and Lynette Lydon of 31 Stockbridge St.

Eight people entered last week. Can we double it? Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is this residence was the home of a leading Cohasset person.

Clerk position...

in the town clerk's position will take effect after the fiscal year commences July 1. Until that time, whomever is elected, will serve at the former pay rate. In other words, Henderson said, the full time clerk would be working 40 hours for $119 a week.

Retired Town Clerk Marks submitted his resignation to selectmen, effective Feb. 21, after many months of illness. But because of the late notification, there was only one additional week for persons to take out nomination papers for the office of town clerk.

Daniel Cotton told selectmen it was not fair to the office, nor the residents, to have such a brief time in which to file for candidacy. Particularly if the salary was increased, more people might be interested in challenging the sole nominee for the office, he added.

Selectman chairman Mary Jane McArthur explained the board was notified of the resignation Feb. 18, and a written notification was filed a week later. There was nothing the selectmen could do about the timing of the re irement, she said.

"Did you ever stop and think this is the way Charlie planned it?" Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked Cotton.

"I think this is a disservice to the town - to run this thing through all at the same town meeting. Hold off on the salary, if necessary get extra help. But don't change the whole thing at this late date," Cotton replied.

Selectmen explained they have to follow the legal guidelines for elections, and it is not within their authority to alter the filing date for an elected office.

Deer Hill School Video Artist

The continuation of the Deer Hill School's attempt to broaden the exposure to arts is formally underway.

Cindy Marshall, a video artist, began working Wednesday, Feb. 29, with a series of grade level meetings demonstrating various techniques used with television as an instructional medium.

The theme of this year's four-week Artist Events Program is the promotion of literature and composition by commercial, dramatic and documentary techniques. A series of video tapes will be recorded to document how children view literature and composition at the intermediate level.

Three randomly selected groups of fourth, fifth and sixth grade students will meet with Marshall for an hour and a half a week, with the goal of producing video materials. There materials will be shared with the school and community at the completion of the program.

In Grade 4, selections from the Great Book Program will be dramatized and taped. Grade 5 will produce a series of commercials featuring books which are available through the school library. Grade 6 will produce a documentary focusing on that grade's composition contest and its meaning to the participants. It will consist of selected articles composed by sixth grade students.

Marshall's work with the staff will be just as important as her involvement with students. This aspect of the program will be utilized through video equipment, now available to the school through American Cable T.V. Co. A number of faculty meetings and workshops have been held to familiarize teachers with the operation and technical aspects of the equipment. Recently a videotape was prepared using the staff and administration of Deer Hill to illustrate the construction of a "story board" and how its use is critical in the preparation and direction of any video product.

Funding for this year's Artist Events Program was made possible through a grant from the Cultural Education Collaborative of Boston for $425 year. In addition, $750 of Mass. Dept. of Education block grant funds, $100 of budgeted money, and PSO funds will pay for Marshall's work, supplies and materials.

Planning for this program was coordinated by school staff with assistance from the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee.

The school feels fortunate to have Marshall working with them and looks forward to an enjoyable and productive program.

Phone-A-Thon — A Ringing Success

Thursday, March 1, phones could be heard ringing across Cohasset. It was the Parent School Organization's first annual Phone-a-thon. In 2 and a half hours volunteers attempted to contact all households with Cohasset school children and solicit tax-deductible pledges to help finance a $6,000 budget. Calling was done from multi-phoned locations provided by local real estate companies: Coastal Properties Ltd., Jack Conway, Dean and Hamilton, Dwyer and Mullin, Hallmark 100, Hunneman and Company, Inc., and Petersen's Realtors.

Although the final tally is not complete, PSO president Sue McNamera is delighted with the Phone-a-thon response. "We received approximately $3,000 in pledges. Those contacted were extremely gracious and appreciative of the PSO's accomplishments. We, in turn, are grateful for their financial support," she said.

Families who made pledges to the PSO will be receiving pledge envelopes shortly. A prompt return is urged. Anyone who was neglected during the Phone-a-thon who wishes to make a contribution may address his tax-deductible donation to Cohasset PSO, PO Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Morgan Memorial will have to remove its attended donation trailer from the Hanover Mall as of Saturday, March 3 at 5 p.m. because of insufficient volume. Cohasset and Scituate residents will have to bring unneeded clothing and household goods to the Morgan Memorial trailer in Quincy at Star Market, 130 Granite Street.

The trailer at Quincy is open the same hours: Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. South Shore residents are welcome to bring their donations to Quincy (or to Morgan Memorial's main facility at 95 Berkeley Street, Boston) to receive a tax receipt.

The mightiest Greek god, Zeus, had the excellent good taste to choose a mountain cave in Crete as his birthplace. Crete, the largest of the Greek islands, has a wild terrain ringed by beaches and harbors and crisscrossed with four spectacular mountain ranges. It boasts the simple pleasures of olive oil, honey and wine, unspoiled coastlines and crystalline waters, as well as contemporary cliffside resorts and fascinating ruins, churches and museums. For an island that is only 160 miles long and 36 miles wide, the topographical and cultural diversity is vast. Its harborsides boast the locations for the film "Zorba." It is the perfect locale for some serious promenading.

A letter of apology

To the Editor:

In my eagerness to make a strong case for "private sector" support for the Cohasset school system in my PSO Phone-a-thon letter published in the Feb. 23 issue of the Cohasset Mariner, I grossly exaggerated the demise of Cohasset's Alternative School Program.

I learned quickly and pointedly that the Program is alive and well at Cohasset High School.

From what I have discovered, Alan MacDonald, the Director of the Alternative School Program, deserves not only my sincere apology, but all of our support.

School board settles 5½% raise with teachers' union

The School Committee continued the completion of the school budget with the announcement of a contract ratification by school teachers calling for a 5½ percent wage hike.

In addition the school's financial officer announced at best the board will finish the school fiscal year with a near $8,000 balance.

Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart, school finance officer, warned any operating emergencies between now and July 1 would wipe a majority of that balance away.

Last week the committee, by virtue of a 3-0 vote, approved spending $126,097 more than allocated by the Advisory Committee. The submitted budget is $4,066,335, an increase of $224,414 or 5.8 percent over last year's budget.

School Committee members were asked by Chairman Dick Conley to examine the budget and decide what areas could be cut. That subject will be discussed Monday at 8 p.m. In addition, the committee has set Monday, March 19 at 8 p.m. as the date of the required school budget public hearing.

The teachers' contract, accepted late Tuesday afternoon is a renewal of a contract for one year. The contract calls for a 5½ percent wage increase, across the board and wage increases from $9 to $10.50 for tutors and $7.50 to $9 for summer curriculum work.

Tuition payments also increase from $200 to $256 per course.

This contract is important because this is the first major labor union to settle with the town. Police and firefighting contracts have yet to be settled.

Committee member Martha Gjesteby said she will support the contract for the sake of unanimous support but made it known she was unhappy with the negotiating stance made by the committee.

In other budget-related news, Hart discussed the comparison of state versus Cohasset for per pupil expenditures. The matter was first discussed by the advisory board last week.

To set the record straight Hart called the state Dept. of Education and found for the 1981-82 fiscal year, the state average was $2,410 per pupil while Cohasset spent $2,568 or seven percent above the state average.

For the Fiscal Year 1982-83, the state average was $2,601 while Cohasset spent $2,720 or five percent above the state level.

On a per capita basis, Hart found the per pupil cost for education in the 1982-83 town budget was seven percent above the previous year.

But again on a per capita basis, the costs of protection of people and property increased 11 percent, selectmen's budget, 23 percent and health, 31 percent.

In other matters, the committe voted unanimously to extend contracts for next year to all boys' and girls basketball coaches.

The boys coaches are Head Coach Ed Minelli, Matt Salerno and Larry Schultz (junior high coach) and Girls Head Coach Bill Fallon, Jon Anderson and Claire Brady.

The suggestion was made by committee member Jack Langmaid as the committee noted the success of all the high school basketball teams.

Conley opened the meeting by saying, "This has been a good week, a fun week to be associated with this school." He also noted the success of the CHS Dramatic Club play in last week's regional drama festival held at CHS.

Hearing tested free

The Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a Hearing Clinic for all Cohasset residents. The clinic is free and will be held Friday, March 16, by appointment only. Please call the office 383-0771 or 383-0821 for an appointment.

Transportation will also be furnished if necessary.

Board of Health notice

ATTENTION PRIVATE WELL OWNERS!

The Board of Health has been advised of a seminar to be held March 14 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Massachusetts Audubon Society, 2000 Main Street, Marshfield.

The seminar will cover the following topics: Testing your well water; When should you test?; What can you learn?; How much does it cost?; Keeping hazardous household products out of your well water; and How town actions can affect private wells.

All well-users are urged to attend. If you have any questions, call the Audubon Society at 837-9400.

The Board of Health has tentatively approved opening the water table readings for March and April.

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

To a lone, hungry man the kitchen can be a thing of mystery. Turn on the faucet and the hot water has mysteriously vanished. Heat up the oven and the thermostat is out of kilter. Your pet saucepan is sitting in the sink encrusted with last night's black, hardened burned rice and so, there's one more meal to prepare in a condition of crisis. Not to worry. Anyone with a few ba ic tools can peel potatoes, slice onions, dice carrots to make a good-sized casserole over the weekend. Divided into two or three servings and frozen in small aluminum pans, you have the makings of a nourishing meal you can warm while making a salad. Even a long loaf of French bread can be frozen if sliced and buttered and warmed in your counter ovenette the last few minutes before you take out the casserole. If you are clever enough to master a computer, or repair a faulty carburetor at work, you can certainly prepare this simple tasty dish called

GROUND BEEF AND CHEESE BAKE

1 lb. ground beef, chuck or round
1 medium onion
Salt and pepper to taste
1 can mushroom soup
8 oz. noodles
1/2 c. milk
Parsley, if desired
Your favorite cheese

Chop onion and brown with beef, salt and pepper. Drain. Cook noodles per package directions. Blend soup, milk and parsley. Layer beef, cheese, noodles and repeat until all are used up. Pour mushroom-soup mixture over top. Lay on any remaining cheese. Cover casserole and bake at 350 degrees for 45 min. Can be reheated by adding small amount of milk.

Another simple way to prepare a meal when you're "batching" it is to invite a friend over. A candle in the old chianti bottle and a table set for two can look pretty inviting. You can always bake a potato or two, toss a salad and look helpless so that she may take over right then and there. With a little bit of luck, your guest might contribute a dish of her own such as Maryann Taylor's prize-winning cake. Her recipe has won a blue ribbon at the Marshfield Fair and was selected for publication in the Patriot Ledger Cookbook. Maryann is a fourth grade teacher with a masters degree in reading. Married to Len Taylor, part owner of Taylor Lumber, when she isn't teaching she works there during summer vacation. They have a son, Lennie and she has other hobbies which include cross-stitch, needlepoint and reading. Here is Maryann's prize-winning recipe for

APRICOT BRANDY POUND CAKE

3 c. all-purpose flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. baking soda
1 c. butter
3 c. sugar
6 eggs
1 c. sour cream
1/2 c. apricot brandy
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. orange extract
1/2 tsp. each rum flavoring, lemon extract
1/4 tsp. almond extract

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease and flour 10" tube pan. In one bowl, mix flour with salt and soda. Cream butter and sugar thoroughly in another bowl until fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. In a third bowl, combine sour cream, brandy, extracts and flavoring. Add to batter alternately with flour mixture. Mix only until blended. Bake at 325 for about 1½ hours. Test for doneness before this time. Cook in pan, then carefully remove and cool on wire rack.

Who knows, you may even get to like cooking. Lots of men do and Rick Dooley has taken over preparing dinner, much to the delight of his wife. At a recent Superbowl Sunday, guests at the home of the Wayne McDaniels took part in a chili bakeoff contest. Tasters voted Linda's "We're Talking Major Heat" recipe for chili the best and the following dish of Rick's the most original. He wants our readers to know that this recipe was given him by Yvonne Arthur of Hanover and is called

SAUSAGE CALABRESI

2 lb. mild and 1 lb. hot Italian sausages
1/2 c. chopped onion
2 large cloves garlic, chopped
2 cans Pastene crushed tomatoes, 24 oz. each
Parsley flakes, oregano, garlic powder, salt and pepper to taste
2 large green peppers, chopped

Bake sausages 1 hour at 350 degrees. Do not prick. Pour 1/2" olive oil in large pot. Simmer garlic cloves for 3 min., add onions, tomatoes and seasonings. Stir well and heat to near boiling for 10 to 15 min. Simmer two hours, stirring frequently. Slice sausages at an angle. Add with drippings to sauce. In a separate pan saute green pepper. Add to sauce. Simmer 30 min. more. Serve as dip with potato chips or over hamburg rolls or over pasta.

International music cast will come to Marshfield

"Up With People" is coming to Marshfield, live in concert, Thursday, April 5 and Friday, April 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Marshfield High School gymnasium. The Marshfield School Volunteers is co-sponsoring the "Up With People" program with Marshfield High School. The National Honor Society has been designated as the host club for the student body, according to MHS Principal Peter Deftos.

"Up With People" is an internationally-acclaimed two hour musical experience performed by a cast of 120 young men and women from all over the United States and the world. Marshfield's own Nancy Dane is a member of the cast. Cast members range in age from 18 to 25 years. They perform with "Up With People" for 11 months.

The cast is due to arrive in Marshfield on Tuesday evening, April 3 from the British Isles. Host families will meet cast members at the high school. Phyllis Dane, Chairperson of the host family committee, reports that anyone interested in ticket information should contact Mrs. Suzanne Allmendinger at 837-0270 or Mrs. Sally Connor at Marshfield High School at 837-1161. Senior Citizens should contact Ruth Sisson of R.S.V.P. at 746-5881; anyone interested in housing a cast member may contact Phyllis Dane at 834-4290. Already, 90 of the 120 members of the cast have been housed with host families from Marshfield and surrounding communities.

On Wednesday evening, members of the cast and host families will be treated to an "evening of appreciation" at the high school. The food service staff of the Marshfield public schools have donated their services to prepare dinner and the high school stage band and chamber singers will provide entertainment. Festivities will get underway in the upper library at 7 p.m.

High School students will be permitted to "drop in" at rehearsal sessions in the gymnasium from study halls, to listen and chat with cast members. Cast members may eat with students in the cafeteria during regular lunch periods.

Public performances will be held on Thursday and Friday evenings at 7:30 p.m. in the high school gymnasium. Ticket prices are $4 for students and senior citizens and $5 for adults.

Computer clones need not apply

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Last night about 7 o'clock, a computer called.

That's what she said she was before she launched into her dissertation.

There's darn little warmth in a call from a computer. I had already learned that last year when "Frank," another cloned conversationalist, telephoned. He said he was going to tell me how to invest my money. And since his was my first call from a taped person, I listened.

I'd heard about calls from recordings. Bad enough, I muttered then, that you call someone to be answered by a non person. Now a non person calls you.

Frank had run through a spiel on major and minor brokering opportunities. I was mildly entertained by his equity eloquence.

Last night I wasn't. The computer would have been more enticing if she'd called herself "Bubbles the Beeper" or something catchy.

The female voice said the insurance industry was driven to respond in that manner because of charges made by Ralph Nader.

That's when I hung up. There will be brief moments in my existence when I hanker for a robust debate between the insurance industry and Ralph. But I haven't encountered them yet. And neither did the computer caller.

Besides I had things to do. Among them were several phone calls I needed to make.

There's the kicker. I picked up my phone to dial and Cathy Computer was still having at it. That ticked me off. Not only did I have to have an impersonal telephone ring, I couldn't get rid of her by hanging up. She tied up my phone until she was through.

What if, I mused indignantly (and I do that well sometimes), I had a house fire, a broken leg, a leaky valve, all of which would require emergency use of my telephone.

My Ma Bell was not available to me. For that period of time it belonged to the company who created and programmed the insurance calls.

No fair. Not necessary. Not acceptable. It's like sending away an uninvited and unwelcome doorway solicitor only to have him keep knocking until he's worn out with it. A harassment of sorts.

I haven't the foggiest idea how long she talked. I gave her space while she completed her diatribe against Ralph or her ardent advocacy for the insurance companies. I don't want more of those.

Any moves to make of this world a more impersonal entity ought to be sifted out through the sieves of progress as rapidly as they're spotted.

And if people don't want to be denied a chance to chat with a computer, heaven knows there are enough Call a Clone opportunities to reach a prayer, a weather report or even, I'm given to understand, more salacious information.

For my part, I say don't call us. We'll call you. More succinctly: stay off my bloomin' phone.

Until they unsnarl the unique independence of a computer's personality, nonentities shouldn't be allowed to make phone calls. One quirk of an electronic flaw and our phones could be tied up indefinitely.

Besides if I wake in the middle of the night surging with curiosity about what Ralph Nader said that got the insurance executives, I'll let them know. If there's any trap I don't want to be victim to, it's a computer. While we've still got the edge on clones, we better make a move before someone programs them with emotions that would allow a total takeover.

Firefighters & chief feel medical board unnecessary

By Cindy Bondi

Fire Chief Martin Dooley and Capt. Richard Conley, representing Cohasset firefighters, told selectmen they were opposed to a Medical Advisory Committee overseeing town ambulance service.

The committee would asssign EMT's and would set standards for daily ambulance inspections.

Conley said, "Suggesting the comittee is an insult to EMT's. We have never had a complaint about our ambulance service and if we continue to run it we never will."

Dooley said he has received nothing but favorable comments and added improvement could be handled "in house."

Conley added, "We don't need a committee to buy an ambulance. What do we have a firechief for? Next thing you know we'll have to by a dump truck for Harold Litchfield (Highway Dept. Supervisor)."

Selectmen did not make many comments. But they did describe a few advantages of an ambulance committee.

Selectman John DeBassio said, "We have a computer now so the format for an EMT may be changed to add other things, on an accident report, like the time of day or the weather. This may not be a handicap but an asset."

The EMT Medical Service Advisory board would include a medical doctor, a nurse and a paramedic.

Conley said, "A nurse who works in, for example, orthopedics or pediatrics has never been exposed to an accident on the scene. She does not work under the same conditions that we work under."

"It is not necessary to have a Citizens Review Board or an Advisory Ambulance Committee. I don't think the Board of Selectmen realize how strong an insult that is to the integrity of the people who built up the ambulance service," said Conley.

Conley said firefighters felt that they have not done a bad job so there is no need to monitor the way the EMT's work.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said, "I don't think listing an article about EMT's meant that someone was not doing their job. We don't mean to oversee."

Selectmen have taken the recommendation, for a Medical Overseeing Committee, under advisement.
